"Not by a jugful, you don't. Keep quiet, now. You've shown me you think there's something in it, and I shall buy, anyway, now. If I'm had well, you'll hear of it, that's all. If you like to tell me all you know, I'll give you ten per cent. on what we make out of it if you put us on to a cert. That's a hundred quid out of every thousand we clear—and thundering good commission, too. You aren't putting any money in it, and you run no risk."

"Make it two hundred in every thousand."

"Not a penny more than I've said. Now then, out with it—and hurry up, for I'm busy."

Constance hesitated and then yielded.

"Very well, then. Here you are. There's malachite in that ground. I don't know how much or where it is, but young Averil knows—I taxed him with it only this morning. Don't be a fool, Harry. I met him in the Bodega, the beast. And Dwyer's buying those shares for him."

"Did he tell you so?"

"Do you take me for a fool? He—a—never mind what he is. I hate him like poison, if you want to know. But he's no fool and if he's after those shares they're worth having, and you'd better hurry up if you're going to get your hands on them."

Mortimer was at the door by this time. "Remember a hundred out of every thousand you make," she reminded him.

He went down over the stairs almost as fast as Laurence had gone on a similar occasion the week before and before the sound of his flying feet had died away, poor Constance, fille de joie and daughter of sorrow, was lying across the table, her head on [illegible] of tears.

COURAGE IN WOOING LACKED BY WIDOWERS

Timidity Characterizes Them, Writes A Woman—Wives Are To Blame —Widows Different

Laura Jean Libbey [illegible]: One can be led into the belief that there may be timid bachelors even against one's better judgment, but the imagination has to be stretched to its utmost limit to give the widower the benefit of a doubt as to his being timid or bashful in the presence of women. The "resourcefulness" of comely widows is a time honored witticism which is never allowed to grow stale because of constantly occurring examples of her prowess in ensnaring male hearts. Therefore one naturally expects a widower should be quite as proficient in the delicate art of attracting hearts.

Why the Difference?

There never was a greater error. The previous married life of the man and the woman has everything to do with establishing confidence in themselves or routing it utterly. The husband who loves fondly imbues his wife with the belief that she is the most charming, the most fascinating of women. He is never weary of thanking her most humbly for giving herself to such a plain, unattractive man as himself. Hearing this constantly she believes it and fancies she could have won any man for whom she might have set her cap. Once a widow, she is plumed with the assurance that no man will be able to withstand her blandishments. And it usually happens "as a person thinks so it is."

"Taught His Place"

But let it be understood that same sauce of appreciation has not been fed to the husband. He is given to understand in a tacit way that he is sadly lacking in all the attributes that women admire in men. He is led to believe that he is awkward of manner; that his conversation is uninteresting to the opposite sex; that she is the only woman in the world who could or would have loved him. She gives him to understand his popularity is entirely due to her and her social activities; that he would be nothing without her, absolutely nothing. She has not said so in so many words, but her every act has implied it and in proportion to her "go" he grows timid—glad to stand behind her and enjoy being her reflected light.

WHEN FORTUNES FLY

Marrying For Money May Leave Couple Very Poor

If mothers would impress upon their sons and daughters the gravity of responsibility in selecting a companion for life and teach them from their youth that there were many things that were of greater importance and more to be desired than gold, they would act wisely. The possession of money alone does not bring happiness. On the contrary, it sometimes brings great sorrow to many persons who made desperate efforts to obtain it.

It is very convenient to have money, but it is not always necessary to one's happiness if there be a proper appreciation of intelligence and true nobility of character and conscientious sense of moral responsibility. It is claimed that few people know each other when they enter into the bonds of matrimony, and the probabilities are that this is quite true. It sometimes takes a great while to realize this fact and to know what to do to remedy the mistakes which we make.

If unions are based upon no higher motives than the attaining of riches, little can be expected for the future happiness of the parties to such a union, as sore adversity is almost sure to come at some time in the lives of most people, and when fortune has taken wings they have nothing to fall back upon but disappointment and discontent, they are to be pitied. Ties should be based upon something more enduring than fortune.

Careful Peeling Helps

Peeling vegetables carelessly removes those layers in which the salts are most packed. It has been proved by experiment that the greatest proportion of salt in the potato is in the outside skin. Similarly with other vegetables, and it is unfortunate to have a thick peeling so that valuable parts are removed. It is the same situation as with brown versus white rice. In the former the outer coating and mineral materials are retained, while in the white polished rice not only are the same materials entirely removed, but the grain is covered with the same substance that we use on our toilet table—talc.

Vaseline For Scalp

Liquid vaseline may be employed on the scalp or tonic containing oil and other stimulating ingredients. For this purpose use a drop stopper and apply directly to the scalp, not to the hair. In this way the skin quickly absorbs the moisture, leaving the hair free.

To Clean a Burnt Kettle

An aluminum kettle that food has been burnt in, may be cleaned by filling it with cold water and five tablespoonsful of washing powder. Let boil slowly for about an hour, then rub with a piece of old flannel dipped in kerosene oil. Finally wash with hot suds and polish.

Baked Stuffed Fish

Chop eight onions fine and mix with half that amount of fine breadcrumbs. Season well with pepper and salt, and add two or three tablespoons of finely chopped tomatoes, to make the stuffing red. Add red pepper, and stuff the fish. Bake until tender.

To Remove Mildew

A good way to remove mildew is to let the article stand in sour milk or hot vinegar, and after standing about two hours, pour hot water on spot and put out in the hot sun.

CLEVER DARNING BAG INVENTED BY A GIRL

Dainty and Useful Creation Is Described—Folds Into Five By Five Space

A girl at a summer resort ascribed the greater part of her popularity, with the feminine part of the summer colony at least, to a diminutive darning bag which she invented herself. Once she had explained its intricacies to a friendly guest at her hotel, the fame of the bag spread, and pretty soon each woman within speaking distance was taking a paper pattern of it for future reference. She made it of ribbon, five inches wide. It required twenty-seven inches of ribbon of that width and a little less than a yard of half-inch satin ribbon to match the color of the other, or, in case of a flowered ribbon, to match the predominating flower shade.

Making Compartments

She turned in the ends of the wide ribbon an inch and a half and stitched them twice to make a half-inch casing. She then folded the ribbon in half lengthwise. The casing openings were left open; but the rest of the edges, both of the ribbon and the inch-wide heading, were carefully overcast together. This left a long, twelve-inch bag. In the bottom of this bag she dropped a five-inch whalebone, which she stitched into place with a small casing right across the bag. Three inches further up she ran another row of stitching across the bag, and another row about an inch and a half from that.

She now had a three-compartment bag. In the top she purposed to place her darning egg, thimble and scissors and maybe a spool or two of cotton. She ripped one side of the bag to get at the two lower compartments—she says if she were doing it over again she would not sew this first five inches of the lower part of the bag on the one side at all. Into the inch-an-a-half middle portion she slipped a piece of cardboard an inch and a half by five inches, which she had covered with flannel and into which her darning needles were to be stuck. A tiny tab of ribbon she fastened on the end of this so that it could be pulled out with ease.

Room For Silk Bobbins

On the open side of the lowest pocket she sewed tiny snap fasteners to keep it shut and in this she designed to keep small flat bobbins of pasteboard with silk to match every pair of silk stockings she owned. Over the stitchings she featherstitched in a silk twist to match the ribbon coloring, and she had a bag which took a very short time to make, but which she avows was a comfort every time she tucked it in her travelling bag or trunk. The whalebone kept it taut at the bottom and the bag could thus be folded three times into a five-by-five space.

GRACE FOR EVERYBODY

Let Woman Watch the Pet Cat—Many Too Fidgety

You cannot turn from an ugly duckling to a graceful swan overnight, but you can cultivate grace and repose in a remarkably short time if you will put your mind earnestly on the idea. First, I would advise studying the graceful way to walk or sit, especially of sitting, for one is less self-conscious when active. In fact, right there is the secret of grace—a lack of consciousness.

Europeans say we people of the new countries lack repose, that we are good sportswomen, graceful at work or active play, but that once we sit down we fidget, twist, fuss with our hair, and jump up again at the first chance. They are right—we are all too nervously active. Many women feel too self-conscious when sitting quietly that they are painfully and stiffly erect, or, at the other extreme, sloppy. Don't be either. Find out what positions suit you best, train yourself in private to adopt them and in public you will soon be doing it unconsciously.

Watch the way your pet cat walks; she does it better than you do. She places her feet gently, toes ahead, and walks with an easy swing forward that is the essence of grace. A cat has more repose than any human being. She never waddles, she doesn't hitch nor jerk, and she has four feet to think about, too. Watch other people's habit of sitting and make mental notes of what is awkward in them, then avoid these faults in yourself. Most of all, keep your mind fresh and full of new ideas, absorb what others say and think, be interested in the folks about you, and presently you will lose thought of self, and will cultivate the repose that means grace.

Scalloped Tomatoes

Season half a can of tomatoes with a teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of pepper and the juice of an onion. Add a cupful of finely minced celery. Butter baking dish and first put in half of the tomatoes, then a layer of buttered soda crackers sprinkled with two heaping tablespoonfuls of grated Canadian cheese. Then add the tomatoes, sprinkle the tops with crumbs and bits of butter, and bake for twenty minutes.

Chocolate Souffle

Mix a small tablespoonful of cornflour smoothly, with a gill of milk, add two ounces of white sugar and two ounces of butter. Stir well, over the fire till it boils. When cool stir in the yolks of three eggs and one and a half ounces of grated chocolate. Mix all together till quite smooth, beat up the whites to a stiff froth and stir into the mixture, put in a tin and bake in a slow oven for forty minutes.

So Lace Won't Shrink

To attach lace to the edge of a centerpiece, roll lace very closely, keeping edge to be sewed on very even. Have a pan of boiling water ready, and dip edge to be sewed on in this water two or three times, being careful not to wet all the lace. Squeeze the water out as dry as possible, then lay away to dry in the roll for a while.

Alleged Profits of The William Davies Company in 1916 on Bacon, as Indicated by Department of Labor to be Five Cents per Pound, Untrue:

Actual Profits Two-Thirds of a Cent Per Pound

THE statement issued by the Department of Labor concerning the business of The William Davies Company Limited has been given widespread circulation throughout the country and provoked public unrest.

Whatever the technical wording of the report was, the effect has been that the newspapers have published that "the profits on Bacon alone" of this Company "for 1916" were about "five millions of dollars." This interpretation of the official report is not surprising in view of certain statements that the Commissioner of the Cost of Living makes. The Commissioner is reported as saying that "There were two individual cases of profiteering in 1916 and that had these cases occurred since the passage of the cost of living Order-In-Council, he would consider it his duty to recommend that the facts be laid before the Attorney-General for consideration as to their criminality." The situation created by such erroneous and damaging statements is serious as emanating from a Government official, from whom one looks for not only accurate statements but correct conclusions.

The William Davies Company, being a private concern, has followed the practice of all private corporations, except when it made a bond issue in 1911, in that it has not published reports of its assets and liabilities or profit and loss. The present circumstance, however, in which a Government Official has led the public to false conclusions, makes it advisable for this Company, for both the public interest and its own interest, to publish particulars of its business as well as point out the error of the statement of the Government Official.

For the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, The William Davies Company bought and killed 1,043,000 head of Live Stock (Cattle, Hogs and Sheep). This, plus purchases of outside Meats, produced 160,000,000 pounds of Meats. The Company handled 6,550,000 pounds of Butter and Cheese, 5,650,000 dozens of Eggs, and manufactured 26,500,000 tins of Canned Goods.

The net profits on these were .68 cents (or two-thirds of a cent) per pound on meats, 1.04 cents on Butter and Cheese, 1.04 cents per dozen on Eggs, and .47 cents (or slightly less than one-half a cent) per tin on Canned Goods. These profits include profits on all By-Products derived from these accounts.

During the year the Company served at its retail stores 7,500,000 customers, the average purchase of each customer was 35c, and the net profit upon each sale was 5-8 of 1 cent.

The turnover of the Company from all its operations for the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, was $40,000,000. The net percentage of profit upon this turnover, after deducting war tax, was 1.62 per cent., or including war tax 3.45 per cent.

The William Davies Company has assets of $13,385,000, of which $3,865,000 is tied up in fixed investments.

To provide the necessary facilities for the increased volume of business the Company expended $750,000 in buildings and equipment during the year.

Companies of other character present no more reasonable statement of profit and loss based upon the investments made in the business.

The William Davies Company offered to the Imperial authorities, as well as to the War Office Service (which represents the Imperial authorities in Canada) to place the output of its Factory with respect to Bacon supplies, Canned Beef and Pork and Beans at the service of the authorities, on the basis of cost plus an agreed percentage. These offers were successively declined as the authorities evidently desired to purchase in the open market, and on this basis The William Davies Company has secured War Office business by open competition with the world.

Respecting the Report of the Commissioner on the Cost of Living:—

Last Winter the Commissioner, under authority of Order-in-Council, required packers to submit statements under oath for some years back and up to December 1st, 1916, of incoming stocks of Meats and the cost of such, as well as statements of outgoing product and the selling value. This Company represented in writing at the time that the information as specifically required was not in accordance with Packing House Accounting methods, and invited the Commissioner to send an Officer to the Head Office of the Company to examine the books for any information desired, and to secure a viewpoint as to the best way of collecting data which would be of use to the Government. This offer was declined, and there was nothing to do but fill in the information required as literally as we could determine it. For example, there was no recognition of the fact that a raw product may enter a factory under a specific classification and leave the factory as a finished product under some other classification.

We submitted a series of accurate figures based upon our interpretation of the official requirements which made no provision for charges of any description other than incoming freight and unloading charges to be included in the cost or to be deducted from the selling price. There was nothing in the report which could be read so as to determine a profit and loss statement. The very fact that with only a statement based upon cost of raw products and value of sales in Great Britain a Government Official has deduced "Large margins," "Profiteering" and "Criminality" if it had occurred since the passage of a recent Act, shows too dangerous a trifling and incapacity to be permitted to deal with any important situation. The statements of this Company have been treated by the author of this report as if the outgoing product was identical with the incoming product, and from the series of reports he has singled out two items—the Bacon and Egg reports—and from them deduced an erroneous "margin" which the newspapers have interpreted as "profit." The author of the inquiry shows a strange lack of even a fundamental knowledge of simple bookkeeping and a dangerous inability to co-ordinate figures. The following are specific and outstanding errors in the report:

The principal item that is causing excitement deals with cold storage Bacon. The term "cold-storage" is not defined, and the public is allowed to make its own definitions. As all Bacon in a packing house is under refrigeration it is really all cold-storage, and therefore this Company's figures of cold-storage Bacon represent the complete quantity of Bacon handled in its entire Plant, whether in freezers or in process of cure for immediate shipment. That some Companies interpreted cold-storage product as "freezer" product only is evidenced by the smallness or entire lack of figures on the Bacon list for some Plants, indicating that many Firms did not submit statements of their complete stocks, as did this Company. An Official of this Company pointed out this cold-storage distinction to Mr. O'Connor and Miss McKenna in Ottawa a few weeks ago, and the failure to make the distinction after having had it pointed out evidences lack of desire for accuracy of the real information desired.

It is true The William Davies Company, in 1916, exported 97,791,000 pounds of Bacon, but we do not know how the margin of 5.05 cents per pound is arrived at by Mr. O'Connor, as there were no figures to justify such a conclusion. The probabilities are that the margin is arrived at by taking the average cost per pound of incoming product from the average selling price per pound of outgoing product. This may be a rough way of estimating the gross margin when dealing with small figures, but when dealing with figures the size that Mr. O'Connor has to deal with, a very small fraction of a cent per pound of error makes a very important difference in the total, and one must be careful to make sure that the outgoing product is the same finished merchandise of the incoming product reported on.

Allowing it to pass, however, as a rough estimate, we wish to point out—(first)—the inquiry of the Commissioner allowed only for incoming freight and unloading charges, and made no provision whatsoever for operating charges of any kind, such as labor, curing materials, refrigeration, et cetera. Such actual charges on the 97,791,000 pounds exported were $1,162,000—or 1.2 cents per pound. This amount covered all charges up to the point of placing the Bacon on cars f.o.b. packing-house. In addition to this was the actual cost to land and sell this 97,791,000 pounds in England after leaving the packing house, which involved charges of 2.9 cents per pound—or $2,836,000. This 2.9 cents per pound included inland and ocean freight, landing charges, war and marine insurance, cables, and selling commission to agents. The ocean freight and war risk alone would make up 2.4 cents of the charge of 2.9 cents per pound. This 1.2 cents, plus 2.9 cents—a total of 4.1 cents—must be deducted from Mr. O'Connor's margin of 5.05 cents per pound, leaving a margin of .95 cents, or slightly less than a cent per pound, which still has to be reduced because of the error of premises and because of further factors which have to be considered to determine net profits.

It is quite evident some of the other packers did not show selling values in the country in which the goods were sold—a proceeding quite proper, as the forms submitted to be filled in were indefinite and ambiguous, thus permitting without charge of evasion a variety of interpretation as to the information required. It is thus possible that of all the figures submitted by the different packers that no two sets of costs and sales prices are determined at the same common point. It is this difference of interpretation of what was required that accounts for the difference of the alleged "margin" made by the different companies. Common conclusions, however, have been drawn by the author of the report from varying bases of premises.

The figures of the Egg business were submitted on the same basis as Bacon, and similar deductions must be made.

(Second)—The above margin is further reduced in that the author of this inquiry singled out the Bacon figures as an item in which the selling price shows an alleged improper advance over cost, but he did not give us credit for the statements of other products, of which figures were submitted, the selling prices of which were under cost. The reason of this was that through failure to inquire the Department entirely overlooked the fact that product may come in as pork and, through the process of manufacture, go out as Bacon, or, in another instance, enter the factory as beef and go out in the form of canned meats; for example: much of the product which came in as pork, and which was entered on the pork sheet submitted to the Commissioner—about which he makes no mention—was cured and left the factory in the form of Bacon, and was, therefore, entered on the outgoing side of the Bacon sheet—the result is that the Bacon sales are increased by this amount over the incoming stocks of Bacon, and, likewise, the sheet showing sales of pork is reduced by the amount that went out in the form of Bacon. If the Department takes one set of figures that show favorable to the Company they should take another set of figures that show unfavorable, as the principle in either case is the same, and failure to do so looks as if the author of the report was exercising more enthusiasm than sound judgment in his investigations.

(Third)—It is queried in the report, that "if the margin of 3.47 cents," alleged to have been made in 1915, "was satisfactory, why was it necessary to show increased margin in 1916?" Assuming again for the moment the soundness of the premises in asking such a question based on an erroneous "margin," it will be found that the increased margin is chiefly absorbed in increased ocean freight rates and war risk insurance in 1916, of which apparently the author of the report was in ignorance

The Company does not challenge either the legal or moral right of the Government to investigate business enterprises when public interest directs such an investigation should be made. If an investigation of the packing and meat business is ordered, the Company will place at the disposal of the Government not only the data it would be required to supply under Order-in-Council directing that inquiry be made, but will place the experience of its officers at the disposal of the investigating committee, if it is considered they can render any service which will be of value. The Company has not now—nor at any time during the fifty years of its operation—anything to conceal in method or practice of carrying on its business. It does, however, claim the right to conduct its export business without abusive comment from Government civil servants—especially when the conclusions drawn from the data asked for are improper and false.

One of Canada's chief export industries is the packing business. It is essential to the live stock industry, and, along with other export industries, it maintains the financial stability of this country and should, providing it is on a sound basis, receive encouragement and not slanderous abuse. In view of the publicity given to the report of the Commissioner on the cost of living, the Company demands the same publicity in having an official Government investigation of this report to determine the truthfulness or untruthfulness of its conclusions. We do not seek public consideration as a company, but we do say that untruthful official statements, or statements the effect of which is to create an untruh, adversely affect the live stock industry of this country, which is so valuable and essential a wealth-producing power and, in the long run, are harmful to the very people that the statement seeks to benefit.

If the passing out of existence of a corporation such as The William Davies Company, or if nationalization of packing houses would materially and permanently reduce food prices, then in view of the present world tragedy it ought to be consummated without delay. The fact of the matter is, however, that with millions of people in Europe turning from producers into consumers because of war, and the tremendous destruction of food products incident to war, there is no remedy for the high prices of food while such conditions last, except the remedy of thrift and increase of production.

Long before there was talk of a Food Controller in the United States or Canada The William Davies Company urged the Government at Ottawa, in writing, to appoint a Food Controller with full power to do what he saw fit, as we realized at that time the upward tendency in the price of food commodities unless checked by official effort. At the most a great deal cannot be done in reducing food prices while currency is inflated and until the scale of prices of all kinds of commodities declines also. What can be done can only be done by a Food Controller. We wish to point out that nothing at all can be accomplished unless the data secured are accurately and clearly made and the deductions therefrom sound. Only public harm arises from dangerous incompetency in the haphazard collection and careless use of important figures.

As far as The William Davies Company is concerned this terminates all public statements of the Company, and it will pay no more attention to speculative and haphazard statements made either by newspapers or civil servants. The only further statement that will be made will be at an official investigation.

RESTAURANTS ASKED TO REDUCE SUPPLY OF MEAT AND BREAD

Food Controller Hanna Issues First Definite Regulation With Regard to Use of Necessaries.

The first definite regulations to emanate from the Food Controller, Hon. W. J. Hanna, have been made public. Mr. Hanna's statement follows:

"Many suggestions have been made and much information has been furnished to the committee, and, as a result of the consideration of these suggestions and information, it would appear that there is a widespread demand for regulations to be made covering all public eating places (a term which will require definition), and that these regulations shall include at least the following:

That no beef shall be served on Tuesday or on Friday.

That no bacon shall be served on Tuesday or on Friday and that no bacon shall be served except at breakfast on other days.

That at every meal there shall be supplied some substitute for white bread; for instance—corn, bread. oatcake, and brown or graham bread; or in the alternative that on certain days of the week no white bread whatever be served.

That a printed notice shall be prominently displayed to the effect that the public should avoid all waste and should conserve the greatest possible amount of food, and, to that end, should eat less bread and other wheat products. and should substitute, in their seasons, green vegetables, fruits, and other perishable products for foods that may be stored for later use or exported.

Requiring that no more than two courses may be served for breakfast and luncheon, or three courses for dinner with courses to be defined.

This latter proposition, while urged from different quarters. is full of difficulties; for instance, it would appear not to be an easy matter to satisfactorily define courses.

As regards the general public, printed cards will be distributed setting forth the necessities of the situation. and asking every citizen to sign a form of pledge (furnished with the cards) to reduce considerably his or her consumption of bread, beef. and bacon, and, at the very least, to observe in his or her own home the regulations which may finally be determined on for public eating houses.

It may also be thought advisable to give to each householder signing the pledge a card for display in his or her window announcing that he or she has done so; something like the cards said to have been adopted with success in England and which are being adopted in the United States.

The committee propose to hold meetings in several of the larger cities at which representatives of the various classes affected will be asked to express their views. After hearing what is said at such meetings the committee will report their final recommendations.

BULGARIA MAY LAY DOWN ARMS

FERDINAND NOW REALIZES HE MADE A FATAL MISTAKE.

Paris, July 23.—Information coming from Switzerland report active underground work of emissaries of King Ferdinand, who seems to be realizing finally that he made a mistaken choice by uniting his fortunes with those of the Central Empires. Counting on the indulgence of and the too generous confidence shown towards him by members of the Entente powers before he dragged Bulgaria at the chariot wheels of Germany the Bulgarian Czar is now putting out his tentacles in an effort to ascertain what it will be possible to save from the ruin which the arch intriguer now begins to understand is imminent. He even insinuates that a separate peace is possible, if as he has the audacity to suggest, the aggrandizement of Bulgaria can be insured, even in the base defeat of the Central Empires. He is now trying to prove that he threw in his lot with Germany and made an alliance with an age long enemy—Turkey—only because he feared Russia's protectorship of Constantinople and consequent irruption of the south Balkan States. Since the Russian revolution renders that impossible he vainly hopes to persuade the Entente that his friendship is still worth having.

FOR CHEAPER FOOD

London, July 23.—A reduction of 25 per cent in the price of bread at an early date was announced by Baron Rhondda, food controller. A graduated reduction in the price of meat for the army and civilians, which by January will mean a 30 per cent. decrease from the amount now paid. also was announced.

DEMOLISHED THE CHIMNEY

Residence of John Miller Struck by Lightning.

During the electric storm about 5:30 Saturday evening lighting struck the house of Mr. John Miller. 22 Wolsley Street, demolishing the chimney to the roof. Fortunately the bolt swerved off and no damage was done below the roof. Mr. Miller was in the house at the time working at the range. He did not feel any shock, but says that the report was as loud as a cannon and he expected to find everything in ruins.

TO PROHIBIT PACKING KEEPABLE COMMODITIES

A letter to the local trade from one of the largest canning companies states that the Washington Government has prohibited the packing of beans and other "keepable" food commodities in tins in order to conserve the supply of tin for the canning of perishable goods. and for military purposes. The letter further stated that the Ottawa Government has been approached by Washington with the purpose of getting a like prohibition in Canada, and that, as the supply of tin came from the United States there was a probability that an order to that effect would be forthcoming from Ottawa in the near future.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

STUDY THE CHILDREN

When children dislike study, there is often eye trouble that is not known. Nerve energy is used to overcome the eye-strain, which is bad for the entire system of the growing child. Dr. Fowler can remove this strain and render the child's study a pleasure that is done gladly and willingly. Let Dr. Fowler examine the child's eyes and be sure of their condition.

CAPT. WARD WRITES END

Jarman killed by shell-burst (an unlucky one). his father lives in Baircroft. All the fellows are going home to Canada with exception of one, they say for short time and back again, possibly to get married, etc. Well, now, as I knew it was impossible for me to get married and that I would certainly be unsettled till this d—— war is finished I stayed here to see it out. I would like to go home, but then coming away again would be as bad as first time and then I'll save all my big yarns till the finish? Arthur Howson of Peterborough, graduated same year as me. was with the lot of fellows. I saw him in London but did not give him any message home as—well—I don't swing on his gate. These fellows are sailing end of this week, I think.

Well. am now in "Blighty" England, waiting to get out of England. I asked to go back to France but all the Yankie Med. Officers are for there, so me and the English blokes for somewhere else, maybe East Indies, East Africa, India. Mesopotamia. Salonika or Egypt. I have asked to go to Salonika if I cannot go to France, anywhere out of England; it is too tame and if I must form fours, etc., and teach me to do it I want a rifle to do it properly. If I don't get medical or surgical here I may as well be fighting.

At present, however, I am just lying low and watching what I can snap on to. Nearly all officers (medical). nearly 150 at this camp, are called up under conscription scheme, are. therefore, lieutenants not having twelve months service, so being a young kid captain over a lot of older men and conscripts is not what I like so I'm off first chance.

Oh. I forgot to tell you that Capt. K. E. Millan, Kingston, I think, was in same division as me. got Military Cross; also three other fellows out of the twenty-one got M.C.'s. Hector McKenzie. my old room mate, mentioned in despatches. I saw Waite in England this time, he was on sick leave here. He is quite fit now and off again to No. 7 Base Hospital, Queen's, in France; has a good safe job, good work also. I've met a lot of fellows here this time who I know or have met out in France.

Well, now, this is a jumbled letter, about as good as none at all. but will get a better one off next time.

Am now sitting on the ground in a Bell tent and my back is getting cramped.

Sorry to hear about Arthur's "dip." Will be getting a lot of old letters answered now. I sent father a card on March 3 and mother a card on May 11 to reach somewhere near her birthday on 8th. Did you get them?

I hope you people do not worry as you may take it as father says, "no news is good news always." I've been away from shells so long now I have quite forgotten the sound of them, so you see I'm safe on English soil.

Will write again soon.

EVERETT.

SATURDAY'S STORM PLAYED HAVOC WITH WIRE SYSTEM EVERYWHERE

Chief Howard Busy Far Into Night Repairing Damage—New Car Justifies Itself.

The storm on Saturday night caused a great deal of damage to the wires of the Utilities Commission, the fire alarm system and the Bell Telephone Co. The lights of the city were out for a few moments in nearly every section, and in the East City it was some time before the service was continued. The fire department was called up numerous times after the storm by citizens reporting wires down which were dangerous to their lives, and the chief's motor car was kept busy making the calls and temporarily repairing the damage.

From the time the storm started until nine o'clock the "Little Red Devil" was kept on the go, taking care of dangerous wires as well as keeping the fire alarm wires in working order. The chief trouble was found on Lock Street, where the alarm wires were burned for two blocks by coming in contact with the street railway service. A temporary repair was made at night, and the new line was installed this morning. The advantage of the motor car in the fire hall was demonstrated on Saturday night. If the horses had made all the calls sent in they would have been unfit for fire duty.

Quite a number of trees were damaged by the lightning. and a few of the weaker ones lost limbs owing to the fury of the wind. Some of the gardens also suffered by the severity of the wind, which blew tomato plants and flowers down. In the country numerous fields of grain were laid over. but it is thought that the breeze of yesterday, combined with the heat will enable a lot of it to rise.

So far nothing of a serious nature to buildings or persons has been reported.

Hot Water Heater Causes Fire Alarm

Department Had a Run to the Residence of Mr. Robt. Hicks.

Shortly after ten o'clock last evening an alarm of fire was sent in to the fire hall and the brigade turned out very promptly.

The trouble was found at the residence of Mr. Robt Hick's, 270 Charlotte Street, where a large crowd had gathered. attracted by an immense volume of smoke around the lower part of the house. No lights were visible. and it was thought that no one was at home. but after the bell had been rung Mr. and Mrs. Hicks were aroused and were appraised of the alarm.

An investigation brought to light the fact that the maid had started a fire in the hot water heater in the basement and the heavy air made the draught very poor. and yhat what smoke was caused by the kindling hung in the basement and close to the ground on the outside.

There was not the slightest damage done, but the occupants of the house were badly frightened.

Not The Answer Expected

Closeman was feeling his way before definitely engaging the physician famous for his high charges.

"Pardon me, doctor," he said. "but do you—er—take off anything for cash?"

"Certainly," was the reply. "What would you like taken off—a hand or a foot.

34 SILVER TEASPOONS AND OTHER ARTICELS IN STOMACH.

New York, July 23.—The New York Herald prnts the followng despatch from its Philadelphia correspondent:

For several weeks Mrs. Joseph Quinlan has been mystified by the disappearance of several articles from her household. She changed servants half a dozen times, but the articles, such as silver spoons and pieces of household hardware, continued to be missed. Recently her husband became ill, and was sent to the Philadedphia Hospital, and there the surgeons cut open his stomach and removed the following articles:

Thirty-four silver teaspoons.
One alcohol cigar lighter and chain.
One padlock.
Twelve screen door hooks.
One glass medicine dropper.
Six ten-penny nails.
Thirty-six carpet tacks.
Thirteen metal buttons.
Six safety pins.
Forty pieces printers' type.
Thirty-two coins.
Four souvenir medals.
Nneteen screws, assorted sizes.
Two hundred and forty-seven pebbles.

Disordered nerves were responsible for the unusual appetite which caused Mr. Quinlan to go on a hardware diet.

After the 452 foreign and undigested objects had been removed from Mr. Qunlan's stomach the physicians said he had a chance to recover.

SUNDAY STORY OF WAR

The Sunday official statement from London says patrol encounters last night northwest of St. Quentin and south of Lens resulted in favor of the British, who advanced their line slightly southeast of Monchy Le Preux. Aviators brought down three and drove down six German machines. Four British machines are missing. British aviators bombed many German positions

The Germans Saturday night continued furious attacks on the Aisne front and attacked on the Verdun front but were everywhere repulsed by the French with great loss.

Korniloff, who led the advance on the Halicz-Stanislau line has been appointed commander-in-chief of Russia's southwestern front.

Between fifteen and twenty-one enemy airplanes appeared over Felixstowe and Harwich at eight o'clock Sunday morning, dropping some bombs. The casualties at Felixstowe and Harwich so far are eight killed and twenty-five injured.

LOCAL AUTOISTS HOLD PICNIC AT SOUTH BEACH

Over One Hundred Members of Association Take Part in Outing---Lightning Struck Tree in Midst of the Party.

The Peterboro Automobile Association held the first family outing of the 1917 season on Saturday afternoon to South Beach, and it was very successful in every way. About twenty members of the association took their cars, and a few others who were not members joined in the run to Young's Point. It was several years since the members of the Association had organised an outing, the first one having been held at Hiawatha. This trip was much enjoyed as was the outing to South Beach.

Some of the parties partook of basket lunch, while others enjoyed the menu prepared for the occasion by Mine Host Brooks, of the South Beach Hotel.

The storm that raged over the city on Saturday afternoon caught the tourists, and some of them got a severe drenching. and it also caused a postponement of the ball game.

The electric storm that accompanied the rain played some queer antics, and gave a considerable scare to not a few of the cottagers as well as the visitors. Lightning struck a tree about 80 feet from the hotel, and Mrs. Pulkinghorn was sitting under it, and while shocked, was not injured. Mr. Soden who was near by with his party narrowly escaped, while the children and others that were in bathing at the beach were considerably frightened by feeling an electric shock in the water Fortunately no one was injured. and the only damage in the neighborhood was to trees.

A program of races was run off for the entertainment of those present, consisting of races for men and ladies, races for girls under 14, under 10, and under 5. The races for boys were for those under 14, under 8, and under 5. There was also a consolation race for the girls and boys of seven and under

The members present on the run were: Messrs. R. H. Turner, E. W. Borbridge, H. J. Lundgren, J. P. Pulkinghorn, W. C. Campbell, E. G. Hiland, R. Dobie, A. H. Stratton, C. E. Canfield, W. R. Breyfogle. L. W. Jeffries, J. A. McKone, C. F. Sowden, A. F. Grant, S. C. Gibbs, R. M. Waddell, A. D. Jardine, H. T. McMcFadden. Altogether there were about 100 present at the outing.

It is the intention of the association to arrange a Thursday afternoon run in the near future.

Boy Scout Professorship.

In order to make the preparations of boy scout leaders and scout masters a regular feature of the curriculum of Teachers' college, New York city, the board of trustees accepted the offer made by Cleveland H. Dodge and Francis Phelps Dodge, presented through the Boy Scouts of America by the chief executive, James E. West, to maintain in Teachers' college for a certain number of years a provisional professorship in scouting and recreational leadership.

Shadow Tag.

This is a game to play when the sun shines. One person is chosen to be "it" and must run after the others. He does not have to tag them, however. He must only step on the shadow of one, calling that player's name at the same time. When he succeeds that player must change places with him.

A Beautiful Visitor.

There are several species of the woodpecker family, with which young people in the country and even the city are familiar. They are the flicker, the downy woodpecker and the red headed woodpecker. All are handsome birds, and they make a lot of noise pecking at the bark of trees and also cutting holes for nests. The bird pictured is a young red headed woodpecker, one of the handsomest of the tribe.

Liberty Sartorially Expressed

If the American's throat were not dry and hoarse from cheering the men in khaki it would give at least three medium sized cheers for the Governor of Oklahoma, a person bearing the democratic name of Robert Lee Williams. This energetic executive has shied at the headachy plug hat and the stifling frock coat on an afternoon when the mercury sought to emulate the admired Lufbery in attaining astounding elevations.

The independent Williams—who has been chief justice of the Supreme court of Oklahoma in his time and who knows the law—maintains that he and others who have been besought to welcome envoys from Belgium have a constitutional right to appear in attire that is suitable to the season and the temperature, such as palm beach suits and panama hats. If he must wear the odious stovepipe and the enveloping Prince Albert he declines to appear.

Since the notorious parents of the human race adopted the relatively ostentatious customs of fig leaves it has been customary to "dress for the occasion," particularly if one occupies a conspicuous place in the common wealth's economy. Without running the gamut of the ages, one may recall the typical costumes of congressmen – formerly recognized as such— the long black coat with baggy trousers the broad brimmed black felt hat the flowing tie hanging from the open neck collar that displayed the statesmanly Adam's apple when the congressional lips and the congressional chin dropped eloquence and tobacco juice.

It is pleasant to note that common sense and comfort are banishing the martyrdom of funny habiliments for prominent people—and others also. For example one, recalls the awful shakes that accompanied the heavy woolen, gold braided uniforms and white cotton gloves worn by exalted militiamen twenty-five years ago. The useful khaki has superseded that ridiculous attire for potential fighting men.

So with civilian garb. True democracy permits a democrat to wear substantially what he pleases, so long as he does not transgress the rules of modesty. Democracy, therefore, should wear appropriate dress in summer. If democracy may appear reasonably dignified in palm beach and panama, why may it not so attire itself. The immortal Williams of Oklahoma is a veritable liberator.

Fifteen per cent. of the Government service in Ottawa, or 1,750 in all, may lose their jobs. This is a result of the recommendation of the Public Service Committee of the National Service Board, which has been confirmed formally by an order-in-Council. The committee believed the service could be reduced twenty per cent. without affecting its efficiency, by proportionately increasing the hours of service, but to be on the safe side, recommended 15 per cent.

No More Hot Dogs?

President Tener of the National league is to assist the government in the conservation of food. Does this mean he will put a stop to the sale of red hots and popcorn at all the parks around his circuit?

It may mean, too, that every club in the league will have to eat and travel like Barney Dreyfuss' Pirates, who, to hear Jimmy Callahan tell it, have to ride around the country in day coaches and eat out of a shoe box.

There may be something in feeding a ball club well, and letting it travel in style. The Giants always put up at the best hotels in town and go to the ball park in taxis, and they are leading the league. However, the Cubs say it's the umps that do it.

Howe About This?

Larney Lichtenstein has received so many entries to his wrestling show that he figures it will take a month to work off all the bouts. Some of those 300 pound champions will come out bantam-weights if this August is as warm as last.

Dog days come in August, which is probably why so many people growl about the weather.

Hopeless Task.

No wonder the Drama league has such a time elevating the stage when men like Mr. Lichtenstein persist in crowding it with 300 pound Greeks and Turks and Bulgarians.

They Ought to be Beaned.

If anything were needed to show the Hohenzollerns are not good sports, one could call attention to the sinking of the Kansan, which was carrying $8,000 worth of baseballs and bats over to France.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

Probably der kaiser was afraid somebody might knock a home run over the barbed wire fence on the west front and a United States soldier would go after it and discover some military secret the Heinies have cooked up.

The big German military secret probably is that die soldaten are tired of living on chemical kraut and wooden spare-ribs, and are looking forward to the day when they can get out the pinochle deck of an evening and meld a few hundred aces without being blown up.

Served Him Right.

A man was fined $50 for smoking a cigar in Zion City. Probably it had been given to him by a fight manager.

LAMENT

It would be fine
If every line
I wrote would rhyme like this;
I'd take my pen
In hand, and then
Just write and never miss.

Most often I
Just sit and sigh
Because my lines won't rhyme;
I fume and fuss
And swear and cuss
And have a wretched time.

Any jobless pitchers around? If so, let them write a postcard at once to Branch Rickey, president of the Cardinals, who is looking for bright young men to go to work on the mound for his team.

Harry Wolverton is looking about for a nice team to manage. Harry is some manager. The fact that he was recently released from the management of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast League is certainly no reflection on his ability, seeing that that club was in the lead when he severed his connection with it. It was just a matter of a financial misunderstanding between himsel and Owner Berry.

Needham has certainly got his Bears well trained, and they are keeping well out in front of the other clubs of the International League. However, there are several other teams that have some reserve pep in them, and Newark had better keep plugging away for all it is worth, lest some "dark horse" suddenly dash up and snatch away the laurels just about the time the race is almost over.

Jimmy Callahan, former manager of the Pirates, is enjoying himself these days on his salary, which he receives without effort on his part. He's being paid in full until his contract expires on Oct. 15th. Come around, Jimmy, and we'll let you take us out to lunch.

Grouchy Gus says: "Human beings are funny things. Rariden of the Giants punched the Cincinnati groundkeeper in the eye during the recent McGraw-Byron fracas, and writes a letter saying he made a mistake. Now, I suppose that eye feels better."

Leslie, latest recruit in the ranks of the Cubs, is warming the bench for the present, but that should not discourage him. It was to be foreseen when he was bought from the Waco club of the Texas League that he would have to wait a while before getting into action as a firstbaseman. It's no reflection on him, for all who know him attest to the excellence of his game. But Red Merkle is going very strong at present, and it's best to leave well enough alone.

Sooner or later, and very likely sooner, Lee Maggee and Elmer Miller will receive their passports to the minor leagues. These two outfielders have been great disappointments to the fans as well as to the owners of the Yankees. The latter team may, therefore be considered open for a deal.

Every fan's sympathy goes out to Frank Schulte, who has suffered one misfortune after another this year. Before the season opened his mother died. Not long afterwards his brother was killed in an accident. Then followed the destruction of his home by fire. And, finally, when he thought he was about through with the hard luck stuff, Wildfire broke his rib, which puts him out of the game for over two months.

Handing a Bouquet to Harry Davis.

One of the best players who ever swung a bat or shook his fist at the umpire (when that gentleman's back was turned, because it costs money if you do it while he's looking) was Harry Davis, one-time star of the Athletics. He was born at Philadelphia July 18, 1873, and first played professional ball with the Providence team in 1894. It is told of Davis that he is the only player on record who ever stole first base. This is how it happened: Davis was playing with the Athletics, who were at bat. Davis was on first base, and Dave Fults on third. Davis started to steal second for the purpose of drawing a throw and permitting Fultz to score. The throw was intercepted and returned home so rapidly that Fults was unable to score, and barely managed to get back to third, Davis reaching second. The Athletics needed a run badly, and Davis, to the amazement of the crowd, dashed back to first base. He got there, too, thus clearly stealing first. There was a wrangle, but there were no rules covering such a play, and it stood. On the next pitched ball Davis dashed to second, and while the effort was being made to get him Fultz scored. Davis certainly had a bright and busy bean.

On July 18, 1891, a record was made for the greatest number of innings played without a score being made. It was a game between Fargo and Devil's Lake (N. D.) teams. It went to 2[illegible] innings, score 0-0.

Pugilistic Annals.

1905—Jack Johnson won on a foul rfom Sandy Ferguson in six rounds at Chelsea, Mass.

1911—Knockout Brown knocked out Eddie Kenny in two rounds at Albany, N. Y.

Misunderstood

Upon the recent death of a western town of a politician who, at one time, served his country in a very high legislative place a number of newspaper men were collaborating on an obituary notice.

"What shall we say of the former senator?" asked one of the men.

"Oh, just put down that he was always faithful to his trust!"

"And," queried a cynical member of the group, "shall we mention the name of the trust?"

HAROLD ECCLES

Dr. Carmichael: It was found that the blows had rendered the man unconscious, and that he had suffered a concussion of the brain, due, no doubt to the blow on the jaw near the jugular vein.

Dr. Harvey stated that it would be impossible to tell for twenty-four hours just how serious the injuries are.

From what could be learned from people on the outside the wounded man must have been lying in an unconscious condition on the floor of the incinerator for over an hour.

The police are investigating the causes that led up to the scrap between the two men.

Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, when notified of the condition of the man, instructed Chief Howard to render any assistance possible.

IN THE POLICE COURT.

Various Matters Before Magistrate This Morning.

At the Police Court this morning A. Barbeau was charged with driving his rig on the wrong side of the street. The offence was admitted, and a fine of $5 registered.

A citizen, charged with being intoxicated, entered a plea of guilty. The minimum fine of $10 was imposed.

A case of more or less interest was that of a charge laid by Inspector Stewart against a resident who is on the prohibited list, and, according to the evidence of Inspector Stewart, was drunk on Murray street lastt Wednesday. The defendant did not appear when his name was called this morning, but at the request of Mr. F. D. Kerr, who appeared for him, the case was enlarged until Wednesday morning.

The latter case is said to be one of the first to be entered under the new regulations which prevents the importing or receiving of liquor in any manner whatsoever when the officials so order.

DESTROY TOMATO WORMS

Look out for the large horn or tomato worm. If left unmolested he will do a great deal of harm in a few days.

As he is a chewer, he is easily poisoned by spraying the foliage, but as many hesitate to use anything of a poisonous nature on tomato vines, it is best to hunt out the worm and destroy him. His tracks are easily followed.

What appears a saving in price is actually an extravagance when you buy ordinary, poor tea. Salada yields twice as many cups to the pound, hence its economy.

THOMAS ISAAC, FENELON FARMER, KILLED AT WORK

WAS DRIVING HAY RAKE, AND IN FALLING OFF BROKE HIS NECK.

Fenelon Falls, July 24.—While haymaking on Friday afternoon, Thomas Isaac, a farmer of Cameron Point, Fenelon Township, was thrown off the machine on which he was riding, and his neck was broken, causing instant death. The horses became frightened and bolted, but only ran a couple of yards when they collided with the fence. Mr. Isaac was 64 years of age and is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

His two sons, who were working in the field with him, ran at once to his assistance, but found him already dead. The pole of the hay fork broke and ran into the ground, which caused Mr. Isaac to be thrown. He received a blow behind the ear, which either broke his neck or caused concussion of the brain.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. D. Burnett, of Baddow, and Miss Leta Isaac at home, as well as two sons, Rufus and William, also at home.

Mrs. Robt. Graham, of Verulam, and Miss Sarah Isaac (at home) are sisters while Geo. D. Isaac, of Cameron Point and James J. Isaac, of Lindsay, are brothers.

The deceased was one of the best known and most popular farmers of the district and had resided at his present farm over fifteen years. He was born near Brampton, but later moved to Hampton and at one time resided at Zion, Fenelon, before taking up his present farm.

From 190 points in the three Provinces heard from, it is gathered that seventy-five per cent. of the crop is in head in Manitoba and Alberta, and a little better than fifty per cent. in Saskatchewan.

BLOOD AND IRON IF NEEDED TO SAVE RUSSIA

Premier Kerensky Announces New Policy of the Government.

SITUATION MOST SERIOUS.

Two Members of the Duma Have Been Taken Into the Cabinet.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, July 24. — A policy of blood and iron will be put into effect, if needed, to save Russia, by the government of Premier Kerensky. In an interview today the Premier said:

"Relying upon the confidence of the masses and the army, the government will save Russia and Russian unity by blood and iron, if argument and reason, honor and conscience, are not sufficient. The situation at the front is very serious and demands heroic measures, but I am convinced that the organism of state is sufficiently vigorous to be cured without partial amputation."

M. Effremov and M. Baeychnikow, both members of the Duma representing the Progressive party, have been appointed respectively Minister of Justice and Minister of Public Aid.

Their mangled bodies were hurled sixty yards. The view of the approaching express was shut off by a westbound freight.

PRISONERS ARE TAKEN IN RAIDS BY THE BRITISH

Reports From the Battle Line Show New Allied Successes.

FRENCH REPULSE THE FOE

Germans Meet With Heavy Losses in All Their Attacks.

London, July 24.—Last night's official report says we captured thirty prisoners in successful raids west of Havrincourt, east of Voimelles and west of Holebeck.

Paris, July 24.—The night was marked by a violent bombardment in the region northwest of Braye-en-Laonneis. The enemy made two attempts to reach our lines. He was driven back each time. In the morning a detachment of Spock troops caught under our fire north of Sancy was forced back to the trenches whence it set out after suffering serious losses and leaving prisoners in our possession.

Further east the enemy attacked between Cerny and Ailles without result. Artillery fighting continues violent in the sector in front of Craonne plateau. On the remainder of the front there was intermittent cannonading.

During the night German airplanes dropped several bombs on Nancy and nearby. There were no victims.

LONDON WILL HOLD SERVICE

TO COMMEMORATE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE WORLD-WIDE WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 24.—To commemorate the third anniversary of Britain's entry into the Great War, August Fourth, a service of intercession is to be held here attended by the King and Queen and at a big meeting in the capital the Prime Minister will inaugurate the work of the National War Aims committee in an important speech in which he is expected to outline as closely as possible the war aims of the Allies.

CANADIAN AIRMEN SILENCE BIG GUN THAT WAS SPREADING RUIN FOR MILES BEHIND LINE

Canon Was Throwing Shells Each Weighing Three Quarters of a Ton---Towns and Villages Saved From Destruction---Air Fighting More Active Than Ever.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters, July 24.—The artillery duel stil continues on this sector of the western front by day and night. The amount of munitions used must be prodigious. The enemy, who for some time past has husbanded all the shells of above six inches calibre, presumably because of his increasing scarcity of war material, began on Sunday to bombard points fully twenty miles back from our front with a fourteen inch gun which throws a shell weighing about three quarters of a ton. Our airmen quickly located the monster. The gun position was raided by aeroplanes on Sunday afternoon, when a number of 230 pound bombs were dropped upon it. Several were seen to fall close to the gun which has not been fired since.

Airplanes Are Active.

The gallant lads of the aerial service will thus save towns and villages far behind the front from bombardment with shells each of which is capable of grinding a house to powder. They have had more than their usual share of fighting in the air. German airmen have been making special efforts to destroy our artillery observation balloons and in protecting them the aviators of our fighting squadrons are kept busy. British airmen engaged five German fighting planes on Sunday and destroyed one. The pilot got away himself without injury.

The battles during the past few days are summed up in the official statement last night that—"German aeroplane activity completely failed to stop our reconnaissances, photographic and artillery work in spite of all the enemy's efforts."

Under these conditions every effort made by the enemy to repair the damage done by our sustained bombardment is immediately disclosed. The raid of yesterday on the German dugouts along the Avion-Merlourt railway is now known to have been even more successful than the first reports indicated. The number of prisoners taken was fifty one instead of sixty but the enemy's casualties in killed and wounded were extremely heavy. Our losses were light.

Two German attempts at raiding the north end of our line last night failed. The raiders suffered heavily from our machine gun fire which was promptly turned on.

SIR CLIFFORD SIFTON WARNS NATION AGAINST LAURIERISM

If Sir Wilfrid Becomes Premier There Will be no Conscription and War Work Will Stop---Senate Urged to Pass Military Service Bill.

Ottawa, July 24.—"If Sir Wilfrid Laurier is returned to power in the approaching election two-thirds of his followers in Parliament will be pledged to the hilt against conscription and pledged to the hilt against anything but a perfunctory and ineffective participation in the war," says Sir Clifford Sifton in an open letter which he has addressed to Hon. Hewitt Bostock, the Liberal leader in the Senate. Sir Clifford reviews the situation, which must be regarded by Mr. Bostock and his colleagues when the Military Service Bill is brought before the Upper Chamber. The overwhelming importance of the crisis, he declares, absolutely obliterates all considerations of persons or parties. He expresses regret that Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not agree to an extension of the term of the Canadian Parliament, and that the Liberal leader has determned to force an election with conscription as the issue. As Sir Clifford sees the situation, an effort is being made to unite behind a solid Quebec all the elements of the population who are hostile or lukewarm in regard to the war together with certain of the larger business interests who feel that conscription will interfere with their operations.

Dictate Liberal Policy

If that combination succeeds, he says, the anti-war party of Quebec will dictate Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy as it is directing his policy now. There will be no conscription, no recruiting in Quebec, and, under these circumstances, it will be impossible to raise troops in other parts of Canada. The decision of the present issue, declares Sir Clifford, will determine "whether Canada is a nation dominated and held together by a national will and a national sense of honor, or is a helpless aggregation of sectional communities held together only by consideration of sectional interest." In only one way, he concludes, can the situation be met, "by the formation of a union Government, administered on non-party lines, who will straightway appeal for a mandate to the people of Canada and who can consistently be supported by every element in the population that is loyal to the cause."

HUNS ADVANCE IN GALICIA

ARE MOVING FORWARD ON A FRONT OF 155 MILES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 24.—German forces in Galicia are advancing from the River Sereth to the wooded Carpathians, over a front of 155 miles, says a German army headquarters statement. Several German divisions, the statement adds, report that they have each taken three thousand prisoners. Numerous heavy Russian guns have been captured and also much booty.

LEFT TO ACTING MAYOR DUNCAN

Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie has issued a proclamation asking that the citizens fittingly recognize Saturday, August 4th, the third anniversary of the declaration of war. He asks that the people should at that time reaffirm their belief in the righteousness of the cause for which we are fighting, and their inflexible determination to continue the struggle until victory has been achieved.

It is urged that public meetings be called throughout the province on the date mentioned for the purpose of stimulating the devotion and patriotism of the people and for the passing of appropriate resolutions embodying these sentiments.

At the Board of Works meeting last night the matter of taking action along these lines was broached by Acting Mayor Duncan, and it was unanimously decided to leave the matter entirely in his hands for whatever action his judgment advises.

REVIEW BUYS PLANT OF DEFUNCT MORNING TIMES

Bid for Outfit Has Been Accepted by Administrator's Solicitors --- Is Now Best Equipped Office Outside of Toronto.

The Review Printing Company yesterday completed a deal by which it becomes the owner of the outfit that belonged to the Morning Times. The property was put up at Administrator's sale and The Review's bid was the highest. Peck, Kerr and McElderry, solicitors for the administrators, yesterday notified this company that their offer had been accepted.

The property thus taken over includes the type setting machines, the presses, in fact everything usually found in a modern job and newspaper office. Their purchase will be a valuable addition to the equipment of The Review plant and will make this office one of the most efficient and up to date between Toronto and Ottawa. It will practically double its present capacity for turning out all kinds of work and the public will be better served in this capacity than ever before.

Recently The Review purchased a linotype machine, one of the most modern on the market and with the additional machines taken over by the purchase of yesterday this office will be in a position to turn out a better newspaper and more job work than ever before.

KILLED IN EXPLOSION IN THE ARSENAL AT LINDSAY

Wm. Brown of Keene Loses Life and Three Others Are Injured When Box of Glycerine is Allowed to Fall—Official Statement

(Special to The Review.)

Lindsay, July 24.—The following official statement was handed out this morning by Col. Weatherbie, Supt. of the Dominion Arsenal, concerning the distressing accident last night:

"An explosion occurred last evening at the filing plant of the local arsenal about 5.30, by which Wm. Brown of Keene, Peterboro County, was kiled, and Gordon Stinson, 48 Albert Street, Lindsay, was injured. Elmer Herron of Peterboro received a slight injury in the leg; Alex. Black of Lindsay is suffering from shock. All three are in the hospital now.

"The explosion was evidently due to some disregard of the regulations by which a box containing a small quantity of cap composition was allowed to drop on the floor causing a very rapid detonation. No damage was caused to the buildings.

"It is understood that the men let fall in some way a small eight ounce parcel of glycerine and powder. It made a hole in the floor. Brown was killed instantly, his clothes being literally torn from his body. Stinson's arm is badly shattered and one eye gone.

"A jury was sworn in, the body viewed and adjournment made to Wednesday."

WILSON BREAKS THE DEADLOCK

Washington, July 24.—President Wilson has ended the deadlock between Charman Denman of the Shipping Board and General Goethal, general manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The resignations of both men have been accepted and Edward Hurley, a Chicago business man, and Washington Capps, chief Constructor of the Navy, will take their respective positions.

ONTARIO WOMEN URGED TO AVOID WASTE OF FOOD

Controller Hanna Delivers a Practical Address at Toronto.

PREMIER MAKES APPEAL

Mass Meeting Marks the Opening of Provincial Convention Today.

Toronto, July 24.—Characterizing the food problems of the allies as "grave and vital questions" which have reached an acute stage, Canada's food controller, in an address before a mass meeting in Convocation Hall last night, preliminary to the women's province-wide convention opening to-day, appealed to the people of Canada to eliminate food waste and adopt thrift and economy in the conservation of food resources.

In a speech devoid of oratorical phrases, the food controller reviewed the world's food conditions, quoting statistics, data, and statements to support his arguments for self-sacrifice in food consumption by Canadians and Americans in order that the soldiers will not be defeated or compelled to retire and to prevent the peoples of the allies countries suffering from hunger.

In opening his address Premier Sir William Hearst expressed his conviction that the women of Ontario would assist the food controller in fulfilling the task he has undertaken. He reviewed the work of women in the last three years, calling attention to the fact that they have assisted in furnishing men, munitions, money and in production.

Other speakers were Mrs. H. H. Loosemore, who presided, and who explained the purposes of the meeting and the convention which opens to-day, and W. E. Rundle, of the organisation of resources committee, who made announcements.

CONSCRIPTION BILL REACHES FINAL STAGES

Will Be Up For Its Third Reading in the Commons Tonight.

SAME VOTE IS LOOKED FOR

Goes to the Senate Tomorrow and Liberals May Make a Statement.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, July 24. — The final stages of the conscription debate take place in the Commons today, and the measure is expected to be given its third reading by midnight, although there are rumors of a change of attitude on the part of a few of the pro-conscription Liberals, and possibly some further amendments may be moved, but it is not expected that there will be much change in the vote. The bill will go to the Senate tomorrow, when Senator Bohstock is expected to indicate what effect Hon. Clifford Sifton's open letter has had upon him and the Liberal wing of the Upper House.

KERENSKY COMPLETES COALITION CABINET.

Petrograd, July 24. — Kerensky has completed the new provisional cabinet. It is a coalition ministry of ten ministers, five of the socialist group and five belonging to the non-socialist element.

TO DRINK IS AS BAD AS TO HAVE LIQUOR IN AN ILLEGAL PLACE

Amendment to Temperance Act Makes This Plain and Magistrate Imposes Fine.

Archie McIntyre of Havelock was found guilty of an infraction of the Ontario Temperance Act by County Magistrate Langley this morning and ordered to pay a fine of $200.00 and costs.

McIntyre claimed that he was not in possession of the liquor as it belonged to Lytle but that did not excuse him as the following amendment to section 41 of the act says: "Any person who drinks liquor in a place where such liquor cannot lawfully be kept shall be deemed to have liquor in contravention of this section." The penalty is not less than $200 and not more than $1000.00.

Inspector Stewart, who laid the information against both McIntyre and Lytle, states that there are a great many people who are unknowingly breaking this section of the act daily and he thinks that special attention should be given this ruling of the court by the citizens generally.

LABOR ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

The labor organizers and agitators, as they are called, are on the right track. They strive, not to establish a lottery, out of which one man in a hundred thousand may draw a fortune, but to raise the whole mass of humanity to a higher level. Their aim is not a gamble, but social justice. Such, too, is the spirit of such social reformers as Lloyd George, who promote legislation which at least gives the great body of workers a measure of justice—not a chance of drawing a winning ticket in a lottery.—Toronto Star.

WISE AS TO PENNIES.

THE BOARD OF Police Commissioners gave Chief Thompson leave of absence to attend the annual meeting of Police Chief Constables at Quebec and paid the expenses of his trip. The city will receive the benefit of his experience at that gathering in the form of still more efficient service. The result of the discussions, which were Dominion-wide in their scope, will be apparent in police work everywhere. Such conventions are the yearly school of training for those who attend. Chief Thompson was one of the leading figures at the gathering and read one of the most practical papers that was presented. As an advertisement for Peterborough in this respect alone, his presence in Quebec, considering the part he took, was worth all it cost.

The Fire Chiefs of the Dominion meet in annual session at Port Arthur today. Chief Howard naturally is anxious to attend, but at a meeting of the aldermen last night in committee of the whole a motion to allow him $50 expenses was voted down. Aldermen McIntyre, Stratton, Dobbin and Smith were alone in supporting the proposition. Chief Howard is thus denied the opportunity to hear practical discussions of the calling which is of so much importance to every property owner in the city, unless he goes at his own expense, and this is too much to expect of any man, no matter how deeply he may be interested.

Provincial Fire Marshal Heaton is to be at the convention to discuss the Quaker Oats fire in this city, one of the most serious conflagrations that ever occurred in Canada. That alone should furnish the aldermen with a reason for loosening up the civic purse strings and sending Chief Howard to take a part in the convention proceedings. There is no man who knows more of that fire than he does, and no man is more able to discuss it intelligently.

Over a year ago, when the aldermen cut the salary of the Chief the manufacturers of the city came to the rescue and restored it by voluntary contributions. It is not unlikely that if they had anticipated the aldermanic action of last night, the business men would have been heard from again and that Chief Howard would be on his way to the convention, and not required to pay his own expenses, either.

PEACE PROSPECTS.

FROM THE BEGINNING of the war the masses of the German people have been deluded by those in authority. They were made to believe that the conflict was forced upon them by the jealousy of other powers, and that the very existence of the empire was threatened. The war was to be brief, the people being taught that in three months at most Germany would have her enemies at her feet and would be supreme both on land and sea. Even the Socialists were deceived by this line of reasoning, so that Germany went into the war with all classes practically unanimous for conquest.

The war has been in progress for three years, and the German Empire is farther from victory than at any stage of the conflict. It requires tact on the part of the war party to hold the members of the Reichstag and the people in leash. The line of reasoning adopted now is that Germany is fighting for her very life, that if the war is lost the empire will be dismembered and divided up as a prize among the victors. That false teaching is all that keeps the people in line behind the leaders, that prevents open revolt that would beyond a doubt lead to a revolution, unless the war were abandoned and the best possible terms made with the Allies.

If the German people could be made to understand the situation as it really exists, the war would be of short duration. Upon the success of the Allies depends their own temporal salvation; the preservation of them for all time to come from the situation in which they have been placed for the past three years. The destruction of Prussianism, the final and complete overthrow of militarism, means much to the world, but not more to any race on earth than the German people themselves.

THE SOLDIERS' CHANCES.

THE RETURNED SOLDIERS are not likely to be led astray by newspaper sophistries which are intended to have them believe that they are neglected by the present government, the implication being that the soldiers will fare better in the event of a change of administration. What have the soldiers now in the trenches to hope for from a political leader who, if he had the power, would withhold them the aid they now ask for? What has the returned soldier, the man who has done his bit and who is entitled to every consideration, to expect from the same source? The leader who would not aid them when the need for assistance is urged is not likely to do anything for them after their service has been rendered to the limit of their ability.

Returned soldiers are living under conditions that must and will be remedied. So far as this riding is concerned, they have a friend at court who will spare no effort to secure for them anything their patriotic sacrifices deserve, so far as it is humanly possible to make some material return for what they have done. They are not likely to be over-persuaded into trading horses while crossing the stream.

HELPING THE FARMER.

THE FARMER certainly requires help to save his hay and grain and other crops, just as the manufacturer requires mechanics and the business man clerical assistants. But in all of these lines a certain amount of skill is needed. The bank or store clerk or the carpenter cannot expect to become a useful farm hand in a day any more than the young men who is used to farm work alone can expect to drop into a bank, a factory or a store and earn anything like fair wages from the start.

Mark Twain tells of one of these volunteer farmers who set out to help an aged farmer and his son cut their hay crop. That was in the days when the scythe was used. The novice was placed in the procession behind the son, the father bringing up the rear. In the hands of the inexperienced the scythe is an instrument that means danger to those in the vicinity, and, after watching the wild motions of the recruit the father called a halt and ordered the son to change places with him. "You are young," he said, "and have a family to support. I have only a few more years to live at most."

Suspecting a personal application in these remarks, the volunteer farmer demanded an explanation, and was informed that if he kept on as he set out he was likely to slash the life out of some of the party, the man at the head of the line being in imminent danger. The old man did not say life, but the word is better used here for the sake of the children.

Men seated in office arm-chairs cannot harvest Canada's crop by simply talking. Horny-handed reporters cannot write the people back to the land or by that process get the hay and grain under cover. This is a task which requires a certain line of intelligence as well as well-developed muscle. There are men in the city who have graduated from the farms and who could make themselves useful if they would spend their spare time in the same service. It is questionable whether sending out the unskilled indiscriminately is rendering the farmer any real service. Making a picnic of harvest work does not accomplish the end in view. On the other hand, there is a probability that such methods will only add to the difficulties of the farmer.

WHAT THEY DIDN'T KNOW

The greatest impetus human nature seems to get in developing initiative is when confronted at an examination with questions that are real posers. A gentleman who has had a good deal of experience in examining musical pupils furnishes these answers as typical of many examples he has met of youthful resourcefulness:

Q.—Can you say what the "dominant" means?

A.—It is a game much played in cafes on the continent.

Q.—Name some of Beethoven's best-known works.

A. The Pascal Symphony, The Amount of Olive-branches, The Harmonious Blacksmith, and Faust.

Q.—What does the word "Sonata" mean?

A.—I do not know, because it's a German word, and father won't let me learn German.

Q.—Does a "sharp" raise or lower a note?

A.—Neither, it would sound out of tune if it did.

Q.—Do you know what the word "tonic" means?

A.—It's what they give to babies to strengthen their lungs, but I never heard of it in music.

Q.—How many beats to a minute?

A.—One, of course; that's why it has only one tail.

Q.—Do "rests" correspond in value to notes.

A.—Well, they can't be as valuable, because they are not sounded.

Q.—What is meant by "modulation"?

A.—Imitate Paderoosky, take him for your model.

Q.—Do you know what the "signature" of a piece is?

A.—Why, of course. It's the composer's name on the outside.

Q.—What is an "arpeggio"?

A.—I know what it is, but father won't grow any more. He says it doesn't pay to do so any longer. You can buy them so cheaply at the store.

Wit and Wisdom

Making It Worse.

"Did you try counting sheep for your insomnia?"

"Yes, but it only made matters worse—the sheep reminded me of my butcher's bill."

Novel Method.

"I wanted to be loved for myself alone, and to find out if that was the case with the girl I fancied."

"How did you go about it?"

"I wrote her an anonymous letter asking her to marry me."

Later Variation.

"Sentimental people used to study the language of flowers."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "but you can't blame us, under the circumstances, if we study the language of cabbage and tomatoes."

His Fall Not Unchecked.

Two insurance agents—a Yankee and an Englishman—were bragging about their rival methods. The Britisher was holding forth on the system of prompt payment carried out by his people—no trouble, no fuss, no attempt to wriggle out of settlement.

"If the man died tonight," he continued, "his widow would receive her money by the first post tomorrow morning."

"You don't say?" drawled the Yankee. "See here, now, you talk of prompt payment! Waal, our office is on the third floor of a building forty-nine storeys high. One of our clients lived in that forty-ninth storey, and he fell out of the window. We handed him his cheque as he passed."

No Relief in Sight.

Bootblack, dusting patron emphatically and with t ɔ prepense—Cloudy day, sir.

Patron, ignoring hint—No change coming either.

Getting Home Late.

"Where have you been, John Wombat?"

"Sh—my dear. It is a military secret."

DICTATES OF FASHION

Ostrich plumes are sometimes used to edge tulle scarfs.

Pipings of the linings of the coat show all around the edges.

Pale pink coral voile is a good choice for a chemise dress.

Frocks are sparsely trimmed with fur at the present moment.

Bathing suits are made on the lines of the chemise frock.

BRITISH RALLY IN NEW YORK

"Oh we don't want to loose you,
But we think you ought to go,
For your flag and your country
Both need you so.

We shall want you and miss you
With all our might and main,
We shall cheer you, thank you, kiss
you
When you come back again."

Fourteen thousand men and women all wrought to a pitch of patriotic frenzy, took up this refrain to the accompaniment of half a dozen bands, when Maggie Teyte, the Grand Opera diva, sang and sang again the stirring melody in the early stages of the British Empire Recruiting Rally held in Madison Square Garden New York.

As the mighty throng within lifted up their voices to join in every war and patriotic song that was sung during the evening, several thousand unable to gain entrance to the garden, stood in the streets about the huge amphi-theatre, and they, too, sang just as lustily as those inside.

Overflow meetings were held at all the street corners about the Garden, and when the exercise within drew to a close thousands were still waiting outside to cheer the Highlanders and other troops—kilted and trousered both—as they filed out.

Garden Is Quickly Jammed

While the meeting was scheduled to start at 8 o'clock, every seat in the garden was occupied long before that hour. As many more crowded inside as the police would permit, and when every available inch of standing room was occupied, the doors were closed and the crowd outside held in check by the police.

With 500 policemen attached to the Home Defence Guard stationed inside the Garden under Inspector Dwyer, their chief duty consisted in keeping the aisles open so the piping Highlanders and other marching bands could circle the Garden and skirl their melodies. Several thousand policemen were stationed outside the Garden under Inspector Bolan, and here, too, all was orderly and decorous, both commanders saying they never handled so big a crowd with so little trouble in all their police experience.

While the meeting was under the auspices of the British Recruiting Commission, with Gen. White its head, in attendance the meeting was presided over by Thomas L. Chadbourne, Jr., Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on National Defence. Alexander J. Hemphill, chairman of the recruiting committee, introduced the speakers, Lord Northcliffe, Jas. M. Beck, Gen. White and Major-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Commander of the Department of the East, were the orators of the evening.

BOARDING HOUSE PHILOSOPHY

"Don't worry," observed the professor, "and everything will surely turn out all right."

"A very simple recipe," commented the pretty teacher.

"It works out all right," insisted the professor. "I've known cases, lots of them.

"Now there was Bill Jenkins. He was worrying about finances. He was in an awful hole. I said, 'Just don't worry. Say to yourself that everything will be all right and it will.' He followed my advice and the next day he got a check for $75."

"Gee! Pretty good returns for not worrying!" commented the boarder in arrears.

"Yes, but didn't he have to worry somebody else to get that $75?" inquired the landlady.

"It is my opinion," declared the boarder with the high brow as he adjusted his specs, "that the submarine menace is greatly affected by the attitude of the world's mind. When the world is in a fever of worry the menace is terrible, but when the world makes up its mind that the evil is in check it is in check. Quod ero spero."

"An easy way to check the submarine menace," observed the irrepressible boarder. "Simply don't worry and there you are! Sic semper tyrannis, also e pluribus unum."

"I knew a lady," declared the landlady's daughter, "who worried about her neighbor's cats. They had a way of scratching up her begonias, sitting on her hyacinths and climbing up and down her sweet peas and jumping off the fence onto her jonquils. But she made up her mind to stop worrying, that something would happen to those mind. Sure enough something did hap- cats if she kept the right attitude of pen to them as soon as her husband got home.

"If she had been worrying she would have cooked such a wretched meal for her husband that he would have gone up town immediately after dinner to play kelly pool with the boys. But by not worrying she kept her mind on the broiling porterhouse and the apple pie so that her husband went strolling in the yard immediately after dinner, spied the cats in the midst of the jasmine and attended to them promptly, doing a workmanlike job."

"Well, I declare!" murmured the landlady in a baffled tone. "I don't see how it is! This thing works out so nicely for other people, but doesn't get me a thing, I can't even get a pound of butter that way. When the butter doesn't come I always get to worrying and that does no good. Today I made up my mind that I wouldn't worry about it and perhaps the butter would come. But it didn't. There is no butter for supper, but you can't blame me for it. I did my part. I didn't worry about it."

And the landlady smiled optimistically upon her baffled boarders.

CONCERNING WOMEN

More than 20 per cent. of the munition workers in France are women.

Women are now employed as baggage "smashers" at French railroad stations.

More than 1,800,000 women are active farmers and gardeners in the United States.

If the war continues for three years many of the railroads of the United States will be operated by women.

The age limits for women employed in the British Government and sent to France must be over twenty years and under 40.

Twenty-one women are now employed as machinists in the Locust Point shops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. They all wear overalls and caps, just the same as the men.

The New York Medical College and Hospital for Women war unit, which was the first unit of women physicians to offer their services to the United States is drilling for war work.

William Thorn, 90 years of age, former town treasurer and tax collector of Mitchel, was found dead in his bed.

Earl Blair, aged 22, of Hamilton, rented a bathing suit at Burlington Beach yesterday, went in bathing, took cramps and was drowned.

FROM BEER TO CANDY.

From a recent advertisement these two paragraphs are quoted:

"Far sighted investors should look into the money making possibilities of the candy and chocolate industry.

"The 'dry' movement is one of the great influences that have produced a tremendous increase in the consumption of sweets."

Whether the particular opportunity set forth in the advertisement is real I am not equipped to judge. It is not one of the whole enterprise I want to speak, but of the whole idea.

It seems fairly certain that this country will be "dry" within a reasonably short time. The beer and whisky which our men consume will not be greatly missed when it is discovered that sweets can satisfy the same craving.

Women have known this a long time. "Are women people?" asks a woman writer; and the logical mind must accept the conclusion that what will appease a woman's thirst will satisfy a man's.

Great fortunes have been built in the brewery and distilling business. They are on the road to dissolution, unless their owners turn to something else—like candymaking or the production of grape juice.

For the average investor opportunities will be offered to buy stocks and bonds of candy companies and grape juice manufacturers. Some will be worth while, others not.

It is a reminder—nothing more. Keep an eye open for the genuine.

PLEA OF THE CROWN PRINCE.

Father, think of me;

If reforms you're contemplating,
Halt the rash decree;
All the while you're hesitating,

Where will Frederick be?
My request is most emphatic;

You have put that king stuff over,
Proud of pedigree;
Would you make an exiled rover,

Of the Deity?
Be not thoughtlessly offensive;
Spare your family tree;

MAE MARTYN

Dolly: I made my faded "stringy" hair take on its natural color again and become soft fluffy and brilliant by shampooing with canthrox, a teaspoonful of which I dissolved in a cup hot water. It gently yet thoroughly, dissolved dust, dirt and excess oil, and, when I rinsed it out, left the scalp healthy and pliant. Since my first trial I have used nothing but this.

Iphigenia: Yes, you can be sure of hair beauty if you give it proper care. Rid your hair of itching dandruff by use of this economical home-made tonic, which will make your scalp so healthy that the hair naturally grows long and heavy. Get an ounce of quinzoin at your druggist's, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol, add one half-pint cold water, and rub into hair roots daily.

Antoinette: Instead of making over your gowns because you have outgrown them, why not try this harmless flesh-reducer? Get four ounces of parnotis from your druggist. Dissolve it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful before each meal, and you will see a gradual decrease in weight, without loss of strength or sagging skin. It is simple, harmless and effective. Requires no dieting or exercise.

Miss O.: The "face cream without grease" which you ask about is easily prepared at home by this recipe: Get from your druggist one ounce of almozein; dissolve it in one half-pint cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine stir well and let stand over night. Apply it frequently, and prevent wrinkles and all skin-flabbiness. It is cleansing, soothing and healing, and there is nothing better to relieve enlarged pores, muddiness and all roughness or redness of the skin.

Christine: For your sallow, pimply skin, which indicates a liver upset, you should make up and use the old-time kardene blood, kidney and liver tonic. This is prepared by pouring one ounce kardene into one-half pint alcohol (do not use whiskey), and then adding one half cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful before meals and your skin will soon be clear and beautiful. The kardene tonic is good for most bodily pains and aches, because it eliminates from the system the poisons causing them, and its timely use frequently prevents serious sickness.

Celia: You say, "I am a slave to my powder gag." Why not try this fine liquid beautifier. It is lasting in effect and economical besides being fine to whiten and tone the skin and rid it of sallowness or blemishes. Get four ounces of spurmax, add two teaspoonfuls glycerine and one half-pint hot water or witch hazel. This makes a big quantity, and is far beter than the ordinary face powders. It will be very becoming, and will seem like a part of your skin.

Milicent: Don't be frightened into buying eye-glasses before you really need them. It is better to strengthen the eyes than to aid their weakness. For some years I have used this simple home-made tonic, which has both beautified and stringthened mine. Dissolve an ounce of crystos in one half-pint of water. Two drops daily, or several times daily, will give relief to tired and aching eyes, and soon make them clear and sparkling.

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

Meanwhile, Laurence, seated at table and looking into brown eyes, was rapidly recovering from the consternation into which Constance Armitage's threats and apparent knowledge had thrown him. The memory of the lie he had detected her in came as balm to his soul. Had her knowledge been of any real value she would never have made that slip. It was certainly disturbing that she should have known of the tossing-for-shares incident; but, after all, the matter was no secret, and on grimly considering the extent and variety of her acquaintance, there seemed nothing improbable in her hearing the tale told as a joke. As to the malachite—well, she must have been listening to Farrant's explanations with more attention than he had given her credit for—and the rest was guesswork. At the worst, Pat had the start, and had as good as promised him the shares by Monday. No good worrying, anyhow, he decided, and so set about enjoying the present hour to the utmost.

The lunch went merrily, and with its every minute of time Laurence abased himself in spirit more and more deeply. Oh! for the days to come, when divinity should preside at his board always, and this happiness together should be for more than the fleeting hour! He rejoiced in her wit—for witty she was; rejoiced in her beauty—and she was delicately lovely; but most of all rejoiced in that he had never known before in womankind, her brave companionship, whether grave or gay. And to this she came swiftly with him, for his sincerity—perhaps even his first brutality—had shorn the veil of reserve that parts man and maid in their earlier days together. The keen, sharp pleasure of the moment planted memory clear, and through the mists of later years often brought back this hour to him—every turn of her graceful head, every flutter of her hands, the light and pleasant room framing her bright eyes and happy face. Fresh from the sloven atmosphere of the morning's interlude and from the unbidden favor and shallow rage of another woman, she seemed to him sexless and dainty as a flower.

As they parted on the pavement outside he put his hand on her shoulder and vainly tried to put his feelings into the heavy harness of words. "This has been a happy hour for me," he said. "I shall never forget this meal. And—and—you won't make the mistake of thinking that I—that I'm the tailor's dummy we spoke of this morning, will you?"

She looked into his eyes for the briefest moment. "N-no," she said. "But, Mr. Avery, please don't go on making sure—of what will only disappoint you in the end."

Her mispronunciation of his name recalled to him, more than anything else could have done, the danger of being premature. He took his hand from her. "No," he said gaily. "I'm not asking for disappointments. I shall see you this evening? Yes! Good-bye, then, for the present."

After another visit to Dwyer's office where in default of seeing his friend he left a brief note of warning, he sought the river for silent communion with moving waters. A golden evening in Her company—the landlady, a merciful soul and born matchmaker after her kind, pleading a headache—followed upon an afternoon during which Laurence trod rolling clouds, backwards and forwards, along the Embankment; and sitting by her side in the crowded Exhibition grounds, he would have been ready to swear that the painted canvas glories of Earl's Court excelled in matchless beauty the dawns and sunsets of all wild nature at her best.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A message arrived with Laurence's breakfast on the following morning. "Miss Stewart's compliments," the small hand-maiden repeated, "an please, sir, will you go out with her this morning? She'll be ready at ten o'clock."

Laurence rushed through his dressing, bestowing loving care, nevertheless, upon his shaving and linen, and was in the entry as the clock struck. She came to him down the stairs hatted and gloved and altogether adorable, a happy light in her eyes and a color on her cheeks he had never seen before. She nodded brightly. "You got my message, then? I want to see you—to ask your advice?"

They walked down North End Road towards its squalid end, and turned to the left. Their way led them past the cemetery, and she suggested that they should enter. "It's quiet there," she said, "and I want a long talk with you."

Once inside the gates: "Isn't it strange?" she continued. "Only a week ago you were telling me of your good fortune, and now my luck's turned too. Five hundred pounds, perhaps more. Look at that first."

She handed him a letter, and the graves and trees and grass spun round and round in a whirling dance of death, and the blue sky and sunlight laughed merrily at his misery. For the letter was from Dwyer, and contained his own offer for the shares in the Iceland Development Company!

"My God!" he said, and the words were wrung from him in torture. He leaned against a grey box-tomb close by. "My God! And it was you all the time!" Stamping one foot heavily on the ground, he hammered the turf with the heel of the other his foot swinging rigidly, like the pendulum of some metronome of pain keeping time with his broken sentences.

She beheld him in consternation. The man's pain was so intense that she could see his forehead turn shiny damp in the sunlight, and his white lips show the red marks where he had bitten them to keep from crying out before her face. His utmost being had gone body and soul cheerily to greet the joyous future and hug it to his heart; and, behold! Dwyer's letter had whipped all happiness out of his life as a quick breath strips fairy thistledown from its bare stem.

Wild-eyed and dismayed, he looked up at her. "Are you ill?" she asked. "Tell me—tell me. What is it?"

He made no answer.

"Won't you say?" she pleaded gently, as though she were speaking to an ailing child. "Shall I bring a doctor or any help? Oh, what is it? Mr. Avery, tell me?"

"'Avery,' too!" He began to laugh, a little hysterically. "I'll tell you—in a minute. I'm a bit upset, that's all."

They watched each other in silence for a while, he rigid as marble, his fingers biting into the stone ledge behind him and his eyes on hers; she, agitated, fluttering ever so slightly.

Then, "Sit down," he said. "There's a seat. Sit down and wait for me. I'm going to walk to the end of this path—shan't go out of sight. Only I want to think a minute—alone." She seated herself, and without another word he stood erect and started down the central alley of the cemetery, his shoulders held squarely as though bracing against and resisting lashes of a whip.

A dozen steps he had gone, and then quick memory coupled the moment with that other, not two months since, when in just such black despair he had set out on another walk alone, and as he had then turned back to ask the name of Uthild rock, so he turned now with another question.

"You said five hundred," he said. "This only offers two."

She held out another letter. He took it from her hand mutely, and set off again, without looking at it or at her.

Half-way down the alley he took it from its envelope and read it. It was from Mortimer & Reingold—offering her five hundred pounds for the shares of the Iceland Development Company in her possession. He read it again, carefully noting every word, folded it and walked on, mad, hopeless desire—hopeless, hopeless—tearing at his heart at every step.

In the chaos of agony that beat and bruised him coherent thought refused to rise. Only the memory of that walk across the Iceland wastes that had brought him here—the tombstones turned to lava blocks before his eyes, the sunlight faded under cold, icy blasts, the buildings at the end of the alley took the broken shape and dark color of Uthild rock, and he strode on in white-hot pain, in a far, far keener agony than that he had known two months before. The smaller details of his torture had not yet come—the heated irons to burn the body on the rack—but he knew that happiness was no more, that laughter was dead, and that his life henceforward must be grey and cold as the northern wildernesses, hard and useless as the infertile lava that covered them, unsettled as the gale-swept seas. All gone; all hope, all love, all peace—and Marion herself farther than them all. He glanced over his shoulder. She had left the seat he had indicated, and was standing in the pathway, following him with her eyes.

Not until he reached the end of the central alley did any sequence of thought come to him, and then like a flash he saw his duty, clearly as though a shaft of light had flashed down through the darkness engulfing his wild and anguished soul.

For her sake he must strangle his hopes, shatter all dreams of the happy future, and return to pitiless servitude. He must say good-bye to her here—"And a nice, appropriate place to do it in," he said aloud, as he looked around at the gravestones, each with its story of life and love ended and forgotten. A fornight's active work to do on her behalf—a wire to send at its conclusion—and then, a life dragged out to its end in the old misery—now more utterly hopeless than ever. The wire must come through someone else—Pat Dwyer would do. He could not appear himself. She would think he was doing it to curry favor with her, and would pity him—and if she did, he would go raging mad and do murder. He must break with her now. No difficulty about that, when she knew who he was and what his father had done for hers. Farewells once over, as brutally as need be, and then away to Leith again—and farther—as fast as rail and boat would carry him. And though his heart was breaking and his life for evermore long pain, all must be done cheerily—cheerily. Emerson's words—long forgotten—came to his tortured mind: "'All must be as gay as the song of a canary—though it be the building of cities'—or the sacrifice of a life's happiness," he quoted bitterly, and returned to her with a firm step and smiling eyes.

"That's queer," he said. "A touch of sun, I expect. Do you know, just as you were speaking, the cemetery fairly spun round. I hardly knew what I was saying.

"Now about these letters. You've asked me for advice, and I'm going to give it to you, and you must abide by it strictly. Do you understand? Abide by it to the letter. You must. Say you will."

Marion looked up at him from under level brows. "But this—is this an order?"

"An order—yes. You must obey. I know something of—of Iceland, and these two offers convince me there's something going on which had better be looked into. You are not to sell yet on any account. I'll go up now to see Mr Dwyer, of Dwyer & Tyrrell at once, and you will take him as your adviser in this matter. I—I've got to leave early next week—had a chance to tell you before—only heard from Leith this morning. Dwyer's a good fellow—a sterling good chap. I know him well. We've been friends for years—and if you've any doubts about him you can get references from any reputable firm you please. At present you'll stick fast to the [illegible] a fortnight. [illegible] Dwyer's instructions. You couldn't [illegible]

"But he's made me an offer himself."

"Exactly. But he's outbidden, so his offer don't count. You'll find he'll—I'm pretty well sure he'll withdraw it when he hears that. Now, do you understand exactly what you are to do?"

"I am not to sell for a fornight. I am to call on Mr. Dwyer as a client. And I am to take his advice as to the disposal of the shares." She ticked off each item on a finger. "Is that right?"

"Perfectly right. And now I must go. You've had my advice—that's what I came for, wasn't it?—and now, once more, remember you must do exactly as I've told you. Promise."

Carried away by the energy and authority in his voice, "I promise," she said.

"Then good-bye." Out went his hand. "You won't think me rude, leaving you like this, will you? I'm really in an awful hurry, only as you wanted my advice I wouldn't tell you so before. Nice of me, wasn't it? Good-bye."

Their hands met—their eyes. "Good-bye," she said. "Shall I see you this evening?"

"No. There's something I ought to tell you. You won't want to see me again when you know it. My name isn't Avery; it's Averil—and I am the son of the man who ruined your father." He smiled at her as coolly as though he had just informed her that it was a fine day, then resolutely turned his back on happiness and strode back to Earl's Court Road.

OVERTURES TO CHINA.

Ruling Classes May Be Encouraged to Come Here.

The Canadian Government, through legislation recently proposed in the Dominion Parliament, is making its first overtures to the new China, with the avowed purpose of attracting a share of the growing commerce of the Oriental Republic. The method to be employed is the same as that which Canada sees in successful operation in the United States. It is the education of Chinese students in the colleges and universities, made possible by the relaxation of the exclusion laws, to permit their residence. In Canada, as in the United States, the Chinese exclusion law is directed, theoretically, only against the admission of coolie laborers. In Canada, however, no specific exceptions to the law have been made, and Chinese students and teachers have been barred under the general terms of the Act.

Those members of the Government who are sponsoring the proposed enactment are said to have been moved by the realization that the policy pursued toward Chinese students and teachers, who have sought entry to colleges and universities in the United States, has operated in the past, and is tending more and more, to expand the trade relations between the Eastern and Western Republics. The officials claim to have found that the Chinese who have been educated in the arts and knowledge, as well as in the customs of the Occident, upon returning to their native country and becoming active agents in educational, industrial, and commercial undertakings, are strongly prejudiced in favor of the people who have befriended them, and of the institutions which have equipped them for dealing intelligently with the problems to be solved. Canada, it is pointed out, has failed to participate in the advantage gained by the United States through the operation of this co-operative system, because of its failure sooner to appreciate the possibilities of the opportunity afforded.

It is felt in Canada that, with the possibility of China's early entry into the world war as an ally of the United States and the Entente, the countries of the Western Hemisphere are assured of a large trade with the people of the Chinese Republic in the future. It is argued that the Canadian ports on the Pacific are from two to three days nearer Hongkong and Shanghai than the western ports of the United States, and that for this reason the people of the Dominion should encourage closer commercial, financial, and industrial relations with the people of China. This closer relationship cannot be achieved it is [illegible] without first cultivating, as it is pointed out the United States has successfully cultivated, a broader and more genuine friendship with the ruling class in the Oriental Republic.

In view of this established international comity, and of the fact that the educated Chinese have found that the colleges and universities of the United States offer to Chinese students the opportunities they are seeking, it may be that Canada, or any other country which seeks to compete in what was once considered a somewhat experimental undertaking, will be obliged to do more than make what might be regarded as a concession to race prejudice.

Stranded in England.

The London Chronicle publishes the following:

There are about 40,000 dependants of Canadian soldiers stranded in this country at the present time—wives and children who either followed their menfolk across to be as near them as possible while they were on active service, or came over to see them in hospital after they had been wounded.

They are not stranded in the ordinary sense of the word, for no cases of want have been reported. But it seems impossible for the bulk of them to return to Canada now or for some time to come owing to lack of passenger accommodation, and it is stated that even were the war to end soon fully eighteen months must elapse before tonnage could be spared to transport so large a body of people.

The position of some of these Canadian visitors is pathetic. There are many whose menfolk are actually back in Canada themselves, wounded and discharged from the army. Others have lost those whom they followed to this country, and are anxious to return to their homes and relatives. Recently the Admiralty have been able to find room for a few women and children on returning transports, and it is hoped to continue this assistance.

Industrial Progress.

The Factory Inspector, in his report to the New Brunswick Provincial Legislature, states that last year was noted for its activity and progress along industrial lines. "All manufacturing plants, with very few exceptions, have been operated to their full capacity. In many cases in order to keep up with their increasing business it was found necessary to work overtime. Others were obliged to continue for the twenty-four hours with two shifts. The difficulty that has confronted the manufacturer has been the securing of sufficient competent help. The tendency during the past few years has been onward, and the outlook for the future is bright and encouraging."

How Roots Penetrate Hard Ground.

The extreme tips of a delicate root are protected by a sheath set with minute scales, which as it is worn away by friction against the soil is as constantly replaced, so that it acts as a wedge and the root thread is carried down uninjured. Another aid to penetration lies in the provision whereby the root as it pushes downward in search of nourishment exercises a slightly spiral, screwlike motion which worms its tip into the ground. Another important agent is the acid cell sap, which exudes on to and dissolves to some extent the rock or hard soil. This may be tested by placing a small piece of polished marble in a pot in which a plant is set and covering it with earth. After some weeks the marble will be found to have been corroded by the continuous action of this acid.

Rambler Roses.

One of the loved roses of summer is the rambler rose, which rambles about scattering its joyous self among hundreds of people in addition to those who grow it. Clambering over houses, both of rich and poor, it gladdens the eye of the tourist, and in great arm loads it wanders from its home vine to the rose loving, but not rose possessing; to the sick, to the weary, to the tired business folk, to whom it brings a bit of relaxation. The rambling rose of June, which rambles all over to the joy of every one—here's to the insectless health of the rambler rose, whether Dorothy Perkins, Pillar or whatever brand.—Newark News.

His Fidelity.

Upon the recent death of a politician who at one time served his country in a very high legislative place a number of newspaper men were collaborating in an obituary notice.

"What shall we say of the former senator?" asked one of the men.

"Oh, just put down that he was always faithful to his trust."

"And," queried a cynical member of the group, "shall we mention the name of the trust?"—Puck.

It Does Happen.

"I don't think the truth of that Cinderella story ever came out."

"No?"

"I think she took off her slipper because it hurt her. I've seen ladies do that in restaurants many a time."—Kansas City Journal.

BRITAIN'S MUNICIPAL SYSTEM DESCRIBED

Officials Are Experts And Members of Council Usually Experienced—Departments Co-operate Badly

In Great Britain the towns (boroughs) and cities are usually governed by a Council consisting of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors. The Mayor is always elected by the Council and is usually the Councillor with the longest term of office. His position is considered one of honor, he is the Chief Magistrate, and presides over all the deliberations of the Council; but he has no individual authority over the administration of the various civic departments. He is not paid a salary but in some of the larger towns and cities he is allowed a sum of money for entertainment purposes.

Aldermen of the Council are elected each year for a term of years by the Council. As a general rule the Mayor on retiring from the chair is elected an Alderman. By this system the Council always has amongst its members men of experience and knowledge of the town's affairs and a continuity of policy is consequently assured. The Councillors are elected by the ratepayers for a term of years upon the Ward System, one third of the Council being elected each year.

Administration

The work of administration is conducted by different departments of experienced officials, the head of each department having to report as to the conduct of the work of his department to committees specially appointed by the Council. These Committees usually consist of the following: Finance, Works, Hospitals and Public Health, Highways, Police, Parks and Open Spaces, etc.

This system has met with fair success and there has been no decided agitation to radically alter or amend same. The work of the Local Authority is conducted as a general rule in an economical and efficient manner principally because the municipal civil service is built up of experienced officials. It is a general rule for an official to obtain promotion from one town or city to another solely upon merit and his past experience in municipal work. It is very exceptional for a head of a department to be chosen to fill an appointment unless he has had many years of practical experience in his particular branch of the service. In this way, and only in this way, can an experienced municipal civil service be built up.

Government Supervises

The Committees of the Council while they have to pass upon expenditures and recommend to the Council legislation in the way of By-laws, etc. very seldom, if at all, interfere with the detailed administration of a department. As a further check upon municipal expenditures of a capital nature all new schemes have to be submitted to the Local Government Board for its approval. This Board is a government department consisting of highly trained and experienced officials in different branches of municipal work. It controls all the activities of a municipal nature including matters of town planning housing, public health, water supply sewerage and sewage disposal, highway construction, public buildings etc., etc.

While the above system has produced excellent results principally due to the recognition of "experience" in the appointment of officials, it lacks experienced control and concentration of management. There is not the co-operation between the departments which there should be and oftentimes there is an excessive amount of de[illegible] which does not [illegible] result.

CHANCE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS TO WIN PRIZES AT FALL FAIRS

Canadian Bankers' Association Will Encourage Raising of Live Stock.

The Canadian Bankers' Association, acting in co-operation with the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Live Stock Branch, offers cash prizes to boys and girls who exhibit calves or pigs at their local fair, and who comply with all the rules governing the competition.

The rules are as follows:—

Only boys and girls who have not attained their 17th birthday before the opening day of the show are eligible to compete in the Canadian Bankers' Competition.

No entry fee will be charged.

No exhibitor shall be allowed to make more than one entry in a class.

Not more than one member of a family shall be allowed to compete in the same class at another fair.

Calves and pigs entered for competition must have been born on or after March 15th, 1917, and must be the property of the exhibitor or the exhibitor's parent or guardian.

Grade bull calves, and grade boars, are not eligible to compete, and entries for same must not be accepted.

Exhibitors must feed and care for the animals they exhibit for at least six weeks.

An application form and a certificate form are attached hereto.

(a) The application form must be properly filled out and fyled with the manager of a local branch bank at least three weeks before the date of the fair.

(b) The certificate must be filled out and signed by the parent or guardian of the exhibitor, and fyled with the Secretary of the Fair not later than the day of the competition. If, however, an exhibitor fails to present his certificate on the day of the competition, he shall be allowed to compete, but any prize he may win shall be withheld until a properly filled and signed certificate is produced, and said certificate must be forthcoming within forty-eight hours after the holding of the competition, otherwise his prize money shall be forfeited.

A Statement, in writing, signed by the Secretary of the Fair, certifying the names of successful competitors and the prize money won by each must be procured by the local branch manager at whose branch the general prize money of the fair is paid to competitors, or whose branch, in case the prize money is disbursed in cash by an official of the Fair, is the banker for the official funds of the Fair. The branch manager will, upon receipt of the certified statement, pay the prize money directly to the successful competitors or to the Secretary of the Fair for disbursement by him, according as the general prize money is paid to competitors directly by the bank or to the Secretary or other official of the Fair, taking in either case a receipt on the certified statement.

The receipted statement must be forwarded forthwith, under registered cover, to the Secretary of the Canadian Bankers' Association, National Trust Building, Montreal.

In case the winner of a prize is subsequently disqualified, each exhibitor below him shall be moved up one place.

The classes are:—

Class I.—(Grade bull calves must not be shown).

Calf, pure bred or grade.

Prizes: 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $4.00; 3rd $3.00; 4th, $2.00; 5th, $1.00, 6th, Ribbon.

Application blanks may be had at the nearest bank.

Boys and girls in Peterborough County who desire to compete at the Fall Fair should govern themselves accordingly.

Save the Food and Serve the Empire!

The Average Canadian Family Wastes Enough to Feed a Soldier

"The Kitchen must help as well as the Workshop and the Trenches"
Lloyd George.

INTELLIGENT economy in the kitchen can do much to prevent the threatened world famine—can counteract the effect of high prices—and can replace growing debt with systematic saving.

Careful investigations show that before the war the average British family wasted 25% of their food—and we Canadians were even more extravagant.

This waste is not in a few big things, but in many little ones, each, we used to think, too small to bother about—such as careless peeling of vegetables and fruit—failure to make good use of dripping and "left-overs"—and such others as will occur to every thrifty housekeeper.

For the Empire's sake as well as your own, hunt up and cut out these leaks! You'll be helping to relieve the food shortage—saving your own money—and putting yourself in a position to buy Canadian War Savings Certificates and help win the war.

War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, to be repaid in three years at full face value. They cost $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, at all Money Order Post-Offices and Banks, thus yielding over 5% Interest. Should you need it, you can get your money back at any time. 19

FAIERS SAYS NO CLUB WAS USED

HE KNOCKED OUT HAROLD ECCLES IN FAIR PERSONAL COMBAT.

William Faiers, the employe at the incinerator, who was charged in the local papers yesterday with assaulting Harold Eccles, called at The Review office today to give his version of the affair. He was accompanied by John Withers, who is the caretaker, not Faiers, as stated yesterday.

Faiers says he fought Eccles fairly and used nothing but his fists in the encounter. This statement is borne out by eyewitnesses. When he knocked his man out he attempted to revive him with water, and then carried him into a stable, making a bed for him of some coats. It was Faiers who called the doctor and who paid the doctor's fee. He also gave $1.50 for a carriage in which his dismantled opponent was sent to his home.

The police have made no arrests, and will not unless Eccles makes a complaint.

THE REAL REASON

Stern Necessity, Not Science, is the Mother of Invention

Among a party of hunters who spent some time in a camp in New Brunswick were two college professors. No sooner had the learned gentlemen arrived than their attention was attracted by the unusual position of the stove, which was set on posts about four feet high.

This circumstance afforded one of the professors immediate opportunity to comment upon the knowledge that woodsmen gain by observation.

"Now," said he, "this man has discovered that heat emanating from a stove strikes the roof and that the circulation is so quickened that the camp is warmed in much less time than would be required were the stove in its regular place on the floor."

But the other professor ventured the opinion that the stove was elevated to be above the window in order that cool and pure air could be had at night.

Another man, being of a practical turn, thought that the stove was set high in order that a good supply of green wood could be placed under it.

After much argument, they called the guide and asked why the stove was in such a position.

The man grinned. "Well," he explained, "when I brought the stove up the river I lost most of the stove pipe overboard; so we had to set the stove up that way so as to have the pipe reach through the roof."

Classifying the Stars

A star of the first magnitude is 2.5 times as bright as a star of the second magnitude; a star of the second magnitude is 2.5 times as bright as a star of the third magnitude, and so on. Stars which are 2.5 times as bright as a star of the first magnitude are called stars of 0 magnitude, while stars 2.5 times brighter still are said to be of —1 magnitude, and so on.

Prof. Ceraski has made measurements to determine the magnitude of the sun, reckoned in this way. By adopting different methods of measurements, he reaches very accordant results, and it appears that our sun is a star of the —26.5 order of magnitude, which means that it sends us as much light as 80,000,000,000 of stars of the first magnitude.

At the distance of a little over four light years, that is, about 25,000 times its present distance, it would be a star of the first magnitude.

WHILE THE MEN BATHED CLOTHES WERE ROBBED

Four Boys Find Themselves in Police Court.

Four small boys accompanied by their parents appeared in the Juvenile Court this morning to answer to a charge of theft. At the request of Chief Thompson the case was enlarged until tomorrow morning.

It appears from the information that was furnished that a number of young men were in bathing and left their clothing on the bank of the river. During their spell in the water a number of boys went through the pockets of the clothes and when the swimmers returned about $13.00 was missing.

The matter was reported to the police and it was not long before the officers had a number of suspects under surveilance.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL IS BEFORE PARLIAMENT

Passes Second Reading and Goes to Committee---Sir Wilfrid Laurier Holds That it is Impracticable in Canada.

Ottawa, July 24.—Hon. Frank Oliver in Parliament asked if the Government had reached any decision with regard to his question in connection with the banning of "The Fiddlers" from Canada as containing objectionable matter.

Sir Robert Borden stated that there would be a statement today.

Sir George Foster introduced his Daylight Saving bill. He stated that daylight saving upon a national scale was a new thing. There were many considerations in favor of it.

Daylight saving, he said, was passed in the United Kingdom in April, 1916. In the same year it was adopted in ten other European countries.

The British authorities had made wide investigation of the workings of the Act, which resulted in the conclusion that it had been conducive to health and morals as well as being an economy.

Sir George declared that a bill had been introduced in the United States Senate and sent to Congress which he though would adopt it. He said that the industrial interests of Canada generally favored daylight saving. The cities and towns were largely in favor of the bill, though there was some objection from the farming communities.

The bill received second reading, and was moved into committee for consideration.

Laurier on Daylight Saving.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that the purpose of the Act was "an attempt to deceive ourselves into thinking it was 6 o'clock when it was really 7 o'clock." A difficulty arose in Canada which did not exist in any European country. There were four days of a journey between Halifax and Vancouver, while it was only a short trip from one side to the other of most European countries.

Sir Wilfrid emphasized the thought there might be a conflict between solar and standard time. How could the solar time be made consistent with the standard time adopted by the railways.

Sir George declared that before the Senate of the United States the railways had been heard and had raised no insurmountable objection. He read a letter from Sir George Bury, of the C.P.R., which said that the only way to make daylight saving a success was to make it universal in Canada.

G.T.R. FIREMAN HURT WHEN HIS POKER BROKE

Mr. Frank MacMurry, a fireman on the G.T.R., met with painful injuries in the Orillia yards Saturday evening. It appears that the unfortunate man was making repairs about the engine when the poker broke, precipitating him violently to the platform, and breaking his shoulder blade. He was taken to Orillia hospital, where his injuries were attended to.

Mr. McMurry's parents are residents in Douro.

GIVE DAIRY COW A FAIR CHANCE

ISOLATED TESTS DO NOT SHOW REAL QUALITY OF MILK.

Recently three cows that stood side by side were tested for nine consecutive milkings: The first cow had an average test of 3.7 per cent of fat, the maximum and minimum tests being 2.9 and 5.5.

The second cow had an average for the nine tests of 4.2 with maximum and minimum tests of 2.4 and 5.4. The average test for the third cow was 2.8, with extremes of 2.0 and 4.0.

Hence it is evident that the laudable desire to know what a certain cow's milk tests for fat may be defeated entirely if only one sample is run through the machine.

In the light of the examples given above, as well as of hundreds of other instances on record, it is safe to conclude that a fair method is to test a composite sample of five or six milkings taken at intervals when the cow is in normal condition. This plan has given good results in the cow testing work of the dairy division, Ottawa. Write for full particulars, so that your good cows may not be misjudged on an isolated test.

OPERATORS TO STRIKE ACCORDING TO BALLOT

Mr. David Campbell solicitor of Winnipeg is the choice of the committee of telegraphers, representing the G.N.W. from Quebec to Calgary, for the Conciliation Board. The appeal for the board was sent to the Minister of Labor on Saturday, and it is expected that it will be granted by the 5th of August or sooner.

The indications are that the vote of the telegraphers employed by the G.N.W. when all returns are in and the ballots counted, will be a unanimous vote for a strike.

IN THE TOILS AGAIN.

Blacklister Awaiting Trial, Once More Falls From Grace.

The well known local man who ought to have appeared in the police court yesterday morning to answer a charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list was yesterday arrested by the police in an intoxicated condition and occupied the cells all night.

At the police court this morning he was charged with the newer offence and entered a plea of guilty.

At the request of the Chief the case was enlarged until tomorrow when the other case will be disposed of. It was the intention of the Chief to keep the defendant locked up until tomorrow but as he promised good behaviour in the interval he was allowed his liberty.

Considerable interest is being taken in this case as some very interesting development are anticipated when the officers endeavor to discover where the defendant got the wet goods.

COST OF SEWER BUILDING CALLS FOR HALT IN WORK

One Tender Received for Sewers on Princes and Princess Streets and This is Not Accepted-Bylaw May be Amended.

The Board of Works met last evening and decided after opening the one tender for the sewers on Prince and Princess Streets to defer any action on the matter until such time as the city solicitor gives an opinion as to whether the council can amend the by-law so as to have the property owners pay a much larger proportion of the cost than is now fixed. The high cost of labor and supplies shows that the present foot frontage rate is such that the city generally pays for about three-quarters of the cost instead of just for the street intersections, as originally intended.

J. E. Hayes was the only tenderer for the work, and for the main sewers he quoted $27,225 and $3,780 for the 126 private connections at $30 each, or a total of $31,005.00.

The city engineer's estimate for the work which was also submitted was $15,442, showing that the contractor's figures are almost double. There are about 3,700 feet of sewer to be laid, so that the cost, if the contract is awarded to Mr. Hayes, would be near $8 per foot, and if by day labor about $4.50 a foot. The by-law now fixes the cost to the property owner at $1.04 per foot.

Ald. Smith gave notice that he intends to move for a by-law to amend the present one.

Ald. Dobbin thought that the work on sewers should be left until times were more normal. The people interested would not pay the difference, and the general taxpayer should not bear such a large portion of the cost.

Ald. Stratton and Worth moved that the solicitor's opinion be secured on increasing the frontage rate and it carried.

Will Sell Sand

The Quaker Oats want to purchase about 3,000 to 5,000 yards of sand from the city to be taken out of the pit at the Hilliard property. The company are willing to pay 20c per yard for it, and the City Trust Commissioners are willing to sell if the council approves.

Some of the aldermen were anxious to oblige the company and they approved of the commissioners' idea to sell, providing that the material is taken out under the supervision of the city engineer and the street commissioner.

Fence Was On Street

Alex. Murray, who lives at the corner of Sherbrooke and Park streets, started to build a fence around his property, and was notified by the city engineer to cease operations as he was encroaching on the street. Last evening Mr. Murray appeared before the board and wass allowed to explain his case. The fence will not interfere with traffic in any way, but in order to conserve the city's rights a lease was ordered drawn up for the strip and Mr. Murray will have the use of it at a nominal rental until such time as the city require it.

Waste Boxes Again

Acting-Mayor Duncan drew the attention of the council to the waste paper boxes which were placed on the streets by the National Advertising Co. The boxes were filled up and the company paid no attention to the order to remove them.

City Engineer Parsons will see that they are removed and stored at the city yard at the expense of the company.

C.P.R. Imposes

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will be notified to keep the siding at Rink and Stewart streets, which runs into the old Lundy property, clear of cars as it is a nuisance to the residents. Acting-Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor voiced the sentiments of several citizens in this regard.

Ready To Flush Streets

Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, informed the council that the firemen were ready to flush the main streets as requested twice a week.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to ask that the flushing be done early on Wednerday and Saturday morning.

Inflammable Material

Ald. Dobbin stated that certain persons in the city just outside the fire limits were allowing accumulations of inflammable material, such as shavings, etc., to gather on their premises, thereby endangering the property of citizens. When his attention had been drawn to the matter he had arranged to have the stuff burned at the incinerator, but the parties had so far refused to haul it there. He asked that a by-law be prepared by the city solicitor so that action of a compellable nature could be started.

This met with the unanimous approval of the aldermen.

Cedar Street Bad

Ald. Worth drew attention to the very bad condition of Cedar Street caused by the cleaning out of the hydrants.

The city engineer will attend to the matter at once

Will Build Sidewalk

W. M. Mallory, who lives at Wolfe and Park streets, and has a store in connecton with his house, asked for a sidewalk. The city engineer made a verbal report on it, and on a motion of Ald. Stratton and McIntyre the sidewalk was ordered built.

If there are any other requests for sidewalks between now and the next council meeting the requests will be considered and advertised along with this strip.

Romaine Street Has Troubles

Ald. Saunders was very anxious that a hole on Romaine Street in front of Mr. McWilliam's residence be filled up, and he also wanted the drain at Aylmer and Romaine streets fixed so that the water will run into the storm drain, and not leave a pond after every rain storm.

The street commissioner will give the matter attention.

More Gas

The Ontario Hydro Electric Commission were given permission to instal mains on Smith and Parnell streets.

More Poles

The Bell Telephone Co. asked that they be allowed to put up poles on certain streets to give increased service. The city engineer recommended that the request be granted, and it was approved of.

Reported Against

The city engineer reported against the numbering of the streets instead of calling them by name as at present. The city was too irregularly laid out to permit of a satisfactory working plan.

The matter was laid over for future consideration.

Will Be Considered

The request of the Trades and Labor Council that the streets of the city be designated by names on the corners instead of on the sidewalks will be considered at a later date. The letter will be acknowledged.

NO CONVENTION FOR FIRE CHIEF

COUNCIL REFUSES TO PAY EXPENSES TO PORT ARTHUR.

The Dominion Fire Chiefs Convention opens today at Fort William and Port Arthur.

At the meeting of the Board of Works last night all the aldermen were present and Ald. Dobbin introduced the subject of sending the Fire Chief to this meeting. Fire Marshall Heaton is going to deliver a lecture on the Quaker Oats Fire.

Ald. Smith thought that as Chief of Police Thompson had been given a trip to the Police Chiefs' Convention at Quebec it was only becoming that the Fire Chief should go to the Fire Chiefs' Convention.

He moved that the chief be allowed to attend and that the city contribute $50.00 towards the expenses of the trip. Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion.

Acting Mayor Duncan and Ald. Langford would not send the Chief unless he was sent properly, and the city could not afford a heavy expense at this time. Both pointed out that $50 would barely cover travelling expenses.

The motion was defeated on a 5 to 4 vote. Ald. McIntyre, Smith, Dobbin and Stratton supporting it.

POTATO SPECULATORS LOSE

Values Cut in Half in Maritime Provinces

People who have been hoarding hundreds of barrels of potatoes for months awaiting for higher quotations than that prevailed, may be much disappointed before long, as it is expected that instead of "spuds" soaring higher they will gradually drop until citizens can purchase at a most reasonable figure, says The St. John Standard.

A gentleman who recently visited a farmer, within a few miles of the city, was shown a bin full of potatoes containing more than one hundred barrels. The owner said he had been offered seven dollars per barrel for the lot but he would not sell as he was going to hold off until he got ten dollars, and he was sure the quotation would reach that mark before a great time.

Farmers and merchants who refused seven dollars a barrel for potatoes some time ago are now of the opinion that they made a big mistake that they did not sell when the selling was good, as it is stated that the wholesale price they were selling for a few days ago was two dollars per barrel. When the steamers arived at Indiantown from up river, city merchants were able to purchase potatoes as they landed for $2.50 per barrel, which was half a dollar less than the day previous.

WHY WILLIE QUIT THE JOB.

His Part in the Making of a Cherry Pie Much Too Strenuous.

WILLIE had resigned his position in the big bakery, where he labored in the pie department, and had gone to work in a carpenter's shop for smaller wages. The social investigator, having heard about Willie, questioned him.

"Aren't you sorry you left the bakery and came to this shop?" she asked kindly.

"No'm," Willie answered quickly.

"But you get less money."

"Yes'm."

"Well, what was the matter with the bakery?"

"'Twuz this way," explained Willie. "It hurt my mouth. I wuz in de pie part, de cherry pie part, an' I had to stone cherries. An' dey've got a rule over there dat all de boys has to whistle all de time dey's workin,' so as to show dey ain't eatin' no cherries."

Fun Ahead For Hubby.

"Have you any smokeless powder here?" she inquired as she made her blushing way to the cigar counter in the drug store.

"No," replied the polite cigar clerk, "we don't keep smokeless powder here."

"Oh dear! that's too bad. Do you know where I could get some?"

"At a gun store perhaps, but would you mind telling me what you want it for?"

"I want to mix it with my husband's tobacco so he won't smoke up the house with that old pipe of his," she replied, with the air of one who had solved a great problem.—Springfield Union.

Ontario's First Hotel.

The old Caer Howell Hotel, opposite the General Hospital on University avenue, Toronto, which has recently been torn down, was the first old-world tavern erected in Ontario. It was built in 1837, and for many years the historic old hotel was the social centre of Toronto's elite. The tavern was at one time much used by university men.

CHEEES PRICE GIVEN LINDSAY DOES NOT EQUAL

PETERBORO BOARD'S SALE PRICE LAST WEEK AND SALESMEN KICK.

At the Lindsay Cheese Board yesterday the board was sold at 20¼c.

A letter was read from Mr. Gillespie, showing that the recent high prices paid for cheese were declining, and that there would be a congtstion on the market in two weeks.

The bidding was opened by Mr. Gillespie at 20c, and quickly was advanced to 20⅝c. Beyond this price Mr. Gillespie was reluctant to go. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed by the sellers at the lowness of Lindsay prices in comparison with those paid at Peterboro board.

The final decision was to split the board. Flavelles Ltd. taking N. Ops., N. Harvey and Bobcaygeon at 20⅛c. and Mr. Gillespie the rest.

The board then adjourned, to meet again in three weeks.

Faithful Lover.

Of all the girls that I have known
(And you know how girls vary)
I've lost my faithful heart alone
Unto my charming Mary.

I loved her as a little tot,
And then I called her "Maisie."
Her proper name I have forgot—
My memory grows hazy.

I loved her as we older grew.
'Twas then I called her "Maybelle."
I thought that we should marry too
As soon as we were able.

But fate, alas, forced us apart!
Fate is a cruel lady.
Another Mary won my heart,
Although I called her "Maidee."

To Mary Smith and Jones and Brown
And others in succession
My Mary loving heart bowed down
And found renewed expression.

I've lost of Marys quite a score,
Of love I am not wary,
But ever, as I said before,
I've faithful been to Mary.

The Ties That Bind.

The world is so full of a number of things,
Of ball games and players and prize fights and rings
I sometimes regret that I can't see them all—
But wifie reminds me of more things than ball.

I list to the infant, its cries rend the air,
And still the fool kid hasn't one single care;
I'd just like to go to the ball game, that's all,
But then I'm reminded by bawl, bawl and bawl.

Well, Hans Wagner is still the same old Hans. He whacks the pill almost to pieces, but still the Pirates can't get ahead. There was a time when Wagner was the whole Pittsburg team but that day seems to have passed, too.

Ban Johnson is today umpiring a game between old Chicago players for the benefit of the Red Cross. Let's know how you like it, Ban. And please, don't anybody throw any bottles.

Ferdie Schupp, the Giant's star pitcher, has certainly got the other National League teams scared to death. That's half the game, Ferdie.

Outfielder Vick, formerly of the Memphis club, is giving signs of becoming a fine player. The Yankees have gobbled him up and Memphis regrets his going.

Birmingham will lose its star pitcher in September. That young man is Carmen Hill, who has been doing remarkably good work for the southern city. So good in fact, that the Pirates have decided to recall him, for Hill belongs to them.

Do you hear that loud roar? It is coming from the players of the American Association, who have heard with anguish that their salaries will be cut fifty per cent. next season. There will be a lot of automobiles standing idle in the barn next year.

Grouchy Gus Says:

"I know a guy who would have cashed a good bet on Aristobolus, only he didn't know how to tell the wicket-keeper the name of the horse."

Ship building ought to be a profitable occupation just now, and Duster Mails, who has just taken up that work, will likely soon be sporting a new automobile. He got the job right after he retired from professional baseball recently, and is now in Seattle. He was only in the major leagues a short time, but managed to horn in on some world's series money.

Johnny Evers' Birthday.

Accident has done many a good turn to many a man, but never more than it did to Johnny Evers, for it was by accident that he broke into professional baseball. He was born in Troy, N.Y., July 21, 1883. He is an ambidextrous player, or in plain English, he uses both hands in the game, likewise his head. He bats left and throws right handed. He played his first professional game with Troy in 1902. He got into that game because a player failed to report, and as he says himself, he might still be working in a collar factory if it hadn't been for that accident. Then came the time when the Cubs were short a pitcher. Frank Sallee heard that a corking good twirler could be had at Troy, so he began negotiations. An exhibition game was staged so that Sallee could see how the pitcher, whose name was Hardy, comported himself. He did well, and Sallee offered $1000 for him. The Troy club refused the offer, demanding $1500. Sallee finally decided to accept on condition that "that kid who played short" would be thrown in. The kid was Johnny Evers. The bargain was closed, to the great delight of the Troy club, which was glad indeed to get rid of "that pest" Evers. That's how Johnny broke into the big leagues. He has since taken part in five world's championship games, and with Tinker and Chance formed one of the greatest infields that was ever known. He is now holding forth with the Philadelphia Nationals, and today is receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

Ward Miller's days are over. Fielder Jones has decided to let this outfielder go, and he will have to try his luck elsewhere. Miller incidentally was the object of considerable discussion and quite a little condemnation when he jumped the Cubs for the St. Louis Feds.

Barney Dreyfuss is holding on like grim death to Max Carey. Several National League clubs are after him tooth and nail, but for the present it looks as though he would continue to operate with the Pirates.

Pugilistic Annals.

1819 Dan Donnelly beat Tom Oliver at Crawley Hurst, England, in twenty-six rounds. According to the standards of the day, there was a huge amount of money bet on this match, and it is estimated that half a million dollars changed hands.

1908—Sam Langford knocked out Joe Willis in two rounds at New York.

DELIGHTFULLY COOL ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Steamship Express leaves Toronto 2 p.m. each Wednesday and Saturday, making direct connection at Port McNicoll with either steamship Keewatin or Assiniboia for Sault Ste. Marie, Port Arthur or Fort William. Particulars from C. P. R. ticket agents or W. B. Howard, D. P. A., Toronto.

A Recent Arrival.

A Scotsman, recently arrived, was chatting with a friend over conditions overseas, says The Toronto Mail and Empire. The new arrival told feelingly of the terrible toll of war upon the fair land of Scotia, the sad tale of young men killed and maimed, the sufferings of the families left behind. "Why, mon, we're just plum distract wi' it all," he concluded. "And, I suppose, the war has caused the price of provisions to go up in Scotland as well as everywhere else?" commented the questioner with sympathy. "Aye, mon, ye're richt," agreed the visitor. "Provessions has gone up in price four shillings a bottle the ane sort and saxpence a quart the ither."

A Tablet to Champlain.

At "The Narrows" bridge, between Lakes Couchiching and Simcoe a tablet was unveiled by Hon. J. L. Decarie on August 17th, 1915, the inscription on which reads as follows: "1615-1915. Samuel de Champlain. The intrepid French explorer who led the first expedition of white men into central Ontario stayed at this strait, now known as 'The Narrows' to fish with his Huron allies, before setting out on the famous expedition against the Iroquois in September, A.D. 1615. Erected August 17, A.D. 1915, the three hundredth anniversary of the arrival of Champlain and his ten companions at Cahiague, the Huron capital, which was in this neighborhood."

EVEN AS YOU AND I.

A pitcher there was, and he left his home.
Even as you and I;
With his nerve and his mitt and his ivory dome—
Even as you and I.
In a major league he would seek his fame;
He'd be a star in the national game.
And the world's respect he would soon obtain—
Even of you and I.

He worked him out in the summer's sun,
He sweat like you and I;
And miles and miles he was forced to run,
'Till he thought he'd surely die.
For all the fat dwelt not in his bean.
The manager labored to make him lean,
So he'd for the opening game be keen—
Keen as you and I.

The season opened on a balmy day,
Even for you and I;
The crowd went wild when the umps said play.
Even did you and I.
He toed the slab with an air of grace;
The first ball over the plate found place—
That pellet was knocked into infinite space,
Fast as a bird could fly.

They took him out and they sent him home,
With his nerve and his mitt and his ivory dome,
And his well-framed alibi.
Now he has a job where the pumpkins grow,
And says to himself as he wields the hoe:
"I'd of won that game if they'd give me a show"—
Even as you and I.

The Play's the Thing.

"Is Hamme Fatte much of an actor?"

"I've seen him when I thought he was the greatest player I ever saw before."

"That must have been a good many years ago."

"No, only last week."

"Rats! He can't play anything."

"Well, you let him play Poker some time in 'A Quiet Game' and see if he can't do the part in a way to make you sit up and hate to give him the glad hand."—New York Herald.

Down in Frog Hollow.

"Could I have a glass of ice water?" asked the weary broom peddler as he climbed up to the editorial rooms of the Frog Hollow Enterprise.

"Yeou could not!" drawled the editor as he lighted his traditional corncob.

"And why not?"

"Waal, because thar don't happen to be any ice water here. Last week I read that ice water stopped the circulation, and I ain't running any such chances."—Chicago News.

Shot Golden Eagles.

Two golden eagles were bagged recently by two sons of W. J. Hawkins at Strome, Alta. One was shot with a rifle and was mutilated so badly that it will not be mounted. The other was caught in a trap and is still alive. A third one has been seen in the neighborhood. The golden eagle is a rare species in the Canadian West.

THE MEDDLESOME WREN.

Something About a Bird That All Canadians Know.

Late one afternoon when I was busy in the garden near the end of the vineyard where there was a bird-box, I suddenly heard the loud, emphatic note of a bluebird mingled with the chiding cackle and chatter of a housewren. I saw the bluebird dive savagely at the wren and drive him into a currant-bush, where he would scold and "sass back," and then break out in a shrill, brief song. Presently a female oriole came and joined the bluebird in persecuting the wren, which answered back from its safe retreat in the bushes with harsh chatter and snatches of tantalizing song. The bluebird took up his stand on the grape-post that supported the bird-box in which the wren had a nest, and from this outlook he grew eloquent in his denunciation of wrens. His loud, rapid voice and the answering cackle of the wren attracted the attention of their bird neighbors. Four robins came, one after another, and perched on the tops of surrounding posts, silent but interested spectators. A male oriole came, a cat-bird came, two song-sparrows came, and then a male goldfinch perched near by. The birds were evidently curious to know what all this altercation was about—very human in this respect.

After the bluebird had eased his mind a little about wrens, he dropped down to the box, and, clinging to the entrance to the nest, looked in. Instantly the wren was on his back, scolding excitedly. The bluebird turned to seize him, but was not quick enough, and there was a brown streak, with a blue streak close behind it, to the nearest currant-bush, in which the wren again chattered and sang in derision. The bluebird again resumed his perch above the nest and was louder and more emphatic than ever in his protests. It was really very amusing to see the bluebird stand up so straight there on the post, like a stump orator, delivering his phillipic against the wren. His whole bearing and tone expressed indignation and an outraged sense of justice. I fancied him saying: "My friends and neighbors, I want to bear witness before you of the despicable character of this chattering, skulking, impudent house-wren. He is an intolerable nuisance. He crosses my path daily. Every honest bird hates him. He fills up the boxes he cannot occupy with his rubbish, and assaults me if I look into them and criticize his conduct. He is sly and meddlesome, and a disturber of the peace. He has the manners of a blackguard and the habits of a thief and a despoiler. His throat and tongue are brass, and his song is as harsh as the twigs he makes his nest of. I ask you to join me in putting him down." His audience listened and looked on with interest, I will not say with amusement. The humor of the situation probably appealed to me alone. The birds were only anxious to find out if a possible common danger threatened them all. But to me the situation had an element of comedy in it, and made me laugh in spite of myself.

Canada's Eligible Men.

Sir Edward Kemp recently made public figures showing the number of men in Canada available from the ages of twenty to forty-five, according to the 1911 census. Widowers and divorced men are included as single, and those whose conjugal condition is unknown are classified as married. It is estimated by the Government that the increase in the male population between the ages mentioned since 1911 is between three and four hundred thousand. As approximately this number has been already recruited, the figures of 1911, it is thought, reflect rather closely present conditions as a whole, though changes have undoubtedly occurred in individual Provinces.

Between the ages of 18 and 45 there were 760,453 single men and 823,096 married. By Provinces they were divided as follows:

Provinces.	Single.	Married.
Prince Edward Island	8,051	6,791
Nova Scotia	42,667	45,984
New Brunswick .	28,056	33,199

Manitoba	55,999	57,372

The first three classes called by the Borden bill would, for the whole of Canada, on the basis of the 1911 census, include 524,735 single men, from whom the exempt would have to be deducted.

Memorial for Indians.

By way of perpetrating the bravery of the fallen heroes of the Six Nations Indians in this war, the Women's Patriotic League of the Six Nations has decided to erect a suitable memorial. Lieut. Cameron Grant, of Hamilton, was one of the first of these heroes to lay down his life, having been killed at Langemarck in 1915, and his former employer in Hamilton has forwarded to the Women's League a cheque for a substantial sum, which has been placed in a Brantford bank as a nucleus for the fund in question. It is thought that the memorial will be erected in or near Brantford.

Indians "Potted" Food.

There is some probability in the suggestion that we owe our system of potted foods to the Indians, who for many years have dried venison, pounded it into a paste, and pressed it into cakes for winter food.

First Mass in Ontario.

The first occasion that the Roman Catholics held mass in Ontario was on August 15th, 1615. It was celebrated at the spot on Georgian Bay near Penetanguishene, where the village of Lafontaine now stands.

Two Strong Austrian Poles.

The Poles are still divided in their war sentiments. In spite of the Russian revolution and the pledge of independence it brought to the Polish nation, a considerable number of Poles entertain pro-German sentiments. Recently one of the leading Austrian Poles, Leon Bilinski, created a sensation by declaring in the Reichsrat that an independent Poland, including Galicia, should be incorporated under the sceptre of a kaiser, presumably meaning that either the German or Austrian Kaiser should be crowned King of Poland.

The man who made this proposal is a statesman of first rank. Bilinski was Minister of Finance in the Austrian Cabinet some years ago. He is the president of the Polish Parliamentary Club in the Austrian Parliament. This body voted for the imperial budget after Bilinski's declaration, which found favor in government circles, thus going on record as supporting Emperor Charles. Bilinski was also up to a short time ago chairman of the Polish Supreme National Committee. This committee was formed early in the war to lead the movement for the restoration of Poland, and was regarded by the Poles as their chief executive body.

At the other extreme of the Austrian Poles stands Ignace Daszynski, the leader of the Polish Socialists. He represents the elements which look toward the defeat of the Central Powers as the only sure guarantee of a reunited Poland. The Russian upheaval added much force to Polish Socialism. His resignation from the Polish Parliamentary Club, which took place last year, had an important effect on the Teutonic governments, as it amounted to a clear warning that radical Poland would no longer identify itself with the groups supporting the policies of the Central Powers.

The service was attended by a great many friends and relatives of both parties and particularly of the bride, who was a very popular member of St. Peter's parish as well as a favorite of the citizens generally. A large number of friends from outside points were on hand to witness the ceremony. Miss Lillian Hurley presided at the organ and played Lohengrin's Wedding March during the procession to the alter, and Mr. E. Hanrahan sang "Ave Marie" and "O Salutaris."

The bridesmaid was Miss Maud Mabel Morrow, a sister of the bride, and the groomsman was Dr. Boyle, of Toronto.

ARTILLERY DUEL NOW RAGING

LOCAL RESIDENTS SIGN A CALL FOR WIN-THE-WAR CONVENTION

Gathering Will be Held in Toronto August 2nd and 3rd and is Non-Partisan Both Parties Being Represented by Signers---National Government One of the Aims.

Messrs J. A. Aylmer, W. H. Dunsford, R. B. Rogers, Ryerson Ritchie, J. C. Shook, and Joseph Wearing are among the Peterborough residents who have signed a call for a win-the-war convention, province-wide in its scope, and which it is proposed to hold in Toronto August 2nd and 3rd. This call has so far been signed by 125 of Ontario's most prominent citizens. The executive who have the matter in charge explain that owing to the need for haste many persons could not be reached, especially those in distant parts of the province, but their help and support is counted on.

It will be noted that the move is entirely non-partisan. Both political parties are represented by the local citizens who have signed the call, every one of whom has been especially active in patriotic work ever since the necessity for it arose.

This convention means holding a preminent gathering on the same lines as the one proposed for this riding some time ago and with the same end in view, the winning of the war without regard to politics.

Objects of Convention..

The objects of the organization, as will be laid before the convention when it meets are fourfold:

(1) That Canada shall dedicate all her resources of men and means to the winning of the war.

(2) That if we are to justify our national existence, to succor our living and be worthy of our dead, conscriptive measures be immediately adopted and enforced to maintain the strength of our forces at the front and to discharge our full duty in the existing emergency.

(3) That a national non-partisan Government be established for the vigorous prosecution of the war.

(4) That all patriotic elements in the country which place winning of the war above all other considerations be united, to the end that their strength may be made effective to overcome selfishness and indifference, and that the people of Canada may be dedicated anew to their high destiny of service in the war.

"Deeming it esantial for the welfare of Canada," the call concludes, "that all citizens of Ontario who share these beliefs shall have an opportunity of expressing their adherence to these principles and of insuring their enforcement, we, therefor, invite all public-spirited citizens of whatever political faith to attend an Ontario convention in Toronto."

Mr. John M. Godfrey is the Chairman of the Win-the-war Convention, and Mr. Henry W. King Recording Secretary. Citizens desiring to be enrolled for this convention should send in their names.

C. R. BANKS WILL PRESENT BICYCLE TO CANDIDATE

Who Made Highest Stand at Entrance Examination---List of Winners of Burnham Watches With Dates of Presentation.

Mr. C. R. Banks, proprietor of the Banks Garage and dealer in bicycles, some months ago offered a $40 bicycle as a prize to the boy or girl in Peterborough County who made the highest standing at the entrance examination.

Bertie Giroux, a pupil of St. Peter's School, was the ranking candidate among those who wrote at the entrance examination in this city. This entitles him to the Burnham gold watch and to the Nicholl Scholarship which means free tuition. Miss Stella Huston of S. S. No. 16, Otonabee, took the highest place among the candidates outside of the city and not only won a Burnham watch but the county prize, which is given yearly. Both of these pupils are of the same age, 12 years. It is not yet clear which of them is entitled to the Banks bicycle but when the point is settled the new prize will be presented, probably on the same occasion as the watch is awarded.

Capt. Burnham is in the city, leaving for home as soon as the Conscription Bill was disposed of by passing the third reading and before he returns to Ottawa will present the prizes to all those who have won watches, one in every township in the riding and one in the city. At the public meetings to be held for this purpose in each place Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M. L.A., will attend on the invitation of Capt. Burnham. These occasions are always certain to draw a large attendance and to arouse a good deal of interest among the friends of education.

The Winners This Year.

The following are the winners of the Burnham watches for this year as per returns made by Inspector Lees, Odell and Broderick.

Peterborough (city)—Bertie Giroux

South Monaghan, S. S. No. 3.—Roy Rutherford winner, to be presented on Thursday or Friday evening of this week.

Ennismore, S. S. No. 2.—Leo Flood winner, to be presented Monday evening, July 30th, at the Town Hall.

Smith, S. S. No. 3.—Miss Audrey Milburn winner, to be presented Tuesday, July 31, at the school house.

North Monaghan — Robert Allan winner, May's school house, to be presented Wednesday evening, August.

Harvey—Return not in yet. Will be presented Thursday evening, August 2nd.

Galway—Return not in yet. Will be presented Friday evening, August 3.

Last year owing to the absence of Capt. Burnham on military service in Europe, the watches were presented by Judge Ruddy, Mr. Gillespie acting as chairman on each occasion.

CONSCRIPTION BILL CARRIED IN COMMONS BY MAJORITY OF 58

GERMAN PEOPLE HAVE FAITH YET IN SUB WARFARE

They Believe England Can Be Starved but That It Will Take Time.

PIRACY IS THE ONLY HOPE

No Big Offensive Actions Are Expected by Troops on Any Fronts.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, July 25. -- The German people are still convinced that unrestricted submarine warfare will succeed, says the Berlin correspondent of the National Tidenden, if it is given sufficient time and the Germans themselves prove able to hold out. Miscalculation is generally admitted, notwith regard to the amount of tonnage sunk, but as to the time required to make its effect felt in England. It was this consideration and the thought of the enormous cost of another six months of war which caused the majority in the eigners, the slackers and teh anti-con-Reichstag to line up in a bid for peace.

The Galician campaign is regarded as accidental, and any big offensive is frankly admitted as out of the question, but there is no doubt the German front can hold out. The Berliner Tageblatt reprints Lloyd George's speech in full, explaining that the papers in the opposite camp had printed distorted summaries. Criticism by the Berlin press of the new German chancellor's speech corroborated Lloyd George's utterance.

In a New York inventor's crate for shipping eggs by mail they are wrapped in a continuous band of paper in such a way that each one is supported in a sort of hammock.

Division is Practically Same as on Second Reading, Twenty Two Liberals Voting With Government---Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes One Last Effort to Defeat Measure

Ottawa, July 25.—Amid great enthusiasm the house of Commons passed the conscription bill by a majority of 58. Twenty-two Liberals voted with the government, and the Nationalist members present voted with the opposition, and the result was substantially the same as upon the second reading of the bill. The measure will be at once sent up to the senate and should become the law of the land within a few days. As finally drafted, the law comes into force as soon as it receives the royal assent.

Take Leave of Laurier.

The debate upon the third reading was brief, but spirited. J. G. Turriff of Assiniboia, a life-long Liberal, who voted for the second reading, but took no part in the debate at that time, opened the discussion in an earnest address, in which he declared the winning of the war to be the supreme issue, and took his formal leave of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was followed by Hugh Guthrie, Liberal member for South Wellington, and Fred Pardee, for many years chief Liberal whip, who reaffirmed their devotion to the principle of conscription and dissociated themselves from the recent Liberal conference at Toronto. The report of that conference, as given to the press, was denounced by them as misleading and inaccurate.

Laurier on Defensive.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier followed in a lengthy defence of his position and warned the house and the country of the dire results that would follow the enforcement of the conscription law. He demanded that the majority rule in Canada and protested against the proposed disfranchisement of naturalized German and Austrian voters. The Liberal leader was in better form than he was when he spoke upon the second reading of the bill, and many of his statements were loudly cheered by the section of the opposition still faithful to him.

Meighen's Denunciation.

Solicitor-General Meighen closed the debate with a speech that roused the supporters of the government to great enthusiasm. He denounced Sir Wilfrid as willing to disfranchise the soldiers while insisting upon naturalized voters of German and Austrian origin taking their full part in the coming election. He said the prime minister's offer of coalition was still open, and he hoped that Sir Wilfrid would come forward with the progressive wing of his party to form a national government, instead of hanging back with the reactionaries, the foreigners, the slackers and the anti-conscriptionists. Upon division the third reading of the bill carried: Yeas, 102; nays, 44.

Liberals Break Away.

The Liberals who supported the bill were: Messrs. Graham, Pardee, Guthrie, Carvell, A. K. Maclean, Turriff, Charlton, Knowles, Nesbitt, McCoig, McCraney, Levi Thomson, Champagne, Buchanan, Clark, Ross, MacMillan, Neely, Cruise, Douglas, W. H. White and MacNutt, 22 in all, which was four fewer than on the second reading. The Nationalists who voted against the bill were: Messrs. Patenaude, Bellemare, Girard and Barrette. Mr. Achim, who voted against the bill, has sat on the Liberal side since the second reading. Mr. Kyte did not vote, and did not state whether he was paired or not.

EIGHTY MEN ARE REPORTED LOST IN MINE EXPLOSION

Accident in Dominion Coal Company's Property in Cape Breton---Rescue Party Now at Work and Hope to Save Some of Those Entombed.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, July 25.—Eighty workmen were killed today in an explosion at No. Six Mine of the Dominion Coal Company at New Waterford, Cape Breton. According to advices received here from Sydney, twelve bodies had been recovered at noon.

Rescue Parties at Work.

Montreal, July 25.—Advices to the officials of the Dominion Coal Co. here this afternoon were to the effect that seventy men are missing as a result of the explosion in Pit No. 12 at New Waterford. Rescue parties have been organized, the advices say, and it was hoped to get out a large number of the missing alive.

56 MEN ENTOMBED.

Halifax, July 25. — Authentic reports from Glace Bay say the loss of life will not be so heavy as at first thought. The explosion occurred in a section of the mine in which some fifty-six men were working. Five of these, four of whom are still alive, have been taken out of the mine. The remainder are still in the mine. Some of the rescue party were overcome by gas and brought out unconscious. The rescued have returned to their work, however, and hope to be able to rescue the imprisoned men. Some are already dead, the rescue party when it first entered the mine, having seen the bodies lying in the galleries.

MRS. MORRIS WOULD STOP WASTE OF BREWERS' GRAIN

Speaks in Convention in Toronto in Favor of Prohibition for England---People Want Bread Not Beer.

At the Food Conservation Convention in Toronto, at which Peterborough is represented by Mesdames F. C. Neal, W. R. Morris and A. Stevenson, Mrs. Morris made an address yesterday in favor of the prohibition of the use of grain for the manufacture of liquor in England. The matter was brought up by Mrs. Chas. Crowe of Guelph, who said in part:

"Is it reasonable to ask the women of Canada to practise any more economy in their homes, where the average woman has always practised economy, until this other terrible waste is stopped, the waste of the millions of bushels of grain being used up in the breweries and distilleries.

"We are told that spirits are needed in the manufacture of alcohol. We have twenty million gallons of spirits in bond that can be used for this purpose, and release both the grain and the men employed in making the liquor. This is the leakage in the breadpan, and it is for the Government to deal with this side of the food question fearlessly and quickly at home while we do our share of food conservation."

"I wish to support very strongly what Mrs. Crowe has said," declared Mrs Reid, of Tillsonburg, coming to the platform. "We heard grand messages last night from Mr. Hanna and from the Mother Country. We are not supposed to criticize our mothers, but this matter has been mentioned so frequently that we may be permitted to send a message to our mother. The waste in Canada is nothing in comparison. Almost the entire Dominion is now white, the whole of Russia is white, France is streaked with white—and the British Isles are black.

Give Them Bread, Not Beer.

"There are over there 150,000,000 gallons of spirits, and that should suffice for their munitions. They are using 180 tons of grain and 100 tons of sugar a day for the making of liquor. The total destruction equals six quarter loaves of bread a day. They say they must have beer. We say they must not have beer—they must have bread."

Mrs. Morris Speaks.

Mrs Morris supported both speakers, and suggested that a message of protest be forwarded from the convention to the Government, and then that the matter be considered closed while the women further discussed immediate action on their own part in the conservation of food.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1917

THE BILL PASSES.

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL passed its third reading in the House yesterday by a majority of 58 as against 63 on the second reading some weeks ago. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in a long speech, made a final effort to defeat the measure. Twenty-two Liberals voted with the Government, or seven less than the number who sided with the majority on the second reading.

Neither this nor the fact that the total majority shows a falling off of five votes can be taken as an indication that there has been any marked change of sentiment among the members. On the second reading there were 173 votes cast altogether. Yesterday the number who voted was 146, so that, all things considered, the support of the bill has not really fallen off.

The fate of the measure now rests with the senators, and the action of the Upper House will be awaited with interest.

DRINKING IS HAVING.

THE MAN WHO DRINKS liquor has it in his possession, whether the place in which he has acquired it is one in which liquor can be legally kept or not, under the terms of the Ontario Temperance Act. That point has just been settled by the County Magistrate's Court after a postponement and a brilliant display of legal talent exercised in an attempt to prove the contrary. The decision is far-reaching in its effects. It adds another buttress to the prohibiting law, and is one which the man who still indulges will do well to note if he would avoid future trouble for himself. It is the first time that such a case has been brought up, locally at least, since the Act was amended at the recent session of the Legislature.

A Havelock man with a bottle of whiskey dropped into the backyard of a neighbor and treated him to a drink from his supply. Inspector Stewart had both arrested on a charge of having liquor in an illegal place. The attorney for the defence took the ground that the man who drank the liquor did not in the meaning of the Act have it in his possession, that holding the bottle in his hand long enough to refresh himself did not constitute ownership. Inspector Stewart was there with the amendment and won his point. The usual fine of $200 with costs was imposed, and the point is now definitely settled for all time.

The amendment to the Act is perfectly clear. It says that any man who drinks liquor in an illegal place, that is in other than a private residence, is in the same position as a man who keeps it in his barn, garage or some location specified as unlawful in the Act.

It seems to have escaped the attention of the general public that the Ontario Temperance Act has been so amended as to be more rigid than ever. It is almost impossible to traffic in liquor any longer without violating one or other of the provisions. When the law first was put in operation a man could have a flask or bottle in his pocket so long as the seal was unbroken. Now the courts have held that no one but a licensed common carrier has the right to transport liquor from the express office to a private residence. If the owner of that residence attempts to carry home his own supply he can be adjudged guilty of having liquor in an illegal place at any time while he is making the journey.

The Act is loaded, and what is more, it is being enforced in letter and spirit in this district. The temperance people are to be congratulated that the administration of the law rests with so zealous and fearless an officer as Inspector Stewart. He has always exerted himself to educate the public in the intricacies of the Act so that violation may be avoided. If any man in the future is fined for drinking liquor out of bounds he cannot claim that he transgressed unwittingly, for he has certainly been warned.

THE AGE OF THE AUTOCRAT.

WE HAVE a food controller now who is an autocrat in his department. He will dictate the nation's bill-of-fare, and his word is law. Desperate conditions call for desperate remedies, and in war time people are ready to submit to measures that they would in different circumstances regard as arbitrary and resist to the limit.

In the time of war the nation that lives under the sway of an autocrat whose will is supreme usually has the best of the contest in the matter of efficiency. No time is lost in useless argument such as prevails in a democracy where all classes claim the right to be heard. When the autocrat wants anything done he so decrees, and his mandate is carried out. He may be wrong, but at least he is prompt.

Canada has been attempting for three months to get a conscription act into operation. The progress made is slow, and in the meantime the necessity for some drastic method of raising recruits is daily increasing. The Premier is retarted rather than assisted by Parliament, just as Food Controller Hanna would be if placed in similar surroundings.

President Wilson, the head of the greatest democracy in the world, is assuming more and more the prerogatives of an autocrat, and, realizing the necessity of prompt action, the people show a disposition to submit without a murmur. Constitutional rights may be sacred, but when a nation is in danger valuable time may be wasted in insisting too strongly upon the maintenance of such rights.

In the United States the proposed shipbuilding program was held up by a difference of opinion as to whether the new vessels should be built of wood or iron. Pending a settlement of this dispute the work, so urgently needed, was suspended.

President Wilson has stepped in and demanded the resignation of the two officials who failed to agree. Men who will act instead of quarrel are put in their places, and the work of building vessels to take care of the nation's commerce will be proceeded with at once.

History, both ancient and modern, proves that in a crisis the most effective and prompt action is taken by the man who for the time being at least has absolute power. When Noah set out to build the ark, it was constructed of gopher wood according to plan. Shem, Ham and Japhet, so far as we are told, had no suggestions, but followed instructions. Had there been any difference of opinion the ark would never have been constructed on schedule time, and Noah and his family would probably have perished in the deluge.

When Gideon conscripted an army to repel the Midianites he was not fettered by the opposition of a faction that read the constitution to him at every turn. He took his own course. There was no vexatious delay, and he promptly and effectively achieved his purpose.

Representative government is designed for times of peace and prosperity. The same conditions that call for a suspension of civil law should induce the people of any commonwealth that is in danger to strain a point and submit to the rulings of master minds, to the dictates of a leader who rises in every crisis to save his people. A country's constitution may be the bulwark of the people's freedom, but there are times when finely spun theories should be shuffled to one side and replaced by energetic action.

TWO BATTLES.

THE GREATEST artillery battle since the war began is now raging in Europe. The Canadian troops are in the thick of it, and every day the ranks grow thinner as man after man is carried to the hospital or the cemetery. And none are ready to leave from Canada to take their places, beyond another draft now ready for service. When that is sent overseas reinforcements must stop.

The greatest parliamentary struggle this country has ever seen is in progress in Ottawa. Men chosen to represent the people are wasting precious time while their fellow-countrymen fall on the battlefields of Flanders.

The Hun is fighting the Canadian soldiers, but not more so than some of the latter's compatriots at home.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

BATHING in the Otonabee has been called a sport, but in such weather as this it becomes a matter of plain duty.

IS IT TRUE OR NOT that the Liberals at that Toronto conference restored Sir Wilfrid as Ontario leader? Absolutely.

• • •

THE CHURCH that has over ten thousand of its clergy in the graveyards in Flanders is not looking for exemption from military duty.

Wit and Wisdom

Their Only Agreement.

Papa (sternly)—Come here, sir! Your mother and I agree that you deserve a good whipping.

Small boy (sternly) — Oh, yes. That's about the only thing that you and mamma ever do agree about.

"Ma'am, here's a man at the door with a parcel for you."

"What is it, Bridget?"

"It's fish, ma'am, and it's marked C.O.D."

"Then make the man take it straight back to the dealer. I ordered trout."

Another David Harum.

"Look here," said the would-be follower of the hounds, "didn't you sell me this horse?"

"Well, sir, you're a swindler! That's what you are! I understood from you that this beast was thoroughly sound in wind and limb. I find after trying it, that it's spavined and blind, and got the staggers. And I want to know what you're going to do about it?"

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you the name of the best veterinary surgeon in the town. I simply can't stand by and see the poor beast suffer."

Warbled.

Tommy was at tea with his mother when she suddenly noticed that he was eating his apple jelly with his teaspoon.

"Tommy, dear," she reproved him, "you shouldn't eat your jelly with a spoon."

"But mummy, I must!" replied the youngster firmly.

"No, dear, you must not. Put it on your bread."

"I did put it on my bread, mummy," exclaimed Tommy promptly. "But it don't stay there; it's too nervous."

Wanted Credit For It.

"What makes that hen of yours cackle so loudly?" inquired Jenkins of his neighbor. "Why, they've just laid a cornerstone for the new parish room across the road and she's trying to make the neighbors think she did it."

She Looked Funny to Him.

"That woman who just went out as you came in, Silas, is a well-meaning little creature, but she has less sense of humor than any of my sex I know."

"Why, Samanthy, I thought just the other way. If she lacked the quality you mention she wouldn't dress as she does."

Followed Orders

A certain English foreman in one of the Kensington textile factories is in the habit of having an apprentice heat his lunch for him. The other day he called a new apprentice.

"Go down stairs and 'eat up my lunch for me," ordered the foreman.

The boy—a typical young American with no knowledge of cockney English—obeyed with alacrity. He was hungry.

Ten minutes later the foreman came down. He was also hungry.

"Where's my lunch?" he demanded.

The boy gazed at him in amazement.

"You told me to eat it up—and I ate it," he stated.

"I didn't tell you to heat it up!" roared the irate foreman, "I told you to 'eat it up."

"Well, I didn't heat it up," maintained the youngster, stoutly, "I ate it cold."

As It Comes

There is in the employ of a Brooklyn woman an Irish cook who has managed to break nearly every variety of article that the household contains. The mistress' patience reached the limit recently when she discovered that the cook had broken the thermometer that hung in the dining room.

"Well, well," sighed the lady of the house, in a resigned way, "you've managed to break even the thermometer, haven't you?"

Whereupon, in a tone equally resigned, the cook said:

"Yis, mum; and now we'll have to take the weather just as it comes, won't we?"

Was it because wash-day comes next to Sunday that somebody told how cleanliness is next to godliness.

RULES FOR MOTOR BOATS

The rules which govern motor boats, the enforcement of which rests with the Collector of Customs, are given below. Anyone can stand on the banks of the river near Rye's boat house and by taking observation see for himself whether or not these rules are violated:—

IN THE MANAGEMENT OF CITIES

Much good work has been done by the Russell Sage Foundation in connection with the surveys made of American cities, as for instance in the detailed information and suggestions of value that have resulted from the survey of Springfield, Ill. When, however, the Sage Foundation makes recommendations on questions of broad governmental policy deduced from that survey it appears to have ignored the best thought on subject and to have disregarded the lessons of experience.

In its latest bulletin on the Springfield situation, for example, the retention of the present commission plan of government is advised in preference to the city manager plan, with a further unwise suggestion for stratifying and increasing the defects of the commission system.

In Springfield the commissioners, except the one who is styled mayor, are selected merely as commissioners, and are assigned to their departments afterward. The Sage Foundation recommends the designation of each commissioner as head of a particular department at the time of his election by the voters. This virtually means choosing department heads by popular vote, and the scheme promotes rigidity and irresponsibility in government. Denver tried precisely that method, and gave it up because the friction among independent department heads made endless trouble.

Administrative power should not be divided. It should be centralized, and responsibility should be concentrated. That is what is done under the city manager plan, by which a legislative body chooses one executive head, who in turn appoints his subordinates.

ONTARIO'S CROP OUTLOOK

The following is a summary of the weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Fall wheat is ripening rapidly, and on the whole will be well headed. Spring wheat is also looking well. The midge is said to have done from 5 to 7 per cent. of injury to wheat in Welland. It is also reported in Haldimand, but as a slight attack. Other spring grains, especially barley, promise unusually well, although much of the straw is so rank that injury from "lodging" is feared should heavy rains come before cutting.

Hoe crops are very weedy, owing to the almost continuous rains of the previous two or three weeks. Corn is coming along rapidly now, but is about a fortnight late on the average.

Potatoes have done splendidly up to this week, blight is threatening the late crop. A change in the weather, however, may relieve the situation. All roots promise well, although much necessary weeding has been delayed owing to the land being too wet for working on.

Hay will be about an average yield, but some of it was caught by rain after being mown, and will be poorly cured. Some of the clover is said to be over-ripe, awaiting cutting. Delay caused by rains will cause some mowers to be running as late as August.

Cherries have done well. Apples will be light as a general crop. The codling moth is much less in evidence than last year, but scab is threatening some varieties, more especially those of the Fameuse and McIntosh Red type. Pears are doing better than apples. Owing to the rainy and cool weather at ripening, many strawberries were soft and unfit for market, but prices kept steady.

Vegetable gardens in both town and country are on the whole giving much satisfaction to the owners.

Live stock generally are in good condition. Swine are being disposed of in the usual numbers, but cattle are marketing very slowly. Milk is still in good flow, as the grass has been better than usual for the time of year. Cheese factories in Dundas pay from $1.85 to $1.90 per 100 lbs. for milk, with whey back, while the condensory is giving $2.25 straight for the milk. One report enthusiastically declares that the season will go on record as witnessing one of the largest outputs in the history or dairy production.

Urgent requests for help are being made from every section of the province. Some dissappointment is expressed at the extent of urban or holiday help actually offering or appearing, which is much below expectation. Rain has kept farm operations more or less at a standstill for some time, and there is now a great rush to catch up in haying and hoeing, with grain cutting imminent.

Daylight Saving Not for Canada

Only Two Members of the House Supported the Measure.

Ottawa, July 24. — Canada will have no daylight saving legislation. Sir George E. Foster submitted to Parliament the Government bill to move the hands of the clock an hour forward between the months of May and September. It was given a second reading by courtesy, on the suggestion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the discussion had beeter take place in the committee stage. Here the proposal struck scores of snags.

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

He flung his things into his boxes anyhow, locked them, and was on the station platform within half an hour from the moment he left her. Reaching Chancery Lane before mid day, he burst into Dwyer's office sans ceremonie.

"Hullo!" Dwyer cried. "Didn't think I was to see you before Monday."

"You're luckier than your deserts, then, for here I am. I've come to tell you to withdraw my offer for those shares."

"Lord!—what next?" Dwyer exclaimed, with heat. "You're a day behind the fair, my sweet and steady client. I made the offer yesterday, and the acceptance is probably posted by this time"

"No, it isn't. At least—I mean, I don't expect it is. Anyhow, you can wire withdrawing."

"Wire skittles! You're a feeding diet, Laurence Averil. I'll remind you that this is a business office, and I'm a business man, and I don't like these tom-fool tricks. If you really mean withdrawing, I'll give you our client's name and address, and you can go and do your dirty work yourself—and I wash my hands of you and your affairs henceforward. You're the middle and two ends of an infernal nuisance, and I'm about sick of you and your vagaries."

"Keep your hair on. I'll give you a bit of news, since you seem inclined to foam at the mouth. You needn't bother to withdraw unless you like. You're outbidden. Mortimer & Reingold have offered five hundred in place of our two."

"Whew! How did you find that out? What the deuce is up? What are you going to do?"

"Never mind how I found it out; it's so—and if you want to know what I'm going to do, I'll tell you, Pat, my dear, if you'll swear great oaths to hold your tongue."

"You're a client, I suppose. Go on."

"I'm going to Iceland to have a look at the ground. There's malachite there. That's what I was after. Miss Stewart—I know her name, you see—will call upon you for advice respecting the sale of her shares in the course of a day or two. Tell her to hang on to 'em like grim death until you hear from me. I'll wire you from Leith in the course of a fortnight or thereabouts, and you'll advise her accordingly. And you will take most particular care that my name does not transpire. Savvy?"

"What are you doing this for?"

"Spite, old dear. I owe M. & R. a trifle for outbidding me."

"If the deal's so good what's the sense of telling her to do anything but hang on?"

"I don't know how much of the stuff there is. See? Here's your chance—that's all you've to look at. [illegible]

Thanks to an unselfish friend of yours, you're going to be in a position to give advice that is of value, whereby shall you be mag-ni-fi-ed greatly. It's nothing to you if I've an axe to grind, is it?"

"Will the advice be of value?"

"If you follow my definite instructions it will be a very special article indeed. And now just see how much of my hundred's left, and give me a cheque for the balance. I resume rusticating forthwith."

"Tyrrell knows all about that. There's nothing but the rent to pay out of it, is there?" He left the room, to return in a few minutes with a slip of paper in his hand. "There you are, Laurence. Eighty quid left. You see I'm starting to put faith in you. But how on earth could Reingold have jumped to that price from just seeing those shares in my desk? Old man, I'm sorry."

"Don't you worry. You didn't give the show away, Pat. If you want to know, I shrewdly suspect the Fair Constantia has done us. As to those four or six shares you've got—you haven't taken for 'em, by the way, those you did pay for—I'll settle with you for 'em when I get back to Leith, and if the advice I send you is 'Hold on,' they're to be offered to Miss Stewart at par. If it's 'Sell,' chuck 'em in the fire. Good-bye, Pat, old man. It's been a rum sort of month, eh? Good-bye." He fled, leaving Dwyer, wild with surprise, calling to him to stay and explain—explain everything.

At Trafalgar Square he bought three postal orders for twenty shillings each and sent them to Mrs. Jardine enclosed in a letter card. "Please take care of my boxes till I send for them," he asked her, then registered and posted the package, and went out into the street, his month's folly definitely closed, finished, and dead.

The blank afternoon lay before him. There was nothing to do until the departure of the night mail for the north. "What shall it be?" he asked himself. "Moon around and visit the scene of past glories? Lunch at Rupert Street, and get softly sentimental about at? 'Fraid I'm not up to that yet. Better get drunk. Yes, that's the plan. Get tight enough to wish myself back at sea again—I've got to go there, whether I want to or not. Mustn't get run in, and mustn't forget that my bag's at Charing Cross cloakroom, but short of that—'Blithe as the song of a canary.' Good old Emerson!"

He drank, now steadily, now intermittently, until evening, but did not fail to remember his bag, and travelling by underground to King's Cross, spent the night at being whirled back to his purgatory at Leith—a purgatory now utterly and irrevocably stripped of any hope of paradise to follow.

He could not sleep. The whisky he had drunk turned to bright-eyed and preternaturally acute wakefulness, and the rattling of the train forbade even a moment's relaxation from his pain. As he sat in the carriage new tortures came one by one to burn and sear him. Marion, now rich, would be sought in marriage. Vivid imagination, strung up to concert pitch by alcohol, deprived him of no one single detail. How did the society notices begin? "We have it on the best authority that a marriage will shortly be solemnized between Miss Marion Stewart, daughter of the late Blank Stewart, Esq., of Somersetshire, and——" The prospective bridegroom's name necessarily was wanting, but the thought maddened him none the less on that account. Then would follow smug journalistic comments on Miss Stewart's romantic story. All the wretched tale of his father's downfall must inevitably be dragged up again. His part, too, would probably leak out—the son chosen by fate to replace the goods the father stole. No newspaper could resist such a temptation as that. He wondered where he would be when he read it or heard of it, if ever he heard of it at all, and even such a detail as the picture of a bundle of papers being thrown from the weekly steamer into his dinghy came vividly prophetic. Ah! but he wouldn't be at sea. He'd promised to go to the office now. But that was impossible. It must be the sea again. God send him a speedy drowning. If only he hadn't to go to Iceland he could drop it all now. It was only to open the door, make one step into the flying darkness, and be at rest. Work first, though. Once let him get that wire despatched, and there were a hundred ways of leaving it all behind.

From time to time a station flashed by with a roar and rattle and blur of lights, breaking the thread of his sullen musings, but always they began again at the same starting point—Marion herself. Again and again his mind would wander into the unknown, devising her [illegible] spent with another man; and each repetition gave him new and more maddening details—twisted fresh thongs of thought with which to lash his breaking heart. She need no longer wear winter dresses at midsummer now. Her means would allow her to dress as he would have wished her to. Being beyond all things fair, and rich as well, she would have many suitors, no one of them such a hard brute as himself, no one of them worshipping her so, but men who still retained the breeding and education he had lost—soft-handed liars, he thought to himself. And then, her marriage, and a happy life afterwards. He pictured her, loved and loving, a serene-eyed mother of children at five-and-thirty—in the prime of her married life. And then, just as he had completely forgotten all his surroundings, just as he felt he must dash his tightly gripped fist through the window, cutting and tearing his hand with the broken glass to relieve this other unbearable agony, flash would go another station by. At the start he would pull himself together with a gasp, breathe heavily once or twice, and begin the slow wheel of thought again, impotently raging, until the lights and noise of another station broke for a moment the unending succession of tortures.

He reached Leith about seven on Sunday morning, unshaven, wild-eyed, and haggard. Leaving his bag at Anstruther's, he went to Harper's house without making any attempt at a toilet, and entered its door for the first time since he had removed to the lower part of the town.

CHAPTER XIX.

Clement Harper was not yet up, a sleepy maid informed him, but she would announce his arrival. Meanwhile, would Mr. Averil wait in the dining room? He sat before the grate containing the ashes of the previous night's fire, feeling cold, lonely, and miserable. Whisky and a used tumbler stood upon the table beside a full ash-tray, and he threw some of the spirit into the dirty glass and drank it neat with a view to freshening his wits. When Harper came down—his dressing-gown was testimony to the urgency of the occasion—he smelled it directly and looked at Laurence coldly and keenly.

"It's ower early for drinkin'," he said sourly, as Laurence rose. "Ye're back sooner than I expected ye." Then, on sighting Laurence's haggard face, "Mercy on us a'! What's wrang wi' ye, mon?"

"Is it my beard?" Laurence asked stupidly, passing his hand over his blue chin.

"That? No. I see ye've taken it off—an' ye want a shave, too—but that's not it. Ye're a wreck, man alive. What ha' ye been doing?"

"I expect I do look cheap. I was drunk last night, and I couldn't sleep in the train—"

Harper made a gesture of anger.

"An' ye're nipping now, first thing in the morning! Ye fool! Ye weary me. What do ye want?"

"I want to borrow a trawler, Mr. Harper," Laurence began, humbly enough.

"For why?"

"I want to go to Iceland and back as quickly as ever I can. I want to get there before the Wednesday boat."

"Why don't ye ask to borrow the whole fleet? Ye've enough cursed impudence."

"It's not impudence—I don't mean it to be, at least. It's very important. I'll pay for crew and coal and the use of the boat."

"I'll see ye do—if I let ye have her. But, first of all, I want to know the meaning of this wild-goose chase."

"I can't tell you, Mr. Harper," Laurence said. He felt disheartened and unhappy. Full of the importance of his mission, and set upon its fulfilment as he was, he had never anticipated any opposition here. Yet now Harper seemed none too ready to oblige him, and without his aid he would be reduced to going by the passenger boat. That meant three days' delay, and, stupefied by drink and sleeplessness as he was, a fear that Mortimer & Reingold might send a representative by the same boat seemed little less than certainty.

"I can't tell you," he repeated. "It's not my business, Mr. Harper. I must have the boat."

"If it's none of your business, I'll not aid you in meddling with other people's," Harper said. "Ye'll get no boat from me. Ye're daft, man. Comin' here at this hour o' the morning to rout me out of my bed to borrow a trawler as cool as if ye were askin' for a light for your pipe! And then ye can't tell me why ye want it. Ye're drunk now, ye wastrel fool! I'm weary o' ye, Laurence Averil. I've done my best for ye. I've found ye a living for two years and offered ye a better. I gave ye a mouth to think over coming into the office, and after five weeks ye come back drunk—drunk, on a Sabbath morning and ask to borrow a trawler. What next'll ye do?"

"I'm not drunk," Laurence said steadily. "I've only had one drink—your whisky—since last night. I want to borrow a trawler for this one cruise. I shall be back in a fortnight—and that'll be within the seven weeks I asked you for—and then I'm ready to come to the office, if you're still inclined to have me there."

"I'm none so sure, I am. Ye look as if ye'd been drunk for a week, and unless ye drop the habits o' the fleet I've little use for ye. Now, about this trawler. Tell me why ye want it, and if there's any reason I choose to approve, ye shall have it. Ye'll pay crew and coal, as ye said, and ye'll pay me fifteen pounds over an' above for the use of the boat. If ye won't tell me why ye want her, ye won't have her—that's all."

"All right," Laurence said. "Then I must tell you. But promise to hold your tongue."

"I'll promise that; but, mind ye, I make no promise of letting ye have the boat. Go on."

"Do you remember selling those farms at Langholt to my father?"

"I do. Well?"

"You remember when Clitheroe was killed on the Westray? I went ashore to bury him, as you know, and whilst I was waiting there I went out to Uthild rock. I had the horrors on me that day, I think. I'd been drinking, and the boy's death upset me. [illegible] I sat down under the rock [illegible] was there I thought the stone lying around the rock looked to be queer stuff, and I kicked off a piece to bring home."

"Lava?"

"No—Nor anything like lava. There's the piece I kicked off." He handed it to Harper. "Is that lava?—you ought to know."

"It's no lava, certainly. It's——?"

"Malachite. That's what it is, if you want to know. I've been in London trying to buy the shares of the company. But the tale's leaked out somehow, and the price has got beyond me. It's not high now, but I can't pay it. And I want to go and see how big a deposit it is before doing anything further. As the story has got out of my hands I want to get away before anyone can go on the weekly passenger boat. See?"

"I see. Are you sure the stuff is malachite?"

"Certain. You can take that piece to an expert if you like."

"Who is the present owner of the shares?"

"A woman. She's—her father was the old chap my father cheated."

"And ye want to cheat the daughter? Father and son. Ye'll have no boat o' mine."

"Oh, hell!" Laurence raged. "must I tell you every cursed thing I'm trying to forget? Man alive, she's the world to me. I'd lie down and put her little foot on my throat. I was courting her—all I knew, when I found this business out—that she was the owner of the land. But she had another offer for the shares by the same post as mine—twice as much, too. And now I'm off to see what the find is worth. If it's all right, I shall tell her to hold on; if it's wrong, she can sell. Now, do you see, curse you?"

"I see. I'm sorry, Laurie, lad. Ye shall have the Columba. She's the fastest boat I have in harbor, and she was for sea to-morrow, so ye'll find her ready, coaled an'—an' all. Get away as soon as ye please."

"I want the gear out of her," Laurence said.

"As ye like. I wouldn't, if I were you. She's nigh as fast loaded as she is light—and if ye take out her gear ye'll need ballast."

"More coal'll do that."

"Ah! Ye mean shoving her along? Dinnae start a boiler tube. 'Mair haste, less speed,' ye know. The men'll not work to-day. Ye'll start at midnight getting the stuff out."

"I start within an hour from now," Laurence said. "The crew'll work if I tell 'em. If they won't, there'll be a few men down there that'll take their places for me. Give me a note to the skipper, Mr. Harper, and I'll go about my business. I want another drink to buck me up, and then I'm off."

Whilst Clement Harper wrote he drank again, for wretchedness and want of sleep were taking hold on him once more, and within the hour he was back at Anstruther's.

A knot of men were standing idling at the bottom of the wynd in which the house stood. He passed the door, and went down to them. Jock Menzies was amongst them, with three or four more he knew, but they all looked at him sullenly, without recognition.

"Morning," he said shortly. "Where's Guthrie?"

Menzies knew his voice, and looked at him with surprise. "It's Averil come back again," he said.

"It [illegible] Where's Guthrie—d'ye hear?"

"[illegible] Guthrie that ye want?" one [illegible]

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

A Poet From The Railway

Mr. C. J. Dennis and his home in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, N.S.W.

THE dangers of the Mediterranean route between Australia and England have induced a large number of Australians to pass through Canada, who otherwise might never have known this country, and have brought Australia into closer sympathy with the Dominion than ever before. Canadians also have learned to appreciate the Anzacs, and the increasing trade between these two junior partners of the British Empire, as shown in the record traffic of the Canadian Australasian service, is one of the bright sides of this war. There are many points of common touch—both are vast countries anxious for greater population and both are on the whole still mainly agricultural. The comparative absence of cabled news from Australia in Canadian papers is, however, a handicap against the knowledge of each other's social problems and progress, and Australian authors are as little known in Canada as Canadian writers are in the Antipodes.

One poet of Australia is, however, making headway here and deserves to be even better known—so vivid a picture does he give of the Australian larrikin in the terse vernacular of Adelaide. "Doreen and the Sentimental Bloke," which in its own country has run into the hundred thousands and has been put into a pocket edition for the soldiers in the trenches, threatens to rival even Robert Service (who like himself owes much to Kipling) in the affections of the Canadian reader, and though "The Moods of Ginger Mick," which has made a tremendous hit in Australia, has not yet been published in this country, stray copies pass from hand to hand and are greatly treasured. Ginger Mick is a peddler of rabbits who volunteers for the front and dies like a hero at Gallipoli. Dennis' "Backblock Ballads," descriptive of the people of the Australian bush and the settled country districts, are classics.

Dennis wrote "Doreen" in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, in a log cabin which he built himself after he had grown tired of being a Government official and a newspaper editor.

Just as the early days of construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway attracted men of all classes, some of which, such as Morley Roberts and Frederick Niven, have since made their mark in literature, so the building of the Australian railways provided a job at one time of his career for C. J. Dennis, who as a man handy with the axe and saw was able afterwards to draw pay as a carpenter. His father was a retired sea captain and a hotelkeeper with small appreciation of poetry. At one of the rockiest periods of his career the poet wired the publican "Send ten pounds, going Broken Hill," to which his father replied "Sending nothing, go to Hell." In spite of this lack of sympathy, Dennis became editor of the "Adelaide Critic," which he left to establish the "Gadfly," a saucy paper on the lines of New York "Life." This paper was once accused by a correspondent of sectarian bias. Dennis replied that the paper was controlled by an Anglican, a Roman Catholic, a Wesleyan Methodist and an Atheist, and gave it as his opinion that the Atheist was "the most religious man of the lot."

PROTECT MIGRATORY BIRDS

At the North American Conservation Conference, held in Washington, in 1909, and attended by representatives of Canada, Newfoundland, United States and Mexico, the international problems presented by the proper protection of natural resources were clearly recognised. With regard to migratory wild life the necessity for co-operative action is especially obvious. In Canada and the United States the protection of this invaluable resource is vested in the individual provinces and states, respectively. Protective laws were extremely diverse in both character and efficiency, with the result that the beneficial effects of adequate protection in one portion of the continent were largely nullified by the lack of similar measures in other sections. To secure stricter and more uniform protection negotiations between Canada and the United States were undertaken. The arrangement was satisfactorily concluded, the later ratification by the United States Senate constituting the final step. The treaty does not affect the administration of the provincial game laws, but insures in Canada, as in the United States, the minimum of protection regarded as essential to the permanent preservation of the wild life resources of North America.

SUPERSTITION IN JAPAN

Missionairies Have Had a Fight Against Popular Beliefs

An European writes: "Japan is popularly supposed to have one religion, Buddhism, and one quasi-religion, Shintoism, usually understood to be upheld by the authorities as a stimulus to patriotic thinking. But as a matter of fact there are nearly thirty different sects in the two religions. It is not heathen religions, however, which have to be fought, but the superstitions which cluster round them. Worship of a deplorable kind is practised in connection with many Shinto shrines. The tourist passes a Fox shrine by the wayside, and is impressed by its picturesqueness and sees little in it except a reason for a smile.

"There are Japanese at this day who keep serpents in cages and call them Udotsusama, 'honorable lord brazen serpent,' bowing before them in supplication. When we hobnob with the principal of the village school and he, with a cynical smile, says that the people are very ignorant, we should remember that in almost every village there are one or two soothsaying women called "Miko" who are consulted by otherwise intelligent men on every important step in business, and who have often more power than any priest or official over the actual lives of members of the community, acting not only with regard to the affairs of the living but rendering service as mediums between the living and the spirits of the departed, settling questions of property, marriage and divorce."

Compliment, Eh!

Little Johnny—Mrs. Talkemdown paid you a big compliment today.

Mother—Did she really? Well, there's no denying that woman has sense. What did she say?

Little Johnny—She said she didn't [illegible] little boy as I was.—Hartford Times.

A Sting to It.

"My wife made me a success," remarked the man.

"I am glad to hear you say that," declared his pastor.

"Yes; she has always wanted so many things that I've just had to hustle."—Kansas City Journal.

Why He Was Working.

"Had a puncture, my friend?" asked the passerby, with an air of interest. The chauffeur looked up and swallowed his feelings with a huge gulp.

"No, sir," he replied. "I'm just changing the air in the tires. The other lot's worn out, you know!"—Tit-Bits.

Saving Food.

"These summer girls say they would rather dance than eat."

"That suits me," declared the proprietor of the summer hotel. "Close the dining room an hour earlier and let the fiddlers tune up."—Kansas [illegible]

The Biggest Lie.

The Hun officer who had been taken prisoner offered his gold watch in exchange for his life being spared, and, as he insisted on it, the two Canadian Tommies who were his captors were nonplussed. However, one of them said that whoever told [illegible] watch, and if the prisoner could beat them in story-telling he was to keep the watch. First one Tommy was to tell his yarn, then the German prisoner, and finally the other Canuck. The first then started and told a story that was an absurd lie from beginning to end. Then their Teutonic captive commenced in slow terms: "There—was—once—a—Prussian gentleman—" "Here," cried the Canuck with resignation, "that settles it! Keep the watch!"

Our National Fathers.

The Department of Education in British Columbia is arranging to send through the Free Text Book branch a picture of the Fathers of Confederation reproduced from the original painting, which unfortunately was destroyed when the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa were burned, to all the schools of the province. Underneath the picture will be the key by which to identify the various figures in the group.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

CAN KEEP LIQUOR IN APARTMENT CELLAR

Sir Glenholme Falconbridge Reverses Decision of Hamilton Magistrate.

Hamilton, July 25.—The rights of tenants in an apartment house to keep liquor in their own section of the apartment house cellar was upheld in a judgment given by Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, chief justice of the King's bench. The question arose on a conviction by Magistrate Jelfs of Hamilton of a man named Obermesser, who lived in apartments in that city. There was a common cellar reached by open stairs from the back verandah and each tenant had a private key to his own preserves. Chief Justice Falconbridge ruled that each occupant of such cellars has the same rights as if he had a cellar of his own. The return of the liquor is ordered and the judgment includes an order of protection for the magistrate.

TO OBTAIN LOAN FROM UNCLE SAM

FINANCE MINISTER WHITE TO GET A LARGE SUM FROM AMERICANS.

New York, July 25—One of the next loans which the United States Government will make to the allies will be extended to Canada. The Finance Minister has been in Washington, where he has been in close consultation with the Treasury Department. In local banking circles a loan of $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 is being mentioned. Anything smaller than this would not satisfy Canada's needs just now.

This will be the first loan Canada has obtained direct from the United States Government since the war. If $100,000,000 is advanced it will bring the total loans made by our Government to the allies up to $1,488,000,000.

On August 1 Canada has $20,000,000 of two year notes falling due here. These are to be paid off, no doubt, out of the proceeds of the prospective United States loan.

These two-years notes were part of an issue of $45,000,000 five per cent. notes placed here by the Dominion Government in the summer of 1915. The remaining $25,000,000 were one year notes, and fell due August 1, 1916. Both principal and interest were made payable at the agency of the Bank of Montreal in New York, in U. S. gold coin, or, at the option of the holder, at the head office of the Bank of Montreal. Nearly all of the maturing notes will be presented here for payment, because they are mostly held here, and because the exchange rate between New York and Canada favors such a course. The privilege of conversion to twenty-five-year five per cent. Canadian bonds were exercised to only a negligible extent.

LUBIN ARRIVES NEAR KINGSTON ISSUED A CHECK

AND HOLDER OF IT IS ALSO LOOKING FOR THE FRENCHMAN.

G A. Lubin did not head for his native province when he left Peterboro on Sunday, July 5th. According to a cheque which has been received at the Standard Bank, Lindsay, the much-wanted young man drifted towards Kingston and plied his cheque scheme with some success. He took the name of "J. A. Webber," and passed a cheque on Willie Lee, of the New England Restaurant (formerly of Lindsay) for the sum of $5.00. This was in payment for meals. The cheque is under the date of July 20th, and account number is 224, the same account number given Lubin in Lindsay.

Lubin is evidently carrying on a systematic campaign throughout the country, but the authorities expect he will strike a snag ere long.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The first draft from the 205th Tiger Battalion, of Hamilton, is now in France.

More than 100 iron moulders are on strike at Guelph, three factories being affected.

The third annual school for rural leadership opened at the Ontario Agricultural College with about 65 delegates.

Lieut.-Col. Thomas Stewart, of Belleville, active in business, military, fraternal and church affairs, died after a long illness.

Miss Clara Adams of Peterborough is spending a few days in the village visiting friends.

Mrs. M. Osborne spent Tuesday in the village on business.

Mrs. F. J. Tate, Mrs. E. R. Tate, Mr. Keith and Miss Mirian Tate left on Wednesday for Quebec where they will be the guests of Mrs. C. Dunn at the Isle of Orleans for a few days.

Mrs. F. J. Burgess and family are occupying Mr. J. H. Sherin's cottage, Mount Julian, for a short time.

SOLOMON'S PRESCRIPTION

Will Be Applied in the Case of Light-Fingered Boys.

In the Juvenile Court this morning four young boys, who went through the pockets of a number of young men while the latter were in bathing, were found guilty, and after giving the boys a severe lecture they were handed over to their parents, with a recommendation that chastisement follow.

The costs of the court will have to be paid and restitution made to the young men.

HEIR TO FORTUNE

Jas. Coan of Niagara Falls Receives Welcome Tidings

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 25.—Jas. Coan of the Customs Department, in this city, who is well known as a horseman throughout this district, has been notified by a firm of Irish lawyers that he has fallen heir to a fortune of about $40,000. A friend of his happened to notice an advertisement in an old country paper asking information as to one Joan Coan, who left County Sligo seventy or eighty years ago. Being a son of the John Coan in question, James Coan wrote the firm of lawyers, and has just received the very welcome tidings.

O. D. Sculley, of Owen Sound or Kitchener, who has temporarily been in charge of the Dominion Bank branch in Napanee during the vacation of the manager, was found with his wrists and throat gashed with a knife. He will recover.

WAY OF TRANSGRESSOR.

In Peterborough It Is Made Not Only Hard, but Costly.

A well-known local man was fined $10 for being drunk contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act. He had admitted the offence.

On a charge laid for being drunk while on the prohibited list, the same defendant entered a plea of "not guilty" and the evidence was such that a doubt was raised in the magistrate's mind, and dismissal followed.

SUMMONS FOR FAIERS.

Police Take Action in Eccles Assault Case.

Harold Eccles, who was injured as a result of a fistic battle with William Faiers at the Incinerator, is recovering from his injuries.

Chief Thompson has taken out a summons for Faiers charging him with assault and causing bodily harm.

Election Likely Monday October 8

Present Session May Last Well Into the Month of September.

Ottawa, July 25.—Dissolution of Parliament from present indications will occur in the early part of September, with the elections on or about Monday, October 8. The uncertain elements in the situation are as to the length of the session, the extent to which Government legislation now on the stocks is pushed forward, and the attitude of the opposition in respect to it. While the torrid heat is not an incentive to combat or controversy, the common vie is that the sesion may run till the begginning of September. It is, of course, the prerogative of the Government to dissolve Parliament whenever it sees fit. The Gentlemen of the Senate and Commons do not have to be consulted, even when Parliament is in session.

Cabinet Reorganization

Future developments are so much wound up in coming and rather uncertain events that no one can prophesy with assurance just what will happen, and particularly, when it will happen. Certain things, however are clear. There is to be a reorganization of the Cabinet. This will occur in all probability only when or immediately before Parliament prorogues. Some have figured it to be imminent. This cannot well be the case when so much depends on outside gatherings scheduled for next month. The situation would be different if the organization were designed to be from within the Conservative party. This is not the plan. A Unionist Government is in view. Plans to that end long in progress are gradually being matured.

EXPLAINED TO HUSBAND.

Mrs. Scorchum Has a Few Words to Say About Her Sex.

MRS. SCORCHUM looked up from her paper. "Henry?"

"Yes, my dear."

"These newspaper writers are always making fun of women because we can't throw stones straight and because we get off from moving trains and street cars backward."

"Yes, my dear."

"Well, do you know why we don't do such things as niftily as the men do?"

"No, my dear."

"Well, I'll tell you. When we were little girls we were in the schoolhouse studying and trying to improve our minds, while you were out practicing jumping off from freight trains and trying to see how much window glass you could break—that's the reason!" And Mrs. Scorchum resumed her reading without waiting for the answer which she knew wouldn't be forthcoming.—Boston Herald.

Captain and the Irishman.

The captain of a schooner that trades between New York and Savannah is noted for his wit, and on every occasion that offers he looses his shafts of humor, to the chagrin and embarrassment of its target. Sooner or later the stinger gets stung, and this chronic pun artist is no exception to the rule.

On one occasion, when about two days out from New York, he approached a group of sailors who were washing the forward deck, and, singling out a big rawboned Irishman who was experiencing his first taste of sailor's life, he gravely asked, "Can you steer the mainmast down the forecastle stairs?" Quick as a flash came the reply, "Yis, sor, I can if you will stand below and coil it up."

ONE of the indispensable qualifications of a husband is that he shall be able to hook up a new gown with neatness and dispatch after having hooked up the wherewithal to procure it.

Be good to yourself and so set an example for other good folk.

Be game, but always remember that there is a time to be game and a time to strike your colors gracefully.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story That Is of Interest to Children.

A BOY WHO WAS VERY LAZY.

Stubborn Youth Who Was Careless About Study and Behind in His Lessons Gets a Surprise—After a Time He Is Cured of His Slothful Ways.

When I was a boy, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, we were taught to march, and that brings me to my story about a boy who WOULDN'T MARCH.

I hope you will always take an interest in the marching. Little Tommy, a boy I have heard about, did not care to march. He was fat and would rather sit still than run about.

Tommy's mother had told the teacher that he must take part in the marching or any exercises that might take some of the extra fat off his lazy bones.

So the teacher tried her best to get Tommy interested in marching. He was a new boy in her class.

But one morning when Tommy had missed a good many words in spelling and had not had the right answer to many of his arithmetic questions he was a bit sulky. Instead of blaming the mistakes on his own carelessness he was vexed with the teacher and cross with the children who had done their work right. It was very silly of Tommy.

And when the teacher threw up the windows and said, "Now the class will stand up, ready for the march," Tommy planted his feet stubbornly on the floor and settled back in his seat.

The teacher looked surprised when Tommy did not rise with the others. She said: "Tommy, please rise. You know we are going to march now."

But Tommy growled, "I don't want to march."

The little girl at the piano began playing the march. The other children stepped briskly around the room, and when the last child passed Tommy's desk the teacher was behind him. She whisked Tommy out of his seat and, with her hands upon his shoulders, pushed him into place and walked him around the room with the rest of the children.

At first Tommy was too taken back to object, but when he found himself being marched around the room against his will he squirmed and struggled so much that the rest of the children who had been trying to keep sober burst out laughing.

"Don't you think you could march by yourself now?" whispered the teacher, and Tommy murmured, "Yes."

With his eyes on the ground he tramped briskly after the other children, and from that day to this the teacher has had no trouble in getting Tommy to join in the marching.

Russians Drink Perfume.

A writer in "The Scientific Monthly," in commenting upon phases of Russian village life in wartime, takes occasion to point out the tremendous influence brought to bear by the national prohibition which has closed the vodka shops:

Vodka, the curse of the population of Russia, has disappeared. The green sign of the kazyonka (vodka shop) has departed forever.

This does not mean that Russia has stopped drinking—shades of Bacchus, no! There is hardly a peasant's hut in North Russia which has not three or four hop vines growing near by, and every peasant woman knows how to brew braga (homemade beer). The townspeople comfort the inner man with wonderful and awful mixtures whose basic components are furniture polish, denatured spirit and eau de cologne. But (and it is a very large but) these compounds do not penetrate to the remoter villages, and even if the population does indulge in a keg of beer now and then, the crops are not turned into alcohol as was the case before the war.

Races in Sardinia.

Sardinians retain traces of the many races which have occupied the island through the centuries — Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, Saracens, Italians, and Spaniards. Many dialects are spoken, but Italian is now taught in the schools.

A MIRAGE IN THE CLOUDS.

The Specter That Gave an Aviator the Scare of His Life.

An extraordinary story of a mirage in the clouds is told by a young flying corps officer in the British service:

"I had often wondered what it would feel like to see a machine coming straight for one and to know that a collision was inevitable. I had the experience one afternoon, only the collision did not take place. I was on patrol with five other machines over the lines and had just gone into a cloud bank. Just before going in I saw the bus on my right turning to cross in front of me. All of a sudden I saw a machine just the same as my own appear out of the cloud about fifty feet away, making straight for me. Instinctively I jammed my nose hard down and went as near a nose dive as possible. The other bus did the same. I turned! The other turned into me. I was in a cold perspiration all over by this time, so I thought, 'Here goes; if I am going to crash it might as well be complete.' So straight for it I went. We got closer and closer, and, biff, my machine and—its mirage in the clouds met!

"It seemed like a hideous nightmare, and I can still see that machine doing its utmost to crash into me. I think I can say I have had the full horrors of a collision in the air without its actually taking place."—London Telegraph.

Sometimes it appears as though there s no age limit for pitchers. Red Ames, the veteran flinger, is putting 'em over as well as he ever did in his younger years.

Taking chances in baseball is like playing with fire. Therefore the New York Giants despite their big lead, are not allowing any relaxation in their vigilence on the diamond.

Christy Mathewson certainly struck a "hit" mine in Cruise. That doughty outfielder is swatting the pill in great shape, and is playing his position like a star of the first magnitude.

Incidentally the Reds are the most interesting team in any league this season. They have never before made such a showing, and are putting up the gamest fight for second place. Last year they were constantly near the coal bin. The credit for their splendid showing is due to Matty.

Nothing like being an optimist. Here's Pat Morgan still hoping—nay, even announcing—that the Phillies will come out on top. Just wait, says Pat. Well, we are waiting, Pat. On with the dance.

Grouchy Gus says: "Rivalry between teams is all right, but that's no reason for making a battlefield out of a baseball diamond, with the umpire as the target for most of the fistic artillery. It's a senseless waste of effort there, while so many guys in the Sweitserkase League in Europe are ripe for a beaning."

There is a considerable buzzing in the minor leagues since it has been announced that Philip Ball, the former Federal League magnate and now owner of the St. Louis Browns, has sent out his scout and business manager, Robert Quinn, with instructions to buy up all the good baseball material he can, regardless of cost. Ball's first effort will be to develop the two Pacific Coast League stars he recently acquired. They are Pitcher Speed Martin and outfielder Kenneth Williams, both of whom are giving signs of ability to deliver the goods. It is said that the success of the Cardnals in drawing crowds has partly induced Ball to buy up players at [illegible] prices.

There was a young woman named

All the neighbors would shout,
"Cut it out! Cut it out!"
Which peeved her and made Bridget

Phil Douglas, pitcher for the Cubs, and said to be the tallest player in organized baseball in captivity, will know better next time than to stick his hand into a revolving electric fan. He has been out of the game for over a week now on account of his experience while taking a stretch in a New York subway car. Of course the cars are generally so crowded that one doesn't get the opportunity to extend his arms anyway but upwards while enjoying the luxury of a stretch, so that perhaps if you are extra tall it's just as well to do your stretching somewhere outside the tube.

FIFTY YEARS OF WEDDED LIFE

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Higgins, of the 9th Line, Smith, will be pleased to know that they have passed their golden wedding anniversary, both enjoying good health.

Invitations had been issued for the celebration of the event on June 29th, but had to be recalled on account of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins being summoned to Hamilton by the death of Mrs. Higgins' only brother. However, the family, feeling they could not let this event pass by unnoticed, met quietly at the family home on Saturday evening, July 21st, and presented Mrs. Higgins with a beautiful brooch and Mr. Higgins with a gold-headed cane.

Mr. and Mrs. Higgins were married on June 29, 1867, at Alton, Hants, England, coming to Canada in 1873, and, after living about one year at Port Hope, came to North Smith, where they lived for several years, moving to their present home on the 9th Line in 1886, where they have since resided.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, five of whom are still living, and, with the grandchildren, were present at the gathering Saturday evening.

The children are: Mrs. J. W. Stuart, 593 Homewood avenue, Peterborough; Mrs. Albert Northey, of North Smith; Miss Ella B. Higgins, R. N., Canton, Ohio; Mr. Alfred E. and Mr. N. Stanley Higgins, both of Smith.

Two grandsons were unable to be present as they are serving their King and country. They are: Lt. L. J. Stuart, who went overseas in 1916 and spent some time in the trenches. He was invalided to England, where he is at present, and Gunner Claire H. Stuart, with the 27th Battery, C. F. A., "Somewhere in France."

HOME ON LEAVE

Lieut. Holdcroft Has Seen Stirring Times at the Battle Front.

Lieut. C. R. Holdcroft, son of Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, is home on leave, after over two years of active service at the front. He went overseas in April, 1915, with the Second Canadian Division, and has been with the Aviation Corps for a year. The lieutenant could tell some exciting stories of his experiences, but with the modesty of the true hero he says that the Canadian boys, who are in the majority in that branch of the service, have simply done their duty.

A virtual threat to veto the food control bill if the conferees retain the Senate amendment creating a joint committee to supervise war expenditures is contained in a letter sent by President Wilson to Chairman Lever, of the House Committee on Agriculture.

FOR DOMINION PROHIBITION

Temperance Forces In West Are Becoming Active

Winnipeg, July 25.—The Social Service Council of Manitoba is opening a campaign for Dominion-wide prohibition. More than 500 circular letters have been mailed to leaders of churches and other institutions in Winnipeg and throughout the province, asking that immediate action be taken toward urging the members of the Dominion Government, and members on both sides of the house to use their influence towards having a Dominion-wide prohibition act passed.

TO ABOLISH THE C. D. F.

Word has been received by the authorities at military district headquarters to the effect that the Canadian Defence Force will be abolished. General Hemming stated that as there have been very few men enlisting in this branch of the service, and as No. 3 District is not the only district which is having poor luck in recruiting for the C. D. F., it is thought advisable to drop the recruiting.

TICKETS ARE SELLING FAST

FOR WHIZZ-BANG CONCERT IN OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY EVENING.

Sergeant Staton, manager of the Whizz-Bang concert party, has been in the city the last two days and reports that the seats for the Whizz-Bang concert are selling fast. This show is an A1 concert and it certainly deserves the patronage of the people of the city, as the cause is a most worthy and noble one. All profits from these concerts go to provide amusements for soldiers in hospital in Canada, and as all the performers are returned soldiers from France additional interest is added to their performance.

The box office of the Grand Opera House is open every day. Buy your ticket early and be entertained for two and a half hours and help a worthy cause at the same time. Let the returned heroes see that the people of Peterborough are heart and soul with them. All look for a bumper house on Friday evening.

NOT OUT OF CONTROL.

Mr. Foley Ran Car Into Curb to Save Two Ladies.

Mr. Foley, whose car was damaged yesterday afternoon when it was run into the curb, at Reid and Hunter streets, to avoid running down two ladies who were crossing the street, deserves great credit for his action. Our informant made it appear that the car had got out of control but it has since been found that the smash was caused deliberately to prevent injury to pedestrians.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

If the brass polish gives out do not worry, but instead go to work at the brass with lemon juice.

To keep meringue from falling, beat a saltspoonful of baking powder into it just before putting it on the pie.

If you would have your summer supply of white silk stockings remain white, always see to it that they are dried in the shade and washed in lukewarm water, as heat turns them yellow.

If a casserole or other cooking dish becomes brown and discolored on the inside, let it stand for three days filled with buttermilk, which will, by its acid, remove all the stain.

Old-Time Beautifier

Among the many aids to beauty is a paste made of three ounces of ground barley, about an ounce of honey and the beaten white of an egg, was applied thickly to the face, which was then covered over with a chamois with eye and nose holes, or bound about with strips of linen.

This paste—it is said to have come from the ancient Egyptians—softens, whitens and clears the skin, while the egg serves to draw up the loosened muscles. The bands, of course, are strange, and will keep you awake if you are not used to them. However, this paste should be applied at night and left on for full seven or eight hours of rest.

It is simple, harmless and effective. Next morning wash in hot water, then cold.

Value of Fresh Meats

A diet of oranges will clear muddy complexions. Lemon taken internally quenches thirst and prevents the bad habit of over-indulgence in ice water. Lemons clear the skin, assist digestion and have a tendency to rid one of obesity. Applied externally they will bleach.

Pineapples will sweeten the voice, restore the quality if it has grown husky and aid digestion, which means that it will help to beautify the complexion. Apricots are used for the same purpose and are much favored by the Orientals.

Tomato Eggs

Dissolve a small piece of butter in as many individual fireproof dishes as are required. Break an egg into each, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and place in the oven until the egg is lightly set. Heat as many dessertspoonsful of tomato ketchup as you have little dishes, stir in a small piece of butter, celery salt, and pepper to season well, and half a saltspoonful of sugar. Reheat and pour over the eggs. Serve with sippets of thin dry toast.

A Housewife's Lore

Bread, cheese and fruit make a perfect lunch. Apples, bananas and lettuce are a delicious salad mixture. Don't forget that split peas make an excellent luncheon soup. Crab flake cocktail is very pretty served in green pepper cups. Muffin and cake batters require half as much liquid as flour. To prepare horseradish quickly, put it through the meat chopper. For clams baked in shells it is best to use the large "hard" clams.

Scorched Vegetables

Should vegetables chance to become scorched when cooking, set the dish at once in another containing a little cold water, and the scorching will scarcely be noticed.

Never allow new soap to be used. It is so soft that it lathers away in no time. It is real economy to buy soap in large quantities, so that it is not in use until it is dry and hard all through.

KEPT LIQUOR IN BARN

And Now Authorities Keep Mr. Edwards in Gaol

Matthew Edwards appeared before County Magistrate Langley, at Keene yesterday afternoon and entered a plea of guilty to a charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence.

License Inspector Stewart, who laid the complaint stated that the defendant had received shipments of liquor on two different occasions, once on June 23rd and on July 6th. A relative with whom he was rooming would not allow him to keep it at the house, so it was stored in a neighbor's barn and it was alleged that on more than one occasion the defendant was drunk.

On the charge of having liquor wrongfully on the June date a fine of $200 and costs was imposed, and the other case was adjourned for a week. Edwards was taken to the county jail in default of payment of the fine.

DEATH FOR RUSSIAN TRAITORS

SUB LOSSES FOR PAST WEEK SHOW AN INCREASE

Twenty-four British Vessels in All Were Sunk in That Period.

ITALY'S LOSSES ARE LIGHT.

France Reports Not a Single Vessel Has Been Sunk in Same Time.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 26. — Twenty-one British vessels of more than 1,600 tons each and three of less than 1,600 tons each were sunk last week by mines or submarines, according to the weekly admiralty report on shipping losses. One fishing vessel was also lost.

The admiralty's statement follows:

"Arrivals, 2791; sailings, 2791.

"British merchantmen sunk by mine or submarine; over 1,600 tons, including two previously, 21; under 1,600 tons, three.

"British merchant vessels unsuccessfully attacked, including three previously, fifteen.

"British fishing vessels sunk, one."

The announcement of the British Admiralty shows an increase of seven vessels of more than 1,600 tons sent to the bottom as compared with the report of the previous week, when fourteen were sunk. In the smaller catagory the loss is one less than that given in the report of the previous week—three—while there was a falling off by seven in the number of fishing vessels sunk.

Italy Escapes Lightly

Rome, July 26. — Two Italian steamer were sunk and one small sailing vessel damaged by subs during the week ending July 22nd. There were in the same time over eleven hundred arrivals and departures at Italian ports.

No French Losses

Paris, July 26.—During the week ending midnight Sunday not a single French vessel was lost. Six were unsuccessfully attached by submarines. There were exactly two thousand arrivals and departures at French ports in that time.

WOMEN'S CORPS IS UNDER FIRE

RUSSIA'S FEMALE WARRIORS QUIT THEMSELVES LIKE MEN.

Petrograd, July 26.—The Russian women's battalion, raised by the twice-wounded girl officer, Vera Butchkareff, was in action on the front at Krevo for the first time. They are reported to have been successful, although the battalion suffered some losses, the extent of which is not yet known.

The Novoe Vremya correspondent at the front reports that the women behaved in an exemplary way, gaining the respect of the men soldiers.

RUSSIAN COLLAPSE AN APPALLING BLOW

All the Tremendous Resources Put Into the Galician Campaign Rendered of no Effect by Treachery of Troops---All Artillery Lost to Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 26.—In a despatch to The Post from Petrograd the Russian collapse is called "an appalling blow." Never since this war began has Russia put such enormous armies in the field. British and French guns and gunners, flying machines, aviators and British armored cars were added to Russia's own unprecedented technical strength to make this particular front equal to anything.

Shot Down Own Gunners.

The artillery was placed in ideal natural or prepared positions, in some places not three hundred yards from the enemy trenches. Information regarding the guns of the eleventh army almost staggers belief. Infantry shot down their own gunners and shot down the gun horses in revenge, leaving practically all the eleventh army artillery in the enemy's hands.

Artillery Is Lost.

There is also no hope of saving the artillery and technical appliances of the seventh and eighth armies. Two days ago the Germans were already across the best road on the line of retreat. The rate of the enemy's advance on the western wing has accelerated and gun positions are behind the line now occupied by the Germans. It is becoming an exceedingly anxious question whether the eighth army will get away at all.

Traitors Shot to Death.

Despatches from Copenhagen say German correspondents in Galicia report that the Russians saved their light artillery and that many of the heavy guns captured had previously been destroyed. Another despatch to The Post says that under Gen. Korniloff's drastic measures to restore order in the eleventh army one whole division thereof was blown to pieces by their own artillery "to avenge the insults which all loyal troops, especially the artillery, have silently endured for the past four months from these traitorous rascals."

British armored cars did gallant work in covering the retreat. Their commander, Locker Sampson, was congratulated by the Russian commander-in-chief and twenty-six Crosses of St. George were presented to his men.

How Income Tax Will Work Out

The same tax on incomes exceeding $3,000 in the case of other persons.

In addition the following super-tax is to be imposed:

Where income exceeds $6,000 and does not exceed $10,000, 2 per cent.

Where income exceeds $10,000 and does not exceed $20,000, 5 per cent.

Where income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $30,000, 8 per cent.

Where income exceeds $30,000 and does not exceed $50,000, 10 per cent.

Where income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $100,000, 15 per cent.

Where income exceeds $100,000, 25 per cent.

A tax of 4 per cent. on incomes exceeding $3,000 in the case of corporations or joint stock companies.

The plan will work out as follows:

150,000	29,300	29,260

Petrograd, July 26.—The Roumanian forces captured in today's and Wednesday's battle on the Roumanian front, more than one thousand prisoners, says the official statement issued today by the Russian War Department. The Roumanians also took thirty-three guns, machine guns, ten mine throwers and much other military material.

On the same front, the statement says, the Russians also captured about one thousand prioners and twenty-four guns.

FIFTEEN LIQUOR CHARGES

Detectives Make Big Haul on Blind Piggers.

Guelph, July 26. — As the result of a nine-day visit to the city during the first half of the month of four detectives, sent here by the license commissioners, no less than fifteen charges were laid in this city against alleged blind piggers in the foreign section of St. Patrick's Ward. When the cases were called R. L. McKinnon, counsel for all of the accused, asked that the cases be enlarged for a week. The request was granted and next Wednesday is the date set for the hearing.

Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams says there is room for Canadian recruiting in the United States.

BATTLE RAGES ON FRENCH LINE ALL NIGHT LONG

Germans Make Gain at One Point, but Are Repulsed at Another.

FOE'S LOSSES ARE HEAVY.

German Assaults at Hurtebise Farm Broke Down Under French Fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 26. — German assaults were reopened last night along a front of about two miles on the Aisne line from a point east of Hurtebise to La Bovelle. The French official statement this afternoon says that at a cost of tremendous losses the Germans were able to penetrate into certain elements of the French first line trenches.

North of Auberive in Champagne the French penetrated the German trenches, the statement says, and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans. On the other parts of the Champagne front the artillery bombardment was intense. The fighting lasted all night, the French repelling every attack made by the Germans.

The Germans also renewed assaults on the French positions at Hurtebise Farm, but the attack broke down under the trench fire of the French. Reciprocal artillery fire on the left bank of the Meuse in the Verdun region was maintained with the usual violence.

ONE LIBERAL'S VIEW.

"I am a Liberal," says Mr. Joseph Wearing, and this statement is likely to go unchallenged from any quarter. "But first of all I am for winning the war. I am behind the Conscription Act and will remain there even if I have to support Sir Robert Borden."

HOW TORONTO IS REPRESENTED

ONE MEMBER IN HOUSE ONCE IN THREE YEARS.

Ottawa, July 26.—For the first time in three years Edmund Bristol, M.P. for Centre Toronto, made his appearance in Parliament for a few minutes during this afternoon's sitting. Even the doorkeeper did not know him.

Toronto's members, with the exception of Mr. C. A. MacDonell and Sir George Foster, are the chronic absentees of Canada's Parliament. Sir Edmund Osler looked in for the second reading of the military service bill, but this is Mr. Bristol's first appearance in the house in three sessions.

BATTLE LINE TENSE ON BRITISH FRONT

Germans Seem to Look for New Offensive and Are Growing Nervous---Tremendous Activity of Artillery Accomplishes Nothing---Positions Shelled Are Already Scarred by Former Bombardment.

(By Stewart Lyon)

British Headquarters in France, July 26.—The German and British fighting lines in France and Belgium, which have been comparatively dormant for several weeks so far as any large offensive is concerned, have tensed perceptibly in the last few days. Out of this stiffening have grown numerous fierce artillery duels, especially in Flanders.

Germans Are Nervous.

The Germans have developed what is known among the British as "Nerves," that is they have become exceptionally sensitive to any movement of their opponents which deviates from the routine and give evidence of this condition in furious bombardments at suspected points. From this the conclusion is drawn that for reasons of their own the Germans may be fearing trouble is impending in some section and are not certain where to look for its appearance.

Shelling Accomplishes Nothing.

Lens and Hill 30 near by have been under a heavy and almost continuous gunfire, even the battle scarred and barren Vimy Ridge which overlooks the Valley above Lens has been the object of vigorous shelling which has accomplished nothing except to add still more shell craters on the already badly punished hill. Armentieres also has undergone a tremendous fire, and various other places which appear to have come under the suspicion or displeasure of the Germans have withstood a rain of shells.

GERMANS AGAIN CLAIM VICTORY

TRENCHES WERE STORMED AND POSITIONS TAKEN, SAYS REPORT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 26. — Dominating positions on the Aisne front northwest of Hurtebise were captured today by the Germans, the war office announces. French trenches on a front of 1,800 metres and 400 metres deep, to the south of Ailles were stormed, the statement says. Violent artillery fighting continues on the northern end of the Franco-Belgian front from the coast as far as Lys.

623 MILLIONS SPENT ON WAR

CANADA'S EXPENDITURE FROM APRIL 1 TO JULY 26, WAS $39,702,000.

Ottawa, July 26.—Canada's expenditures on account of the war now exceed $623,000,000. An announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons by Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance. The figures, of course, do not include expenditures made by the various Provincial Governments, municipal corporations or private individuals.

The Ontario Government appointed a Commission of three Judges to determine if any power companies had exceeded their charter rights.

RUSS CABINET DECIDES TO RESTORE DEATH PENALTY

Commanders of Army Report Discipline Can be Maintained in no Other Way---Measure to Have Effect for Duration of War---National Conference to be Called.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, July 26.—The Commander-in-Chief or the Commanders of the various armies at the front, having insisted that the restoration of discipline in the army inevitably would necessitate the infliction of the death penalty, the Government has agreed unanimously to restore capital punishment, the measure to be of temporary character, to have effect until the end of military operations. The inquiry into the recent disorders here is being continued energetically under the supervision of the public prosecutors. Authorities are taking measures to discover and bring to justice all the organizers of and participants in the revolt.

Cabinet in Accord

The new Provisional Government met yesterday and discussed the increasingly grave situation. Recognising that the safety of the fatherland necessitated the most decisive measures the Ministers resolved to accomplish the task in full accord and solidarity with all honest elements devoted to the country. It was decided at the Cabinet meeting to convene in Moscow soon a conference of the principal representatives of the Russian Social Organisations and to place before it the facts in the country as the actually exist.

BRITISH ARMY ROUT GERMANS IN EAST AFRICA

Foe Was Driven From All Positions in Recent Engagement.

ENEMY IS IN FULL FLIGHT.

Another Successful Raid Was Made Last Night on Western Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 26. — We made a successful raid last night south-east of Armentiares, says to-day's official report. There is nothing else of special interest.

British troops in German East Africa have won new victories over the remaining German forces there and the main body of the enemy is now in retreat toward the south, after having suffered heavy losses, says an official announcement issued to-day. The texts reads:

"An engagement on July 19 at Naroncombe resulted in the enemy being driven from all his positions. The main body is retreating southward. The enemy's losses were heavy.

"A small German column is at large on the north shore of Lake Manyara.

"We are in touch at Libuka with the enemy retreating toward Mahenge (in the south-easterly section of the colony).

"In Portugese East Africa we are pursuing the enemy from Mwimbe toward the Rovuma River."

CONVENTION IS IN FULL SWING

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT PRESIDES OVER IRISH GATHERING.

London, July 26.—An official report of the Irish Convention says:

"After the opening address by Chief Secretary Duke, presiding, a committee was appointed for the purpose of advising the convention on the selection of a Chairman. It was announced that the committee unanimously recommended the appointment of Sir Horace Plunkett as Chairman, and Sir Francis Hopewood as Secretary.

"The convention unanimously adopted the committee's resolution and adjourned until tomorrow. Ninety-two delegates were present."

College Green Packed.

The convention which is to attempt to reach a solution of the Irish problem was opened at Regent House, Trinity College. Long before 11 o'clock, the hour for the opening, a large crowd packed College Green to watch the arrival of the delegates.

John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, and Joseph Devlin, one of his prominent party associates, were among the early arrivals. Protestant and Roman Catholic clergymen arrived soon afterward, followed by representatives of public organizations, Trades and Labor Councils, who came in groups. At the appointed hour all the delegates had taken their places in the assembly hall.

There was a noticeable lack of enthusiasm among the spectators, Joseph Devlin was the only delegate who was cheered.

No press representatives were present at the convention, and the exact nature of the business discussed is therefore not known. Sir Horace Plunkett, however, is credited with the suggestion that the drafting of the constitution should proceed as for all Ireland, thus leaving Ulster to see what she is really faced with before she objects.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1917

QUEBEC HIS KINGDOM.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been a great figure in this country, but in this crisis he has chosen Quebec as his kingdom, and Canada can no longer choose him as the man to govern. The hundred thousand men from this country who have been on the casualty lists, the hundred thousand or more who today, in Canada's name, bear arms against the Prussian menace, took this country seriously, fought for it valiantly, and must be upheld and justified in their course. The Liberals who believe that the war must go on until it is won, and who believe that to raise the necessary force selective drafts must be made as the only way of getting them, and the only fair and expeditious way, must stand forward in advocacy of their views regardless of party politics, and confident that nothing but benefit can come to honest men from straightforward dealing. — Toronto Star (Liberal).

WIN-THE-WAR CONVENTION.

SOME OF THE LEADING citizens of Peterborough, men who are above suspicion of ulterior motive for the reason that they have never been actively engaged in politics, have signed the call for a win-the-war convention, to be held in Toronto on the second and third days of August. A list of the signers was published in this paper yesterday, and more names have since been sent to Toronto by wire, names of other residents who will attend the gathering and do all in their power to help the movement.

It is apparent to the most superficial thinker that if the war is to be won and Canada saved with the Empire, the old party lines must be obliterated in the coming election. The Toronto Star has practically read Sir Wilfrid Laurier out of the party. The Globe may not have yet gone that length, but it is [illegible] antagonistic to the attitude taken by its former paragon of political integrity, its vaunted model of statesmanship.

If the country divides into the old camps of Conservatives and Liberals, and if by any chance Sir Wilfrid Laurier should be elected Premier, with the solid support of Quebec behind him, it is not difficult to surmise what would happen. Canada would no longer be a factor in the war. Not another man would be sent to the trenches, not another dollar would be expended in an attempt to save the civilization of the world.

Such a situation is almost unthinkable, but it is just what would transpire if the present Government, committed as it is to win the war, even if victory calls for Canada's last man and last dollar, should be turned out of office. The patriots who will gather in Toronto on August 2 have no axes to grind as had the politicians who met there last week. Their object is as plain as day and their motives are above suspicion. The success of a particular party is of no moment to them, but the defeat of a disturbing element is all important.

The win-the-war convention is not working for Conservative success. The aim of the delegates is a national government in which the best elements of the country shall be represented without regard to party. If such an organization bars men who have been prominently connected with politics for years, then Sir Robert Borden himself will be one of the first to offer to retire.

If the platform designed by the win-the-war delegates is perfected, the work of reform will be taken up in every riding in the province. Men whose attitude with regard to the war is above open reproach or hidden suspicion will be sent to Parliament by acclamation, and in this time of stress the people will be saved the agony of a campaign and a contest. Men whose records as members of the House of Commons will stand the searchlight, whether they sat with the majority or the minority for the past six years, will be safe, and their official career will be endorsed at a mass meeting of patriots instead of politicians.

A suggestion of such a line of policy made in this city some time ago met with opposition from a section who regarded their material interests as threatened. All such need have no fear. The new move is one which they should welcome in common with the rest of the community. The job held by this or that public servant is inconsequential when compared with the great issue. The question before the people is the safety of the Empire, not the spoils of office.

THE INCOME TAX.

IN HIS ADDRESS prefacing the introduction of the new Income Tax Bill, Sir Thomas White said just what The Review has always contended since conscription was first proposed, that the operation of the Military Service Act would involve the country in new expense which would have to be met by additional taxation. He always maintained that when the necessity arose he would not hesitate to resort to a tax on wealth as represented by the large incomes. That necessity has arisen and the tax has been imposed.

There has never been cause for uneasiness on the part of the people on this score. Sir Thomas White acted yesterday solely on his own initiative and in accordance with his forecasts made months ago when he brought down his annual budget. He has not been dragooned into conscripting wealth either by the resolution introduced by that arch political strategist, Hon. Geo. P. Graham, or by any pressure that may have been brought to bear upon him by members of his own party.

In his measure as outlined yesterday Sir Thomas White has not followed closely the new income tax law imposed for war purposes in the United States. In that country the incomes exempted are $1000 for single men and $2000 for those who are married. Canada's Finance Minister has raised the amount of such exemption by $1000 in each case. The tax is graded, increasing in proportion to the size of the income until the maximum is reached in incomes of over $100,000 a year. The profits of corporations are to be regarded as incomes, although in such cases there is to be no double taxation.

The new tax will mean millions of additional receipts for the purpose of carrying on the war, and it will also mean the taxation of those who are best able to bear it. The popular demand for the conscription of wealth has been met by a measure which can hardly leave anything more to be asked for by those who will not be affected, although there are no doubt radical spirits who will refuse to be satisfied with anything short of the outright confiscation of a percentage of the country's capital.

The new income tax will directly affect scores of residents in this city, and the Federal revenue from this city alone will be considerable. However, as Sir Thomas White said some time ago, an income tax is the most difficult and costly to collect of any form of taxation that can be devised.

THE WASTE OF FUEL.

IT IS ESTIMATED by experts who have made a study of the subject that there is electricity to the extent of 20,000 horse power going to waste between Burleigh Falls and Peterborough, or more than twice as much as the amount used in the city for power and light. Five thousand horse power, it is further figured, would heat Peterborough in the coldest weather. In the meantime the citizens are worrying themselves over the fuel prospects for the coming winter, while hundreds of tons of white coal are going to waste at their very doors every day.

The members of the Trades Council here and in other centres of the Dominion have taken this matter up and will urge Sir Adam Beck to devise some system of electrical heating that will bring it into general use and so reduce the cost to the consumer. There should be municipal action in conjunction with this move in order to give it greater effect. It is no idle dream. It does not sound as impracticable as did the proposition only a few years ago to utilize electrical power as is done today.

An American exchange tells how electrical heating has been successfully tried out in Sweden. Stockholm, up on the Baltic side of Sweden, is a cold proposition for many months. Not only its far north latitude, but its insular situation conduces to cold climatic conditions, for Stockholm is built mostly on islands and is called the Venice of the Baltic.

But the people keep warm during the long winters and do so through electrical heating arrangements. Fuel for individual families was an immense item, but in the last few years the electricians of the country have bent their energies to the development of the natural water power to the end that electricity has become the chief fuel.

Hot water tanks in buildings are heated by electricity from a nearby power plant, and the hot water is sent through the houses much as it goes through similarly heated houses in our cities. The electricity that heats the water is turned on at night when the family retires, and by the morning the tank is so hot that the water, pumped automatically through the house pipes, gives the inhabitants all the comforts of steam heat and lasts the whole day.

We build coal fires in our furnaces and have smoke and ashes to contend with. The Swedes press a button that connects the house tank wire with the power plant, and the work is done, with no aftermath of cleaning up.

Peterborough can do what Stockholm has done and at less expense, because for one thing the supply is contiguous and practically unlimited. The only obstacle now in the way of electrical heating is the expense of equipping a building for the system, but this will be reduced when it is more genrally adopted.

It is apparent from the despatches sent out yesterday that Canada is to receive from the United States during the coming cold season not one ton of coal more than is absolutely required. Everyone understands that this shatters any hope of cheaper fuel next winter. The situation is as serious as ever, but Peterborough has the solution in its own hands. All that is required is for the city to take some steps in cooperation with the policy that has been outlined by the Trades Council.

The papers are filled these days with the suggestions of experts, volunteers and officials, with regard to the conservation of food. It has never yet, apparently, occurred to these guardians of the public welfare to bring down instructions to the consumers dealing with the economical use of coal, although the Bureau of Mines in the United States estimates that five hundred million dollars is lost yearly in that country through inefficiency in this regard.

NEXT THING we expect to hear is that some magistrate has fined the man with the alcoholic breath if he is caught outside of his own household. There can be no question of possession or of illegality of location in such a case.

NO VILLAGE LIFE FOR HIM

"I hope to spend my declining years in some quiet village," said the landlady. "Like thousands of others, I live in a city because necessity compels, but my heart is ever sighing for pleasant rural scenes."

"You would soon find the rustic village a frost, my dear Mrs. Jiggers," commented the star boarder. "City dwellers are always hankering for the crossroads, just as the inmates of a penitentiary, not knowing when they are well off, are forever sighing to be otudoors, where they will be taxed to death and annoyed by book agents and auto salesmen.

"If there's anything makes me too weary for utterance, it is a country village. I lived in one for a long time, and I shudder when I recall the experience. It was the ambition of everybody in the burg to get away and live in a real town, where there were traffic cops and a paid fire department. We were so anxious to get in touch with city life, even remotely, that everybody went to the depot to see the noon train from Toronto come in. The dinner hour in that town was 11.30 a.m. This gave everybody a chance to go to the depot.

"If a man was so unfortunate as to miss seeing the noon train, everybody sympathized with him and the local paper mentioned the fact.

"Oh, Mrs. Jiggers, you are talking through your sunbonnet when you say you want to live in a small town. Tired people complain of city noises, but the country noises are worse. I can sleep until 9 or 10 o'clock here and rise a giant refreshed. But in the country I have to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning, for it is then that the roosters being to crow. No man can sleep within three miles of a crowing rooster. And when the rooster is multiplied by 700, the only thing a man can do is to put on his clothes and go out and throw rocks at the poultry.

"The roosters not only wake all mankind, but they arouse the whole animal kingdom. When they have been whooping a little while, the hogs join in, and the cows try to sing the 'Pilgrims' Chorus,' and the guinea hens give good imitations of rusty coffee mills, and the horses neigh, and the geese hiss—and such an insurrection no city bred man or woman ever imagined.

"In the village where I lived a man was considered fast, if not exactly desperate, if he wore clothes which were not two years behind the fashion. Even in those days I liked to be the glass of fashion and mold of form, and bought my rags from a metropolitan tailor instead of the village harnessmaker, and the rude forefathers of the hamlet insisted that I must be a dealer in gold bricks, and my neighbors always locked up their henhouses at night.

"If you go to a village, Mrs. Jiggers, everybody there will know your family history within twenty-four hours. Immediately upon your arrival it will be whispered around that you are a retired boarding house keeper; that for years you poisoned your boarders with coffee made of tanbark; that you ruined there digestion with papier mache pies; that you insisted upon having your money in advance, failing which you turned starving men from your inhospitable door. These and other facts will become public property at once, and you will find yourself severely ostracized; so let me have some more of the prune jelly."

Wit and Wisdom

Nothing to Shy At.

A Chicago evangelist says the reason there are so many unmarried women in the United States today is because the men are afraid of women's clothes. But judging by appearances, they are not enough clothes on women to scare anybody. They are economical in that line.

Noticing a small cottage by the roadside, he went up knocked at the door, and when the guid wife came he explained: "I am very sorry to trouble you, madam, but I have lost my bearin's." PRODUCTION: CANADA'S GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

Increased Production of Live Stock Canada's Greatest Asset—Build up Your Reserves

The increased cost of live stock is due to under production. The increase in cattle has not kept pace with the increase in population in the principal cattle raising countries, excepting Australia. Farmers tell us they have found dairy work, and some other productions of the farm, more remunerative than raising live stock and that those conditions have tended to a falling off in the supply of cattle. The conditions here described are more marked in the United States. There between 1909 and 1917 the population increased 30 per cent. In Russia, Argentina, and Brazil there were also decreases. In France, Germany, the United Kingdom, and Austria-Hungary there were slight increases, but only in France at the same ratio as the population. In Australia alone was there relatively a greater growth in the number of cattle than of people. In Canada the population during the period mentioned increased 35 per cent, but in cattle only 20 per cent.

Opportunity Waits

Those facts are surely pregnant with significance of the opportunity that lies before Canada in the breeding of cattle.

With the foregoing outline of home matters before them it is hard to believe breeders will fail to recognize the profit that will likely accrue from increased production in all lines of live stock. If, with the present difficulties, it is surely reasonable to expect that its activity will be greatly accelerated when the warring nations shall have reached an agreement, and decimated flocks and herds have to be renewed and revived.

Reputation For Canada

When that good time arrives, not only the twenty million men under arms, but a large part of the general population of Europe will hail with eager anticipation the chance to once more enjoy fresh killed beef, mutton and pork. Breeders, too, will hasten to restore their vanished or decimated stocks. A dozen countries will then clamor for cattle, sheep and pigs. Canada, with her channels of supply open, with her nearness to the sources of demand, will then be in the most favored position to avail herself of the situation to the full, and to obtain a reputation that will last. Canada must build up her reserves now.

Tree Grows On Tree

A singular tree in Cuba is called the yaguey tree. It begins to grow at the top of another tree. The seed is carried by a bird, or wafted by the wind, and, falling into some moist, branching part, takes root and speedily begins to grow. It sends a kind of thin, stringlike root down the body of the tree, which is soon followed by others. In course of time these rootings strike the ground, and growth immediately commences upwards. New rootings continue to be formed and get strength until the one tree grows as a net round the other. The outside one surrounds and presses the inner, strangling its life and augmenting its own power. At length the tree within is killed, and the parasite that has taken possession becomes itself the tree.

When Carburetor Burns

If the carburetor catches fire, do not give way to panic. Shut off the gasoline at the tank and start the motor if possible. A self-starter is useful here, but one should spin it by hand, if necessary. This draws the flame into the carburetor, where it will do no harm. Water from the radiator may be thrown on burning woodwork, but never on a pool of burning gasoline on the floor as it only spreads the fire.

ARE WAR WHISKERS COMING?

War whiskers may be the next suggested economy, if the barber shop proprietors of Kansas City do as they threaten.

The price of shaves is going up to 25 cents.

A number of downtown proprietors met last week and decided that the 15-cent shave and hair tonic application must go. The barbers, according to one proprietor, are losing money. The price of nice, smelly soap has risen. Alcohol, basis of the fragrant hair tonic, is doubled in value.

"People pay more for everything else," said the barber. "We pay more for everything else, too."

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

Laurence referred to the envelope in his hand.

"'A. Guthrie,'" he read aloud. "Skipper of the Columba," he added.

"Alec. He'll be at home, like enow. What brings ye back, Averil?"

"Work. Where does Guthrie live?"

They gave him long and contradictory directions, Laurence listening, muddled and bemused. Unable to grasp the gist of what they said, he turned to Menzies. "Take this note to him, Big Jock," he commanded. "Bring back the answer to me at Anstruther's within half an hour. I'm going to change my clothes."

Menzies looked up sulkily. "I'm no' your servant, Laurence Averil," he said.

Laurence flew at him with an oath and struck him on the chest.

"I've been away too long, have I?" he roared. "No' my servant, eh?—you dog. Do as I tell you, or, by Heaven! I'll break your jaw first and drag you there by the beard afterwards."

Menzies departed on his mission without a word, and Laurence addressed the little group of men.

"Any of you on the Columba?" he asked.

One of them happened to be a member of the crew, and on him Laurence straightway laid commands.

"The trawl and gear's to come out o' her before night," he said. "Get a move on you and beat up the crew, and send 'em down to the wharfside to start. I can't spare time to kick all of you to your duty, so if any man refuses, take the next that offers. I'll give a sovereign to the man that takes his place. We sail to-night, and there's a matter of ten ton of extra coal to be put on board when the fishing gear comes out. Get the key of the coal shed from the storekeeper—tell him I said it was Mr. Harper's orders. Tell the fireman to get steam up. I'll be ashore most of the day. I've work to do. If I find that the coal isn't aboard and the trawl and gear on the wharf when I come down in the afternoon, some of you'll curse the day ye first saw your mothers. Now, get about it. If I'm wanted ye'll find me at Anstruther's, or they'll know where I'm gone."

Menzies was back within the half-hour, and was sent to the bedroom in which Laurence was flinging off his clothes, replacing them with those he was accustomed to wear at sea.

"Guthrie says he'll no' worrk on the Sabbath," he announced. "An' the Columba won't sail before the morrn."

"You go back to him and tell him to go to the deuce," Laurence said cheerfully. "The Columba sails to-night, and if he hasn't turned up she'll go without him. I'll be skipper, and his 'blessed Sawbath' 'll have lost him a fortnight's work."

All through the day Laurence labored strenuously persuading here, pleading or ordering there, by promises or oaths getting stores sent down to the wharf, or receiving and answering messages sent up from the boat. The town was shuttered in the forbidding silence of a Scottish Sunday. All things seemed to conspire to delay him, and in the encountering and overcoming of obstacles he almost forgot the pain at his heart. At four o'clock in the afternoon he drove on to the wharfside with his bag and a small but heavy case, and shouted to one of the crew to come and aid him in getting it aboard the boat. "Handle that tenderly," he ordered. "It's dynamite, and if you drop it you'll go where the devil waits you quicker than you want to. Is steam up?"

It was, and by five o'clock the Columba's bows were swinging outwards towards the waters of the Firth, her churning screw, now ahead, now astern, thrashing farewell to the land.

At the last moment the men broke into open mutiny. "We've nae food aboord," they cried, and one of the bolder spirits jumped upon the bulwarks with a view to springing towards the slowly receding wharf. Laurence swung him on to the deck before he had time to leap. "Then you'll starve," he said grimly. "The more reason to make her move. We're for Iceland, and if ye shove her along you'll get a bellyful of dried fish inside of four days." He said nothing about the packages of stores he had sent on board, which the men, ignorant of their nature, had placed in his cabin. They were amply sufficient for all hands, but all his harder nature was revived by his return to the old vile surroundings, and the dull misery in which his soul was steeped called aloud for the relief of open strife.

The scuffle that ensued was as brutal a rough-and-tumble as he could have desired. Two of the hands, with the fear of a voyage on short commons before them, rushed at him together. "He's daft," they cried. "Averil's daft!" and, crying to the fireman to aid them, they attacked him savagely. For the next five minutes Laurence's mental torture stood off from him under the stimulus of combat; at the end of that time one man lay under the bulwarks groaning; another, with a twisted ankle, was crawling forward on hands and knees; and the third, uninjured, had seized an iron belaying pin and was standing on the defensive. Laurence's mouth was a smudge of blood, one of his eyes was closing rapidly, and a blow on his left wrist had rendered the hand nearly useless; but he smiled sweetly, for all his disfigured face and cursed the men with great good will.

"Daft, am I?" he demanded. "An I've forgotten how to scrap, too—eh You get about your work, you swine. You—at the wheel—keep her a point more east.

"I've brought grub aboard, and you'l get your share—though you don't deserve it. And if any of you want another turn up with me, you know how to get it. I'll teach you Laurence Averil's come back to the fleet no prettier than he left it."

The fireman grinned, replacing the belaying pin in its rack. "I've heerd o' you before," he said. "Nae wonder Jock Menzies is sae pretty mannered these twa months," and he went below about his work. Laurence laughed back. In truth, he was himself surprised to find how easily the old life came to him again. In the old days he had known no greater wretchedness, but compared to this new hell of hopeless desire its roughness seemed light, its brutality a kindly counter irritant to a far greater pain. He walked the deck, now getting more and more lively as they reached open water, with some dim feeling of gratitude in his heart at the relief. The hurry of departure left much to be done, and he busied himself setting the men at one task after another until Fifeness was abeam, when, laying a course that should clear Buchan Ness he went into the engine room, told the engineer to spare no coal, and retired to his berth to seek the sleep he so sorely needed.

CHAPTER XX.

The next day dawned fine and warm and the men, finding Laurence's stores far better in quality than they would themselves have bought, were in high goodwill. Moreover, the trawl-gear having been left ashore, there was nothing in the way of work to be done beyond the ordinary ship's duties; and though pay, it was true, seemed problematical, there being no catch to share, Laurence's answer to their inquiries tended to allay their anxiety on that score.

"You'll get four pounds apiece for the cruise," he told them, when asked. "If we do it under four days each way I'll make it a pound a head more. If we take longer—well, you'll hear of it, I promise you." So, telling off a deck hand to aid the fireman at the raging furnaces, all hands made up their minds to what they—fresh from the endless labor of the fishing voyages—were ready enough to regard as a pleasure trip.

They drove her furiously. Once—on the second day out—the engineer reported a leaky standard-junction forward of the fire-box, and Laurence, refusing to allow the speed to be reduced by a single revolution, crammed himself down into the stifling space next the bulkheads with a line under his armpits, and plastered the glowing eye of light with some filthy composition recommended by the engineer. He was more dead than alive when he was hauled on deck, but the consciousness that the flaw had been rectified without delaying the voyage did more to aid his recovery than the fresh air itself, though a great girth of sailcloth with which he had stuffed the front of his clothes was brown and crisp with the heat, and the toes of his boots were positively charred. The weather continued fine, as fine as it had been for the last two months, and the early dawn of Thursday morning brought a hammering at the companion door leading to his cabin.

"We've earrnt oor extra pund," a voice cried. "Porrtland's ahead on the starboard bow."

"How far?" Laurence demanded, wide awake at the word.

"Aboot nine miles."

"Then change her course a couple o' points east. I'll be on deck in a minute."

He dressed hastily and ascended the stair, and the first object his eye fell on past the bulwarks was the dim form of the promontory he remembered so well, lying like a low cloud upon the northern horizon.

But delays awaited him. On nearing the shore a white line of surf on the beach, the thunder of which came up against the wind only as a dim murmur, showed that the favoring [illegible] breeze that had aided them the past two days had raised a sea which rendered landing a matter of difficulty, if not danger. The native boats were hauled up out of its reach, and there was no sign of life about the cottages. Probably the inhabitants were engaged on inland pursuits until a calm allowed them again to launch the boats.

He ordered the dinghy overside, nevertheless, and anchoring the trawler a mile off shore, went with two men to inspect the state of things. The fellows at the oars waxed fearful and uttered dire warnings, but, having given explicit directions, Laurence drove the boat headlong on shore. As she touched all three men leaped out, grasping the gunwales, and though the next roller swept them off their feet they were able, sprawling and tumbling, to run the boat out of reach of the crested smother of water that followed it, and sat on the shingle wet through and gasping.

They were about to begin more complaints, but catching Laurence's eye refrained. "How about the dynamite?" one asked. "Ye'll never get the stuff ashore that way—if ye want it ashore. The first bump we'll all go sky high together."

Laurence saw reason in the remark and despaired again, until the memory of the river near by, the Kirthaffjot, came to him. Leaving the men by the boat to dry their clothes in the sun as best they were able, he walked the intervening mile across the beach to its mouth. It ran over the shingle in a rapid muddy waterslide about two feet deep, pushing back the surf with its force. Over its lower end the hungry waves advanced roaring again and again, only to be beaten back in confused whirlpools as the glacier-fed flood, now in summer spate, resumed its resistless rush. A worse landing place could scarcely be conceived, but noting that if capsizing could be avoided it was not impossible for a moment to steady a boat in the current, Laurence resolved to make the attempt.

FEEDING ON PASTURE

Over large areas of Canada the milk produced on grass will always be the cheapest. Hence the proper care of pasture is most essential. If cattle are allowed on the pasture only after the grass is from 6 to 8 inches in height such pasture will yield most feed during the summer and will be best prepared to withstand drought. Natural pasture may be supplemented in the spring and fall by sowing a patch of fall rye, or during the summer months by seeding an annual pasture mixture composed of oats and barley or a mixture of oats and clover. The most successful dairymen as a rule feed a limited grain ration even when the cows are on pasture. Bran 2 parts, cottonseed 1 part, or bran 2 parts, ground oats 2 parts, and gluten or ground peas, 1 part, give good results.

MANURE vs. FERTILIZER

Differences Discussed for the Benefit of Canada's Farmers

Farm manures are teeming with bacterial life, and it is for this reason chiefly, I believe, writes Prof. Frank Shutt, that we have found it a successful practice to apply manure to muck soils. Muck is very largely semi-decayed vegetable matter. It looks like carrying coals to Newcastle to put more organic matter on such soil, but nevertheless we do find that even small amounts of barnyard manure are very useful at the outset in reclaiming these muck soils. Why? Partly because the plant food in the muck is not in an available condition, and there is a certain percentage of plant food in manure in an active, readily soluble and available condition.

The value of manure follows from what we may term an inoculation of the soil, the seeding of that soil with germs, with bacteria, and these cause a further breakdown of the components of the soil that will render the plant food of the muck soil available for crops. Consequently we believe there is a strong line of demarcation to be drawn between manures on the one hand and fertilizers on the other; this knowledge will make plain to our farmers why manure is undoubtedly, and must necessarily be, more effective than fertilizers.

There is a value in frequency of application. There is a natural destruction or dissipation of the organic matter in the soils from oxidation and chemical reactions following the tilling, the cultivation of the soil, which results in the loss more or less of this organic matter from the manure. When we first till our rich soils in the Northwest, there is for the first five years or so a very heavy destruction of humus material. As we proceed we reach a minimum, or at least a limit, below which the destruction of the humus becomes slower and slower. There is, however, always a loss; good farming methods seek to constantly replenish the soil with humus and plant food.

Faucet Tap for Large Cans

Oil cans shipped to an undeveloped region were not provided with a suitable tap, and it was found inconvenient to run off the oil from a plugged hole. The faucet tap shown in the sketch was devised, and proved convenient. A tapered screw was fitted to the faucet, and inserted through the end of the can by driving in the point and then turning the faucet until it was set tightly. A leather washer was provided to make a close joint. When the can is emptied, the faucet is quickly removed by unscrewing the threaded point, and may be used repeatedly.—Popular Mechanics.

BEST HOUSE PLANTS FOR GROWTH IN WEST

Experience of Calgary Flower-lover is Set Forth in Detail—Varieties and Handling

E. E. Morrison of Calgary, Alberta, writes of spring work with house plants as follows: The spring is a good time to repot our ferns. A good mixture of soil comprises three parts of fibrous loam, one part of sand, leaf soil and well-dried cow manure. Rub through a sieve, mix well together. Use clean pots with good drainage. Water once thoroughly after repotting, and then water sparingly for a time until the roots have started into the new soil.

Most people in the winter buy flowering plants in bloom or just coming into bloom but when spring sets in they begin to start propagating cuttings of various kinds, or buy young plants that have just started. With plenty of fresh air and sunshine, they get quick results, and the cuttings soon develop into nice plants.

Many Varieties

Some of the flowering plants grown here are primulas, cyclamen, begonias, cinerarias, geraniums, petunias, lilies, chrysanthemums, fuchsias, heliotrope, impatiens, etc. Primula obconica makes a nice house plant, as they bloom nearly all the year around. The new improved variety, Gigantea, is a very strong grower and blooms much finer than the old variety, and can be had in several colors. The Chinese primula is still a favorite. The colors are very striking, especially the deep red. Cyclamen still stand one of the foremost of winter flowering plants. They bloom freely for several months.

Cyclamen and Primula obconica in their young stages will grow well in a sandy loam. Spray foliage often, with careful watering at the root. Overwatering at this stage will turn the foliage yellow. When you have good developed plants and ready to be repotted into five or six inch pots, use a good stiff loam with a dust of bonemeal or dried cow manure. After pots are well filled with roots, they will take a liberal supply of water.

Caring for Geraniums

Geraniums are the most useful plants of any I know. They can be used in so many ways, as a pot plant, or for window boxes, flower beds, etc. A few good varieties worth growing are S. A. Nutt, double scarlet; Universe, single scarlet; A. Riccard, double scarlet; Beaute Portevine, double pink; Jean Viaud, double pink; Mrs. E. G. Hill, single pink; Wonder, single scarlet. Fall-struck cuttings make the best plants for summer flowering.

Do not use soil too rich for geraniums. Old plants that have been carried through the winter in many cases get far too much water, with the result that they are now leggy and very unsightly looking plants. They should have been kept on the dry side in the winter time, as with lack of air and sunshine they make all sappy growth. The best thing now is to cut them hard back and let them break again. The tops can easily be rooted in a mixture of sand and soil.

POULTRY SAYINGS

Swapping eggs does not accomplish much unless you know what you are getting.

When any man says he can pick out eggs that will hatch pullets, just by the looks of them, he wants me to think he is a good deal smarter than he is, says Farmer Vincent. I can guess as well as he can, and not a bit better.

Don't think because it is a machine that an incubator will run itself. It is a pretty particular business to attend to an incubator so that it will do good work.

If you hustle you can even yet build a good fireproof house for the hatching business. Then you can go to sleep and not fear that the incubators may set the house afire before morning.

Success with poultry lies at the end of years of hard work, thought, reading and experience.

No one is better situated than the everyday farmer to work out improvements in poultry stock; and yet the average farmer is just the one who has done least of this work.

Don't brag much about what you are doing this year in the poultry line. Next year's experience may knock it all in the head.

When we pick out eggs from hens that have a good laying record, we take a big step ahead.

Green food increases the probability of fertility in the eggs a hen lays.

Pluck is a more staple article than luck.

A man with shiftless habits never has record-laying hens.

Good poultry raisers are not necessarily good marketers. It will pay to study the markets.

THOROUGHBRED BLOOD GOOD FOR TROTTERS

Interesting Argument, Based on Records, by John E. Madden in Book and Interview

John E. Madden, the great owner of thoroughbreds, said in an interview:

"As a breeder of both thoroughbreds and trotters I have given much time to research, and it struck me forcibly that the warm blood of the race horse appeared close up in the pedigrees of our greatest performers at the diagonal gait. I make no claim that my little book contains every performer with thoroughbred blood as close as the second generation, but most of them are recorded and there is a sufficient number to convince even the most sceptical that the thoroughbred improves every family with which he comes in contact."

"Half-breds" were Good

Mr. Madden's volume on this subject shows that forty-five performers in 2.30 or better were out of absolutely thoroughbred dams, and of these Palo Alto, 2.08¾, was the champion stallion of his day, while another, Expressive, 2.12½, was undoubtedly one of the greatest three-year-old trotters that the world has ever known. Her campaign in 1894, when she repeatedly beat the best of the old horses in killing races of split heats, made her the sensational performer of that year.

Credit to Stanford

Both of these great trotters were bred by Senator Stanford at his Palo Alto stud in California, and it is largely due to this expert's judgment that the thoroughbred received a chance to show his quality in connection with the trotting family. Senator Stanford believed implicitly in the thoroughbred-standard-bred cross and lived long enough to prove its soundness. Of the forty-five performers which the author designates as "halfbred trotters," there are famous ones, including Proof of the Pudding, 2.28¾, by Peter the Great, 2.07¼, out of Souveraine, by (imported) Rayon d'Or, a mare which has thrown Gallant and other good winners on the turf.

CANNON TO KILL ANTS

It is hard to imagine big guns killing anything except men and horses. In South Africa and other tropical countries, however, they are used to kill ants—the termites, or warrior ants. These ants are as highly organized as the Huns. They live in a republic of their own, and are divided into classes of workmen, soldiers, and queens. The workmen construct the huge nests, the soldiers defend them and keep order, and the females, or queens, are cared for by all the others. The ant heaps of these particular ants are often 20 feet high and pyramidal in shape. Cattle climb upon them without crushing them. A dozen men can find shelter in some of their chambers, and native hunters often lie in wait inside them when out after wild animals—after the nests have been deserted of course.

The ants construct galleries which are as wide as the bore of a large cannon, and which run 3 feet or 4 feet underground. If we built houses as big in proportion a working man would live in a dwelling as big as a pyramid of Egypt. These ants are frightfully destructive, and the only way to kill them off is to blow them and their nests to pieces with guns loaded with grape-shot.

TELEPHONE POLE; 126 FEET

Pole Weighing 6,000 Pounds and Requiring Engine to Hoist

One of the tallest telephone poles in the world is where the wires of the Pacific States Telephone Company cross the Chehalis River, near Aberdeen, Wash. This pole is one single stick of Washington fir, 18 inches at the butt and 8 inches at the top. The pole weighs 6,000 pounds and is 126 feet high. The stick was cut at a point twelve miles distant and towed down the river, where it was erected by twelve men using a twelve-horse-power hoisting engine. For making attachments to the pole and raising it a five-eighths steel cable was employed run through 10-inch steel blocks.

Fuel Box in Seat Filled from Floor Trapdoor

A fuel box for the fireplace may be easily arranged so that it is unnecessary to carry the fuel through the living rooms, thus avoiding soiling floors and rugs. It may be installed, as shown, for a summer cottage, or even in the living room of a home. The fuel box is built under the seat of a comfortable settle, and the wood, coal, etc., are placed in the fuel compartment by passing it up through trapdoors in the floor at the center of the box. The fuel is piled at each side of the trapdoor behind a low partition, and the trapdoors are closed when not in use. The seat of the fuel box is divided at the middle and hinged to swing back. Suitable cushions should be provided for the seat.—Popular Mechanics.

A HUSBAND'S IMPRESSION.

Explains Away What Looked to Be an Exaggerated Statement.

MRS. KNOALL was greatly puzzled—and not without reason. The fact is, she happened to meet Mr. Newlywed one morning as he was rushing to catch his train and ventured, with her usual solicitude for other folks' affairs, to hope that Mrs. Newlywed wasn't having trouble with her servants.

"Oh, no!" said Mr. Newlywed. "We have got three."

Then he dashed off, leaving Mrs. Knoall gasping. Three servants, indeed! Why, it was common knowledge in Suburbville that the Newlyweds were anything but rich. How on earth, then, could they afford to keep three servants? Mrs. Knoall felt forced to call on the bride that afternoon to make investigations.

On his return home in the evening Mr. Newlywed was greeted with this question:

"John, whatever made you tell Mrs. Knoall this morning that we keep three servants?"

John smiled.

"Well, don't we, my dear?" he asked. "It seems to me that we always have one going, one coming and one here."—Philadelphia Record.

ABOUT ST. GENEVIEVE.

Patron Saint of Paris Did a Wonderful Work in Heroic Days.

Among the French who have had so many wonderful heroines among their women, Joan or Arc is perhaps most widely known, but the patron saint of Paris, Genevieve, is a no less beautiful character. Like Joan of Arc, she, too, was a peasant's daughter, but she lived nearly a thousand years before, when the world was far less civilized. But her death was a happy one, for the people she had helped were her friends, whereas Joan of Arc met her death in the flames to which the English condemned her, friendless except for her own people far away.

St. Genevieve lived in the fifth century. In those days the Roman empire had just about crumbled to pieces and the provinces were overrun by one horde of invaders after another. Among these was Attila, who had killed thousands and set fire to many cities in the belief that he was appointed by God to punish the people of Europe. It was while he was bearing down on Paris, and the inhabitants, paralyzed with the fear of his terrible name, were getting ready to flee, that St. Genevieve bravely persuaded them to remain and send their soldiers out to meet him. The result was that not only the soldiers of Paris, but of a large part of France and other countries met Attila the Hun at Chalons, and in one of the bloodiest battles of ancient times terribly defeated him. If it had been a victory for Attila, Europe might have had a far different history.

Later, too, when the Franks, another invading nation, descended upon Paris and besieged it, St. Genevieve secured relief for her city by risking a journey down the Seine River, in danger of her life, and implored people in other cities to send food to the starving Parisians.

Her good fortune in avoiding traps and dangers led to great respect for her by invading Franks, who thought her a supernatural character. Finally, the Franks succeeded in capturing Paris. It was the real beginning of the present French nation, but then it seemed a terrible misfortune to the poor inhabitants. St. Genevieve was not in the city, and she was ordered shut out, but she made her way in and confronted the terrible chief of the Franks, who yielded to his fears of her as a woman of God and did not slaughter or enslave the inhabitants of the city, as was customary in those days. When St. Genevieve died she was surrounded by the people of her city, whom she had befriended, and she was further made happy that the conquerors had been converted to Christianity.

NEEDS OF THE EMPIRE.

Suggestions That Will Vitally Affect Our Dominion.

The following are among the principal recommendations, etc., of the Dominion Royal Commission, which was appointed to investigate the resources within the Empire:

(1) It being vital that the Empire should become self-dependent for supplies of essential raw materials and commodities, a complete survey should be made of Empire production and requirements.

(2) Create an Imperial Development Board to undertake this survey, and generally to carry on permanently the work of the Commission.

(3) Local governments to carry on research in Dominions, limiting the Imperial Institute's activities to India, the Crown colonies and Protectorates.

(4) Control and supervise emigration under a central emigration authority in the United Kingdom, assisted by consultative board of representatives of the Dominions.

(5) Make special efforts to increase emigration by women.

(6) Arrange adequate capital, training and assistance for ex-soldier settlers.

(7) Extend and improve Imperial communications by deepening harbors, developing fast steamship services, regulating freights, extending and cheapening cables.

(8) Reform and strengthen Consular services and commercial intelligence.

(9) Unification of legislation on trade marks, patents and companies; establishment throughout the Empire of decimal coinage and metric weights and measures.

"It is vital," says the report, "that the Empire should, as far as possible be placed in a position which would enable it to resist any pressure which a foreign power or group of powers could exercise in time of peace or war, in virtue of a control of raw materials and commodities essential to its well-being." Pending the results of the Development Board's investigations, it is suggested that the Imperial and Dominion Governments should take steps to stimulate output and control supplies by:

(a) Grant of bounties.

(b) Government purchase at a minimum price.

(c) Restriction of foreign control within the Empire.

(d) Restriction of Government purchases to articles produced from Empire materials.

It is in regard to articles mainly produced and controlled in foreign countries that Government action is most needed in order to promote economic independence, and it is suggested that the Development Board should investigate:

(1) Measures to prevent waste in existing sources of supply.

(2) Possibilities of new sources of supply.

(3) Possibilities of substitutes where important commodities are not available within the Empire.

In the course of their inquiries the commissioners have travelled many thousands of miles, have visited the capitals of every State or Province of the self-governing Dominions and have examined over 850 expert witnesses. Their report is by far the most comprehensive survey of Empire resources, actual and potential, that has ever been attempted, and it is accompanied by proposals for the development and utilization of those resources which, although some of them invite criticism, will form the basis of future discussion and action.

INDIA'S ARMY ELEPHANTS.

Their Skill in Moving Big Guns That Have Become Stalled.

In India elephants are used in many ways in the army, especially in moving artillery. Of their work in this line a British writer says:

"When a gun comes to grief the elephant marches up with the important air of an experienced engineer and deliberately inspects the state of affairs. Thrusting his trunk around the spoke of a wheel, he gives it a lift as if to ascertain the depth and tenacity of the mud and then quietly walks around and does the same by the other wheel, dropping it again with a funny twinkle of the eye as if he said to himself, 'All right; I can start her, I think.'

"Then he deliberates for a few minutes, gives a slight push here and a slight push there, when, having at last made up his mind as to the best mode of procedure, he probably applies his forehead—which has been padded for the purpose—to the muzzle of the gun and, uttering a shrill, trumpet-like sound as a signal for the gun bullocks to pull together, pushes against it with all his weight, while the bullocks obey the signal and pull away too.

"This generally starts the gun. But if the bullocks are sulky and refuse to obey the signal the elephant gets perfectly furious and rushes at them, brandishing his trunk with such ferocity as usually compels obedience."

Storm Does Damage

A lot of damage was done in Cavan by electric storm, several houses and barns being struck.

Mr. . L. Fair's house was struck by lightning on Saturday. The lightning went in by the telephone wire and set fire to the curtains, door, lounge and carpet. It was noticed in time to save the other contents of the room, and with great effort the house was saved from total destruction.

The Town Hall at Centreville was also struck but did not get on fire.

A chimney on Mr. James Kinsman's hotel was also struck, but no serious damage done.

Mr. James Campbell's barn was burned with considerable oats, hay, etc.

Mr. Harry Earle had five sheep killed by the lightning.

Mr. Robinson's barn was also hit but no serious damage done.

Mr. George Hetherington's house got a bad jolt. One room in particular was hit hard, and considerable damage resulted.

It was one of the worst electrical storms that has visited this section of the country, and the rain came in torrents, knocking a lot of the grain flat. However, it has straightened again, and looks good.

Motor Accident in Millbrook

Mr. J. D. Byam, one of our leading merchants, had the misfortune to run into a horse and vehicle driven by Rev. William Higgs, on Monday evening. The horse reared and fell on its side, but aside from a pair of broken shafts no other damage was done. Had the car been going fast a serious accident might have resulted. We understand that the horse was cut a little, but no serious results are expected. Mr. Byam brought the car to a stop as soon as possible, and he or Mr. Higgs will not want another such thrilling experience for some time to come.

Successful Party

Shakespeare says: "There is a tide in the affairs or men," and it surely was on the crest of the tide that the Ladies' Aid of Grace Church held a garden party last Thursday. The beautiful lawn of Mr. Joseph Lancashire was the place kindly put at their disposal for the occasion, and very beautiful it looked, with the well-appointed handsomely decorated tables with a tempting supper, in which delicious strawberries were generously provided. Hundreds came from all points, and none went away unsatisfied. At eight o'clock the program of the evening was entered upon and proved most attractive. Dr. Lee presided and opened the proceedings by asking all to sing the Doxology. Briefly welcoming all present he asked the following to take part:—Mrs. McCormick and Miss B. Armstrong, piano duet; solo Mr. Bickel; violin solo, Mr. Whitehouse; with Mr. Nicholls as special accompanist. With great delight the audience listened to the splendid program and encores were numerous. Rev. Mr Higgs acceptably spoke, and Reeve Doak was also called on. At ten o'clock the singing of the National Anthem brought a most successful meeting to a close. The receipts were $136.

NEAR DROWNED GREAT RESCUE BY UNKNOWN

SAVES LIFE OF A WOODVILLE MAN IN LAKE SIMCOE.

Mr. R. J. Bruce, proprietor of the livery barn at Woodville, came within an ace of losing his life by drowning on Sunday while in bathing at Lake Simcoe, Beaverton.

Early in the day he drove a party of friends to Beaverton and in the afternoon decided to go in for a swim. He was the victim of a cramp and went down for the third time before noticed by a young man on shore. He was rescued by this unknown man and brought to land where he was treated by two young medical students who were motoring by. For half an hour they worked over Mr. Bruce, their efforts being finally successful.

In the meantime the young man who saved Mr. Bruce's life had departed without leaving his name or addres.

GRANDMA told me all about it,
Told me so I couldn't doubt it,
How she danced—the gay maxixe
All last night.
Grandma's gown was tight and trig
(Grandma never was a prig),
But I thought her new blue wig
Was a fright.

Have you seen my dear old tante
(No one nowadays says "aunt")
Since she danced off fifty pounds
From her hips?
She who walks today with vim
Takes one step toward being slim.
Tante's a mermaid in the swim
Doing dips.

Sister Anne, our debutante,
Goes to all the thes dansants.
Mother tangoes, trots and glides.
(Father laughs,
But some day he'll change his view.)
Both my married sisters, too,
With their other halves now do
Half-and-halfs.

Ready for my own debut,
I've a "dancing partner" too.
We can do the innovation
With eclat.
Do you think we'll hesitate?
No; we'll strike a lively gait.
Who is he? My frisky great-

TWO ONTARIO MEN SLATED FOR NEW UNION CABINET

Messrs. Guthrie and Rowell Mentioned in That Connection --- Demand for Coalition is General.

Ottawa, July 26.—The movement for a Union Government is gaining ground daily. Union with the Liberals in the country is already accomplished. Letters pouring into Ottawa by the hundreds prove this. The formation of a union war cabinet is now a certainty, although its actual organization will not take place until after the Ontario win-the-war convention of August 2 and 3, and the Western Liberal convention of August 7 and 8.

It is probable that no announcement will be made until the House prorogues. It would only create confusion to bring in new Ministers in the dying hours of Parliament.

The reputation of the Toronto Liberal convention by Mr. Hugh Guthrie and Mr. F. F. Pardee has given an empetus to the union movement. Mr. Guthrie has never wavered in his whole-hearted support of conscription and a coalition Government. As for Mr. Pardee, he is doubtless just as sincrere, but unfortunately Ottawa regards his professions with a little suspicion. He seconded the trick amendment of Hon. George P. Graham on the extension resolution. His name may have been used without his authority, but he made no attempt to dissociate himself from Laurier's Ontario leader.

Mr. Guthrie, as a result, rather than Mr. Pardee, is being mentioned as the most likely House Liberal from Ontario to enter a union Cabinet. The general belief is that the Ontario Liberal representation in the new Cabinet will be Mr. Guthrie and Mr. N. W. Rowell.

Thinks Canada Has Done Wonders

WITH the exception of a snarl from the Hearst papers to the effect that Canada ought to have conscription in order to do her share fairly with the United States, all the newspaper comment in the American press concerning Canada has been highly complimentary. Most of the commentators, indeed, seem to think that we have done wonders. One of the latest American writers to visit this country was Mr. W. O. McGeehan, of The New York Tribune staff. He observes that the only element not flocking to the colors are the French-Canadians, and he is amazed that this should be so. Apart from the slackness in Quebec, however, he has nothing but praise for what Canada has done and is doing. Some extracts from his article are of interest.

"Two months after Great Britain entered the war Canada sent to England its first contingent, a division of 33,000 men. These had been raised by voluntary enlistment, and were fully equipped and partly drilled in six weeks. One of the battalions in this division was the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. About twenty men of the original battalion are alive to-day. This division also included the 13th and 14th Battalions, from Montreal. These were the regiments that held their ground under the first gas attack at Ypres. To match Canada the United States in July should have on the way to France over 400,000 men. In two and a half years it should raise 5,000,000 men.

"The speed with which Canada responded to the first call is even more remarkable than its numerical showing. Great Britain entered the war on August 4, 1914. Canada at that time had a nominal standing army which was shipped to Bermuda. On or about October 14 there left from a port in Canada the first division of 33 000 men. By December the 'Princess Pats' went into action. In February of 1915 practically all of the first Canadian contingent were in the trenches and more battalions were on the way overseas. At the outbreak of the war Canada was as utterly unprepared as any part of the British Empire. The railroads were not prepared to carry troops for mobilization and there was no military transports. But in two and a half months an army twice the size of Pershing's punitive expedition—which, by the way, is almost the entire mobile army of the United States—was raised, equipped, trained and transported to the front. The railroads had been organized for the transportation of troops and sufficient shipping to carry the division overseas had been commandeered. Red tape was slashed and the obstructionists were silenced."

Mr. McGeehan thinks that the soul of Canada shines most serenely at the University Guild at Ottawa where men who have been so injured at the war that they are unable to return to their former occupations are being prepared for other work. Many of these returned soldiers have been gassed, and to look at them in the throes of an attack was heart-rending. One man who had been twice wounded told him that he would like to go back again "to have another crack at the Huns," and when one almost hopeless case, a victim of gas, muttered, "I hear those shells again," his companion replied, "Oh, buck up!" and that, says the writer, is the spirit of Canada. The work at Ottawa is in charge of Lieut. T. B. McCallum, formerly lecturer on philosophy at McGill. He went to the front, but was sent back to take control of the very important work which is destined to make over again several hundred wrecks from the firing line.

The writer concludes:

"I mention this side to show how thoroughly Canada has gone into the war, for we must go in just as thoroughly. We must send men to the front; we will get back many of them used up. We must make them over. Canada has blundered with the rest of the Empire, but Canada has come through gloriously steadfast with the Empire. We who are divided by an invisible border-line should find inspiration in the achievements of Canada and learn from her mistakes.

"'When did Canada first realize what the war meant?' I asked one officer who had been over and who was 'used up.'

"'When the casualty lists came in and when the wounded came home,' he replied. Perhaps, then, our delays are due to the fact that we will not realize what faces us until we begin to make over the men who have been used up. And if we give with the heroic generosity of Canada, if the courage of the American is equal to the courage of the Canadian, we shall have more than 1,000,000 men used up unless Prussianism is weaker than it seems."

Storing Powdered Coal.

In some places where experiments have been made in using powdered coal for fuel troubles have been encountered from the powder caking or packing in storage; but it has been found that, if it is permitted to cool off after the drying and pulverizing process and before it is put in storage, large quantities can be kept in a satisfactory condition.

FINANCE MINISTER BRINGS DOWN BILL TO TAX INCOMES

Income of $2000 a Year of Single Men Exempt—Tax Increases in Proportion to Income—Those in Excess of $100,000 a Year Are Heavily Hit.

Ottawa, July 26. — Sir Thomas White yesterday announced that the new income tax will exempt incomes of $3000 or under for married men and $2000 or under for single men or widowers without children. The tax is to be as follows:

On incomes over $2000 for single and $3000 for married men, four per cent. Then in addition there will be a supertax as follows: 2 per cent. on the amount by which the income exceeds $6000 up to $10,000; 5 per cent. from $10,0000 to $20,000; 8 per cent. from $50,000 to $100,000, and 25 per cent. over $100,000.

Joint stock companies are subject to a 4 per cent. income tax, but the shareholders are exempted to that extent on their incomes from that source.

Maintain Canada's Credit.

Sir Thomas White moved the House into committee in order to introduce his income tax proposals. He declared that the enactment of the Military Service would result in materially increasing war expenditure of the Dominion. In order to maintain Canada's credit it would be necessary to introduce further taxation measures.

The Minister declared that it has been decided also to adopt the graduated system of income tax. When the higher salaries were reached it was considered proper that they should be assessed at a higher rate. The proposals were as follows:

On all incomes exceeding $2000 for unmarried men and $3000 for married, 4 per cent. In addition to this a supertax was provided of 2 per cent. on the amount by which the income exceeded $6000, but did not exceed $10,000; of 5 per cent. on the amount by which the income exceeded $10,000, but did not exceed $20,000; of 8 per cent. on the amount by which it exceeded $20,000, but did not exceed $30,000; of 10 per cent. on the amount by which it exceeded $30,000 but did not exceed $50,0000; of 15 per cent. on the amount by which it exceeded $50,000, but did not exceed $100,000; and of 25 per cent. on the amount by which it exceeded $100,000.

ALIENS ARE UP FOR VAGRANCY

FIVE MEN CAN ESCAPE JAIL BY GOING BACK TO WORK.

Foreign laborers are giving the different construction companies all kinds of trouble all over the province, and here the Leonard Construction Co. are experiencing the same.

They engage all kinds of help and pay their railway fare here, and then the men, after getting a few meals and enjoying the sights of the city, refuse to work and leave the company in the lurch.

This morning at the police court five men, Austrians, Poles, and Russians, apeared before the magistrate on a charge of vagrancy. Chief Thompson explained the difficulty to the court, and also explained that the certificate of transfer issued to people of foreign birth, particularly aliens was getting to be a nuisance. The men ought to stay in one place and work at the wages that are now paid.

Police Magistrate Dumble gave the men until noon to go to work, and if they are at work by that time the charge will be withdrawn tomorrow morning. A jail penalty was threatened to them if any further refusal to work is heard of.

AUTOISTS ADVISED TO GO EASY IN USE OF GASOLINE

Supply of the Fuel Must be Conserved Say Experts in United States—Pleasure Riding Should be Stopped.

Washington, July 25.—In an effort to bring about the greatest possible conservation of gasoline stocks now on hand, and stimulate producers of oil to increase their output of petroleum, A. C. Bedford, President of the Standard Oil Company, has issued an authorized statement of warning to the nation.

Pointing out that while more new wells are being drilled, there has been no increase in production over the year before and that the nation is using 35,000,000 more barrels of oil than it is producing, Mr. Bedford asserts that if the United States Government is to obtain the oil that is necessary to a successful prosecution of the war it will be necessary for users of automobiles to eliminate pleasure riding and for the public to economize in every possible way in the use of gasoline.

Mr. Bedford's statement was issued in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee on Petroleum of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defence, on behalf of the members of the Petroleum Committee, and was as follows:

"In view of the abnormal conditions confronting the nation by reason of the war, it is peculiarly important that the country should understand the serious situation now prevailing in the petroleum industry.

Huge Annual Deficiency.

"This country is producing crude oil at the rate of about 300,000,000 barrels a year, but it is using it at the rate of 335,000,000 barrels a year. The amount of crude oil in storage, all grades, May 1, 1917, was 165,688,797 barrels. The country is absorbing the entire current production and drawing very rapidly upon its reserve supplies.

"The rapid development of the automobile is largely responsible for present conditions. In 1910 there were 400,000 automobiles in use in the United States; in 1916 the number was 2,350,000. Today there are more than 4,000,000 cars, demanding over 40,000,000 barrels of gasoline a year. Other uses of gasoline and oil are expanding upon an enormous scale.

"The demand for oil products is greater than the supply of crude oil. Because of the demand, the price of crude oil has risen, thus stimulating more and more producers to drill new wells. Though this drilling has been going on with great aggressiveness—because the cost of drilling is much greater than in the past and the total successes fewer than ever—the returns from such efforts are not as satisfactory as they were a year ago. In the first three months of this year 4,701 wells were completed, yielding an initial production per day of 344,876 barrels. In 1915, 1,711 new wells yielded 349,010 barrels.

"In other words, though there have been almost three times as many new wells drilled in 1917 as in 1915 the initial production is considerably less than in 1915. The drilling of wells is still going on, but thus far there has been no increase in production over last year or the year before."

WAS A CITY POLICE CASE COMMISSIONERS AGREE

"The decision of Chief Justice Falconbridge was absolutely right," declared the members of the Ontario License Board yesterday, when asked what they thought of the decision regarding the Hamilton apartment house case, where liquar was kept in a cellar of one of the occupants.

"The board wanted a judicial decision on this matter," said Vice-Chairman Dingman, "and this decision makes it definite."

"I didn't think the judgment of the magistrate would stand for a minute. This was not one of our cases but a city police case."

OIL FIELDS STRIKE

15,000 Men Have Quit Work In The Mexican Region

Mexico City, July 26.—General Ricaut, Governer of Tamaulipas, left for Tampico to take command of the situation resulting from the strike of 15,000 men employed in the oil fields. There have been rumors ever since the beginning of the war that Germans would attempt to tie up or destroy the field, which is one of the main sources of fuel supply for the British navy.

TRACTORS PROVE SUCCESS

Ontario Government To Start Sixty In Right Away For Ploughing

Toronto, July 26. — At a recent conference with the district representatives regarding the result of the use of tractors this year, Deputy Minister C. F. Bailey reported that those in commission this year had proved entirely satisfactory.

It is the intention, commencing right away, to place 60 tractors to do continuous ploughing until the cold weather sets in and no more can be done, so that the acreage to be sown next year will be far greater than what could be sown this year.

INSURANCE FOR SOLDIERS

U. S. Government Will Take Care Of Recruits

Washington, July 26.—Issuance of insurance policies from $1,000 to $10,000 to officers and men at ordinary peace-time rates, the Government paying the extra cost, indemnities for total or partial disability and administration of the entire scheme by the Government's war risk insurance bureau, which is at present insuring officers and crews of American merchant vessels, are among the outstanding features of the proposed military insurance programme.

THE CAMERA REVEALS WONDERS OF SPACE

Existence of Masses of Gas Proven by Pictures of Comets Whose Tails Have Been Shattered

We know that space contains solid masses of all sizes, from huge suns down to particles of meteoric dust. But it contains also masses of gas as asserted by J. Meunier, a Parisian astronomer. Mr. Munier believes that the erratic behavior of certain comets, especially the sudden alteration in the tails, may be accounted for by collisions with these gaseous masses, and that recent photographs of comets give evidence of their presence. He even suggests that they may influence terrestrial weather.

"The planets move in a narrow zone, near the plane of the eliptic," says M. Meunier, "while comets have orbits whose inclination to this plane is sometimes great. It varies for the periodic comets from 3 degrees to 162 degrees. Consequently these bodies reach regions of the solar system to which they alone penetrate. They burn; for their spectrum is that of the hydrocarbon flame. The theory that attributed to this spectrum an electric origin received a notable setback when the earth passed through the tail of Halley's comet in May, 1910.

"These incandescent masses, penetrating into new regions, act, so to speak, as explorers. When they are discovered, at vast distances from the sun, they appear generally as nebulous disks, more or less vague and either show no tail or only a tiny one. As they get nearer, the tail becomes more evident, and always appears under varied aspects. Here are some examples chosen from among recent comets that have been photographed. The Borrelly comet appeared on July 24, 1903, with a tail broken into the form of a bayonet. The Giacobini comet of 1905 had on December 21 a narrow tail, bounded by two convex edges, like an elongated flame drawn through the air. The next day, as if the resisting medium had disappeared, it opened into a fan, as if explosively; some days later, it sent out two fine rays, which were afterward multiplied.

"The most remarkable recent comet was undoubtedly Merehouse's of 1908. Discovered in September, it first showed variations of brilliancy. All at once, on October 15, without any warning, there was detached from it a mass more luminous than its own disk. This mass formed an angle like a mass of smoke issuing from the smoke-stack of a locomotive when a blast of wind strikes it. The following night there was a new surprise—an explosion that drew it out into a double spiral. On the left side of the first spiral was seen an incombustible globular mass of gas, forming an obstacle and leaving a well-marked place. This is not due to a photographic accident, for it appears also on a photograph taken at Heidelberg. In November the Morehouse comet was no less astonishing; on the 15th the extremely long and brilliant tail rolled up in a twisted form; on the 17th the disk put forth a sort of handle on the right side; on the 28th this had disappeared, but the principal twisted tail formed with two other side tails an acute trihedral angle.

"So many different appearances would surely not have existed if these bodies had been moving in a homogeneous medium, free of gas. Everything is explained in the simplest manner by the intervention of gaseous masses, and may be reproduced experimentally with ease by means of flames.

"Let us not despise the indications that these wandering bodies give us in their erratic courses. Interplanetary space, which contains solid bodies—the meteorites—is not wanting also in gaseous masses, and these doubtless play their part in the weather phenomena of our atmosphere."

Why Popcorn Pops

Why popcorn pops is not fully understood. Formerly it was supposed that the popping resulted from the expansion of oil in the kernel on being heated, but more probably it is due to the expansion of moisture contained in the starch cells.

This moisture expands, when heated, with sufficient force to cause an explosion of the cells and the kernel turns completely inside out, enveloping the embryo and hull.

Probably the expansion of the air within the seed coat also plays some part in the process.

CAMPERS' DANGERS

Forest Fires As Bad As Fires as Powder Factories

The camper said: It was early morning on Lake Golden. The air slowly surrendered its chilliness under the lengthening rays of the sun. The teapot sputtered over the coals, and bacon flavors filtered gratefully to the nostrils. The Old Veteran squatted himself comfortably on a granite boulder and nodded toward the fire. "Boys," he said, "there don't look to be anything dangerous in a little bunch of coals, does there?"

"Not this side of a powder factory," chipped in the Youngster. The Old Veteran tapped his pipe bowl significantly: "Some day we're going to have an argument about which is the best spot to trifle with fire—a powder factory or a forest, and I think the forest will come last. One advantage about the powder factory is that you know the worst right off. But in the forest you may walk away for days and have the fire of your own making overtake you."

Summer Pruning For Apples

Summer pruning as contracted with the regular practice is the pruning of trees while in foliage. Its influence upon the tree in many respects is opposite to winter pruning. The latter stimulates wood growth while the former tends to lessen wood growth.

As a rule, any practice that checks wood growth tends to induce fruitfulness. Growers have taken advantage of this fact for many years. In England the result is obtained by root pruning. The method consists in digging a trench around the tree at some considerable distance and severing some of the roots.

DISSOLUTION IN 3 WEEKS?

Montreal Hears Date of Election Is Fixed For September 20.

LARGE MOONLIGHT TRIP DOWN RIVER LAST NIGHT

Orange Excursion Steamer Was Crowded To Capacity

The Steamer "Geneva" carried a capacity crowd on the moonlight excursion last night under the auspices of the L.O.L. No. 50. The number of people who desired to spend the evening on the water was greater than the capacity of the steamer, and it was with a great deal of reluctance that Capt. Harris had to close the entrance to several parties.

However, those who were fortunate enough to be on board had an ideal sail down the river and returned home well-satisfied with the outing.

Judging by the number that were left behind and the number that arrived after the departure of the boat it would have been easy to have loaded another steamer.

LEVER FOR BOLD LEADER.

Indifference of Quebec Is Due to the Fathers of Confederation.

London, July 26.—Colonel Obed Smith has a letter from a French-Canadian at the front recommended for a commission, who, after relating the incidents of his daily life, proceeds to speak of conscription. "The question should be handled with steel gauntlets," he says. "Ignorance is rampant in my native province. The blame is on the shoulders of the Fathers of Confederation, who allowed two official languages. A dual language begets separate schools; they beget ignorance. It may require a small army to enforce the radical changes after the war, but we shall have it. The indifference of Quebec in this struggle will be a powerful lever in the hands of a bold leader."

Premier Borden will today in the Commons answer the unwarranted attacks on the conduct of Canadian soldiers in England as contained in the censored book "The Fiddlers."

THE RED LETTER BOXES BANNED BY FIRE CHIEFS.

Should Be Distinguished From Those of the Fire Department.

The Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association, in ninth annual convention at Port Arthur, passed a resolution asking the Dominion Government to have all letter boxes painted grey or green to prevent confusion with fire alarm boxes, which are uniformly red. Another resolution was one that the Dominion should institute two fire prevention "clean-up" weeks annually, the first week in May and the first week in October, for practical work, and that every municipality be notified of this resolution, leaving it to individual chiefs to carry it out. The chiefs unanimously favored the storage battery for fire alarm telegraph systems, as against the gravity system.

The conditions here complained of do not apply to Peterborough, as this city has a special color of its own for the fire boxes.

A wire has been received at Camp Borden headquarters from Ottawa granting permission to the A. A. G. to grant passes for men to go to points in the United States on their last leave.

OUR CHEMICAL INDUSTRY.

War Has Caused Activity Among Scientists.

A short address on the chemical industry in Canada was recently given by Mr. H. E. Howe before the American Chemical Society at its meeting in Kansas City. After noting some of the effects of the war upon the chemical industry it was pointed out that several countries heretofore not found in the list of those prominent in chemistry had shown great activity, and foremost among these is Canada. The work confronting the chemical industry in Canada, no less than in England, may be measured by the increased production of munitions since August, 1914. When it is remembered that British munition factories are now making more heavy gun ammunition every 24 hours than they produced during the entire first year of the war, some comprehension of the chemical and engineering problem, which have been overcome, can be had.

The production of acetone by an entirely new synthetic process is one of the recent Canadian achievements, as is also the production of metallic magnesium in bars and in powdered form for star shells. The activity in explosives involves new methods in the production of heavy chemicals. Potassium chlorate, bleach, caustic, cyanide, abrasives, carbide, ferromolybdenum and other alloys were referred to.

The steps being taken for the electrolytic refining of nickel were also described, and some information given relative to the progress of pharmaceutical preparations in Canada.

The progress of the pulp and paper industry is remarkable, going forward at a pace indicating the possibility of Canada's leading in the world's production of pulp in the very near future.

The steps being taken by the Government through an Advisory Council on Scientific and Industrial Research to provide properly trained men for work upon scientific problems is another important factor. The Government has established a forests products laboratory, while chemists now employed in the industry are looking forward to post-war conditions as well as being actively engaged with present problems.

Long Trip for Dredge.

When the dredge Quinnequhate leaves the Port Arthur drydock she will commence a 6,000 miles journey which will not be completed until Hudson Bay is reached. The vessel is now having her anchors, cranes, and other parts removed in preparation for the trip. The dredge was purchased this spring by the Canadian Government from the Canadian Dredging Company, and will be used in dredging James Bay preparatory to it being used as a national harbor. It is expected the vessel will take a month to make the trip.

A REAL EXPLORER

First Woman to Visit Parts of Amazon Wilds.

SHE HAD AN EXTENSIVE TRIP.

Making Her Home Among the Paraphernalia of a Scientific Journey, Mrs. Rice Accompanied Her Distinguished Husband Through South America.

With a homemade wireless outfit in the primeval forests of the interior of South America, thousands of miles from home, the party which accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice on their recent exploration were in constant touch with this country and the news of the world as the United States entered the war against Germany.

MRS. ALEXANDER H. RICE.

The Rice party returned recently after an extended trip on the steam yacht Alberta. "We carried a homemade wireless apparatus," said Dr. Rice, describing his adventures, "constructed by a man who had been in Brazil and knew the requirements. And it was simply wonderful to be able to be in those primeval forests thousands of miles away and receive from the Arlington station the tickings that spelled so much for science.

"After New Year's day we started back from the first stage of the trip which took us 2,100 miles up the Amazon river to Iquitos, Peru, which is 1,100 miles farther than Commodore Benedict took his yacht, the Oneida, several years ago.

"We started back, stopping at Manaos, a thousand miles from the mouth of the Amazon. Leaving the Alberta at Manaos, we went on our tour of exploration up the Rio Negro in a forty foot launch especially constructed for that purpose.

"Mrs. Rice is the first white woman who ever penetrated that almost inaccessible region of the South American continent. She bore the hardships and dangers of the expedition most courageously and was received with a respect bordering upon worship by the native women. They knew me from my previous trips there during the fifteen years of exploration which I have spent in those regions and were untiring in their efforts to lend every assistance in their power. I speak their language, Tupi Guarani, which is the vernacular Indian means of communication throughout Brazil from Paraguay to Venezuela.

"These Indians are a very hospitable and intelligent people. They would not accept money, but we brought them many presents of knives, fishhooks, jewelry, machetes, looking glasses and beads and left them a goodly store of medicines, with instructions how to use them.

"One of the purposes of our expedition was to make a good hydrographic and geological map of the Rio Negro, to link up the work on which I have been engaged so many years—the making of a map of the northwest Amazon valley. Another purpose was to test the practicability of determining the difference of longitude by wireless telegraphy. To accomplish this we employed the Arlington station's signals, using Washington as the primary meridian, being thus enabled to check up secondary and tertiary meridians."

Mrs. Rice was the widow of George D. Widener, who perished on the Lusitania.

Summer Hats.

The larger brimmed hats will certainly make their charming appearance as the summer days approach and Old Sol's rays threaten feminine complexions. And as the hats widen they will assume a much flatter outline. Some designers have shown the Watteau shepherdess hat for summer, that having the very bewitching turned up back.

In the Crisis.

"Your husband has been ill," said the caller.

"Yes," replied the little, worried looking woman, "he has been feeling very badly. I do my best to please him, but nothing seems to satisfy him."

"Is his condition critical?"

"It's worse than critical," she answered, with a sigh; "it's abusive."

Bath Togs.

Foulard in white spotted with huge [illegible] of black makes an effective bathing suit and is worn with black [illegible] cap, shoes and stockings. Roman striped taffetas are also in the front rank for extreme novelties, as are the sports silks with exotic splashes of color in all sizes of dots and squares and ovals.

WEST ENDERS ARE CHAMPIONS

Last night on the Water street alleys a great game was witnessed by many spectators when the West Ends and the King Pins played for the sugar. The West Ends were fortunate in capturing the first two games, which puts them in first place and gives to each man of the team a bag of the famous Lantic sugar. The King Pins won the last game, which put them in for second standing, but tonight's game may tell the tale. Solomon for the King Pins had high three games with a 452 count, and Capt. Routley of the West Ends had a 410 count for his team. Both teams had a close game, but the West Ends won out in the total by four pins. The scores were as follows:

DO FISH FEEL PAIN?

Angler's Brief Argument Against the Charge of Cruelty

General opinion appears to be that fish are almost insensible to pain. A keen angler, who had considerable experience, states that, in his opinion, which was only arrived at after most careful observation, fish are almost totally unable to feel pain as we understand it.

"When I was a boy," he says, "it was a common occurrence to hook, cast after cast, a young salmon (known locally as 'parr'), which, according to the fishing regulations, we were required to throw back into the river.

"As we were fishing for trout, these young salmon became a great nuisance, and in consequence were not removed very carefully from the hook. Some of these, therefore, were rather badly wounded when thrown back into the water, and one would have thought that they would lie low until they had recovered. One day I actually hooked the same fish on no less than three different occasions. Since then I have gathered a considerable amount of similar experience, and am firmly convinced that fish are practically insensible to pain."

-- SPORT PARAGRAPHS --

Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
I've stopped wond'ring what you are.
Solemn thoughts have filled my dome
As you lighted my way home—
What are you? Who put you there?
Do you just hang in the air?—
All these questions are unsolved;
You're entirely too involved.
From this world below so far,
Take this message, little star:
If you want to know me better,
Just sit down and write a letter.
I am too much in a hurry,
Twinkle on, then—I should worry.

There ought to be a lot of material ready to pick up for tryouts in the big leagues since the suspension of the Three I League and others. There are about 125 strong young men, willing to work and out of a job.

Bill Donovan is carrying one great sorrow around in his heart, and that is the failure of Mogridge and Cullop to come up to his expectations. There was every indication last season that they could be counted on to win a great many games. But they have both had a bad slump.

Clark Griffith still wants Napoleon Lajoie of the Toronto club. But President McCaffrey thinks too much of Napoleon to let him go for any ordinary consideration.

Ray Caldwell, Yankee pitcher, who likes to disport himself among the booze bubbles every now and then, and who has paid several thousand dollars more or less in fines for breaking training rules, has once more promised to behave himself. For that reason the owners of the Yankees have turned down several very good offers for the big twirler from managers who have it all doped out how to cure Mr. Caldwell of his dipso proclivities.

Grouchy Gus Says:

"The fancy prices being paid for some of the ball players in the major leagues is enough to arouse the envy of any dozen new-laid eggs."

One of the most interesting figures to come to the front in balldom during the present season is Eddie Rousch, the spectacular outfielder of the Cincinnati Nationals. Rousch, who broke into the game as an infielder, is now one of the leading sluggers in the National League. Rousch when he was with the White Sox several years ago was a right-hander, but threw his arm out at the shoulder one day, and that seemed to spell his finish. But Eddie didn't let a little thing like that interfere with his career. He set to work practicing with his left hand, and in time was able to perform as cleverly with that as he did formerly with his right wing. Finally he got a tryout with the Indianapolis club of the Federal League, playing in the outfield, and made good from the very beginning. When the Feds disbanded, many of the managers were afraid to take a chance on Rousch because of his arm. They were convinced that a man couldn't develop a new throwing arm after he had passed his eighteenth birthday. However, he was signed by the Giants along with Benny Kauff and Spitball Pitcher Anderson. When Christy Mathewson was traded to the Reds, it was a toss-up whether Rousch or Kauff would go with him. Finally the New Yorkers decided to keep Kauff and let Rousch go. Mathewson isn't a bit sorry the Giants decided as they did.

There once was a pitcher named Ray
Who'd a habit of straying away;
He'd get back when he could,
And agree to be good,
And get soused on the following day.

Famous Ball Players.

In 1891 Joe Kelly, who later became one of the most famous players in baseball, made his first appearance in fast company as a member of the Boston club. He was procured from the Lowell club of the New England League, which disbanded on July 24, 1891. Among other noted players then on the Lowell team were Charley (Duke) Farrell and Dick Conway. The season of 1892 was signalized in Boston by the acquisition of Hugh Duffy and Thomas McCarthy, two of the bet players who ever wore uniforms. Duffy was a born rebel. He jumped the Chicago Nationals to join the Players' League team of that city in 1890, and he jumped again in 1891, this time to the Boston American Association team. Ten years later, in 1901, Duffy jumped for the third time in his career, deserting the Boston National League club to cast his lot with the Milwaukee team of the American League. McCarthy was with the St. Louis Browns of the American Association during the turbulent years of 1890 and 1891, playing right field. With Boston in 1892, his first year as a member of the Hub team, he did not miss a single game. He and Duffy were styled "the Heavenly Twins."

Pugilistic Annals.

1905—Jack Johnson outpointed —— Grim in a six-round bout at Philadelphia.

1907—Peter Sullivan defeated Cyclone Johnny Thompson in twenty rounds at Ogden, Utah.

1908—Al Kauffman defeated Battling Johnson in seven rounds at Los Angeles.

Plastering Without Laths.

Many of the buildings in Naples and in the southern part of Italy generally are of tufa, a soft or porous stone. The walls are as a rule from one to four feet in thickness, and are treated externally with stucco work. Strips and laths are not used for interior work, but the wall to be plastered is first thoroughly wetted and the first coat of plaster is then applied, having nothing to adhere to except the tufa. Later the putty coat is applied.

An Important Accident.

Chemists discovered by research years ago the process of making artificial indigo, but it was only when a thermometer broke in the solution that they found out how to make the indigo cheap enough to be commercially valuable. The mercury so increased the yield of a certain acid that the process was cheapened sufficiently to make artificial indigo less expensive than natural indigo.

WHY COBB IS THE STAR PLAYER

Take two plays from one game that was played last week and the baseball fan will know why Tyrus Raymond Cobb is the world's greatest ball player besides his hitting and base-running ability.

Detroit was playing Philadelphia. The first time Cobb came to bat the bases were loaded, two men were out and the count got down to three and two on Tyrus. With the next pitched ball the three runners dashed for the next station. Cobb met the ball and hit a sharp bounder to short. The runner going toward second was too near the bag to give the shortstop an opportunity for a play there. He was a new man, this shortstop, had heard of Cobb's speed and knew his desperate style of running bases. He had time enough to get him, but he decided to take no chance. He made a hurried throw to first and the ball hit the ground three feet from the bag and bounded slowly to the firstbaseman, just slow enough to enable Cobb to beat the ball. Two runs scored. The next batter was an easy out.

Strunk was playing center field for Philadelphia in this game. He is one of the fastest men in any outfield, also has one of the best throwing arms in the majors. Cobb hit a sharp single over second. The ball went directly at Strunk in short center field. Strunk leisurely picked it up and pulled back his arm to throw to second. As he raised his arm over his head Cobb dashed for second, and he beat the throw. Now, Cobb figured that Strunk would never expect him to go to second, because of his great throwing wing, and Strunk just figured it that way. He was taken completely by surprise when Cobb made his unexpected dash, so surprised, in fact, that he hesitated just a second before making the throw, and gave Cobb just the needed time to beat the ball.

This play could never be worked on an ordinary outfielder or on one with a poor throwing arm, because he would expect to see Cobb pull the exact play that Strunk never suspected he would try.

In that same game Cobb got a base on balls. Before the fourth ball was pitched Cobb told Schang, catching for Philadelphia, that if he reached first he would steal on the first pitched ball. Cobb got to first. He made good his threat. Schang, surprised at Cobb's audacity, threw a trifle wide and Cobb went all the way to third.

This Cobb just thinks two plays ahead of the other fellow.

TWO BELGIAN RACES.

Walloons and Flemings Are Different in Many Respects.

The report emanating from Amsterdam to the effect that the German governor-general of Belgium is to divide that country's ministries of agriculture, industry, art, and science and labor into Flemish and Walloon ministries, calls attention to one of Belgium's characteristics, the distinct division between the two parts of the country.

In point of population the Walloon district of Belgium is considerably smaller than the Flemish, the latest census showing some 3,000,000 Walloons and 4,000,000 Flemings, but in area the Walloons have a slight advantage. The advantage in population grows out of the fact that three of the four cities of the kingdom which boast of more than 100,000 inhabitants—Brussels, Antwerp, and Ghent—are in Flemish territory, while Liege alone lies south of the roughly drawn imaginary boundary line running in a south-westerly direction from Aix-la-Chapelle (German, Aachen) to Lille.

The term Walloons is used to designate those Belgians who speak French or a French dialect, while the Flemings are those who speak Dutch or a Dutch dialect. Designated in provinces, the Walloons are in the main confined to Hainaut, Namur, Liege, Luxenberg, and a part of Brabant, comprising an area about five times as large as the state of Rhode Island, while Flemish territory approximates the area of the State of Connecticut.

In the veins of the Walloons runs a strain of Celtic blood, for they are the descendants of the Belgae of Julius Cæsar's day. They exchanged their own language for that of the Latins.

During the fierce religious conflicts of the sixteenth century the Walloons as a rule sided with the Spaniards and won the epithet of "The Malcontents." In fact, they furnished the Catholic monarch with many of his mercenaries during the days when the Duke of Alva, Don John of Austria, and Grand Commander Requesens were endeavoring to put down revolt in the Low Countries.

The Walloons are generally accredited with more vivacity and nervous energy than their Flemish countrymen, and in a country where industry and thrift are universal characteristics a comparison which awards the palm for these virtues to the Walloons is perhaps not odious. Among the lower classes, however, the Flemings are said to excel their brunette compatriots in personal neatness.

Among the most distinguished Walloon men of letters in the middle ages was the famous chronicler Froissart.

Sandbag Caves of Venice.

In other cities, when aerial bombardments take place, the citizens run for safety into underground cellars and store-places. But, as is well known, Venice has no cellars nor underground places. Around these houses there is water. One can hardly dig a few feet below the surface anywhere without coming to water. For this reason the ground floor of the houses are made of cement so as to be impermeable to water; but should any flaw or crack appear in them the water soon discovers it and comes bubbling up through it. Venice thus lacking underground cellars, a substitute had to be found for them. Fortunately, it possesses many strongly arched passages, and in these the authorities have provided what are called luoghi di rifugio (places of refuge). They are built of wood and sandbags. They have been constructed in every quarter of the city, and signboards on every corner point out the way to them. And so, when the watchmen sound the alarm on their trumpets, the people, like those of old, flying from the avenger of blood, can run into these refuges and be safe.

HOW TO FEED BABY

Especially Natural Feeding, the Ideal Way.

THE BEST OF SUSTENANCE.

Human Milk Was Intended For Babies, and the Next Best Substitute, Cow's Milk, Was Designed For Stomachs That Can Pass Tough Curds.

[Prepared by Ohio state department of health.]

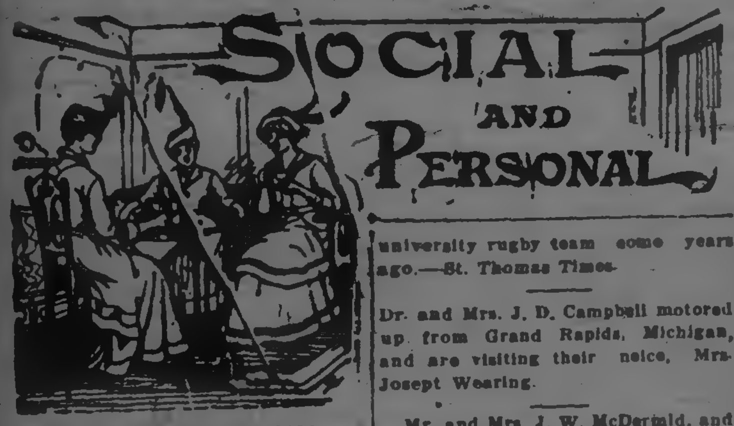
That human milk is the ideal food for babies is an accepted fact, but there may be too much even of this diet for the baby. The baby should have its milk regularly, but it should have long hours of rest between feedings. A baby's stomach holds one ounce at birth and three ounces at one month. Any one can realize how small this receptacle is if she remembers the very small bottle which comes when she orders an ounce of fluid at the drug store. It is a mystery why a woman will insist upon trying to make the poor baby's stomach, day after day, hold any amount of milk which the baby may swallow if nursed every fifteen minutes. This constant nursing overdistends the stomach and causes fermentation, vomiting and colic. The baby cries with the colic, and instead of giving the tiny little stomach a chance to rest the mother returns it to the breast and wonders why the baby will not nurse, or, if it does so, wonders why it cries harder than ever. If mothers would only learn that the frequent nursings only make matters worse and that often when the baby screams it has had too much food.

Some babies are gluttons, and if the milk flows easily they swallow too fast or overfill the stomach, and the result is that the stomach contracts forcibly and the food is ejected. Babies who vomit the milk almost unchanged as soon as it is swallowed often have simply eaten too fast.

The mother's milk may be too rich, and so the milk causes indigestion, and it may be eructated in the form of a cheesy mass which is quite undigested. In case of the mother's milk being too rich the baby may be given a drink of water from a bottle immediately before nursing, thus diluting the milk from the mother's body. The mother's milk, on the other hand, may be lacking in amount, and the baby may have to work very hard to get a very little nourishment.

The mother should remember that babies, like all other human beings, require generous amounts of water. The baby should have freshly boiled water every day. At first it may be given in a spoon, but later it may be put in a bottle, preferably one with a wide mouth and a large, flat nipple, and fed directly from this. This has two advantages, for it trains the baby to drink the water and to drink from a bottle.

The baby should be held during the nursing period so that it gets the milk readily and without strain to the mother. For this reason the low footstool upon which the foot of the same side that the baby is nursing may rest is the easiest, correct position. The period of nursing should not be dragged out indefinitely. Keep the baby awake while the meal is in progress and then let him rest. Twenty minutes, ten for each breast, is desirable with a three-hourly feeding. Most babies will thrive better if after the first three months they are put on four-hourly feedings. Many doctors begin earlier than this. Remember always to wake the baby when feeding time comes, between the hours of 6 in the morning and 10 at night.



SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

DAVIDSON—McWILLIAMS.

St. Paul's Church yesterday afternoon was the scene of a very pretty wedding when the pastor, Rev. Robt. Fogue, united in marriage Mary E., daughter of the late John A. McWilliams, 270 Rogers street, and Mr. E. D. Davidson, of Alameda, Sask.

The wedding service was largely attended by the friends of the bride, who was extremely popular in Ashburnham.

The bride, who was given away by her cousin, Mr. H. W. Morgan, was beautifully gowned in her travelling suit of blue silk poplin and wore a fawn tailored sailor hat. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple drove to the 3:45 C. P. R. train and left for their new home in Alameda, Sask.

Mrs. Frank Nicholls Kennin, who has been visiting in the city for a fortnight, has returned to her home in Toronto.

Capt. Gordon Campbell, of the 48th Highlanders, a Peterboro officer, who is home from the front, on furlough, paid a short visit to his grandmother in Petrolia, Mrs. Harrison Corey, and other relatives. Capt. Campbell is of Toronto University athletic fame. He captained the university rugby team some years ago.—St. Thomas Times.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Campbell motored up from Grand Rapids, Michigan, and are visiting their neice, Mrs. Josept Wearing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McDermid, and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Goodwill motored up to Georgian Bay points this week, the former going on to Collingwood and the latter to Wasagha Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwill returned home last evening very delighted with the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Roberts and family, of Cobourg, motored to the city last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Watson, of Port Hope, spent yesterday evening in the city.

Mrs. G. T. Hawkins, of Seattle, is visiting in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Barber, of Toronto are in the city.

Mr. J. J. McCabe, of Montreal, was a visitor to the city to-day.

Mr. T. B. Hayward, of Philadelphia, Pa., is in the city to-day.

Miss Clementi is the guest of Mrs. James Lang, Port Hope.

The Misses Gladys Pentland, Carrie Cruikshanks, Eva Outram and Lottie Hamilton have returned from Whitby where they have been spending a few weeks' holidays.

WOMEN TO HELP.

Veterans Ask Them to Work For Conscription Act.

Toronto, July 26.—At a meeting of War Veterans last night a conscription resolution was passed. It was addresed to the wives, sweethearts, mothers and sisters of soldiers, and read:

"That this meeting calls upon the wives, mothers, sweethearts and sisters of all who have fought for Canada in the Great War to lend to us their powerful aid and influence in forcing the application of conscription by selective draft without the criminal delay that would attend the waiting of a general election."

It was moved by Capt. Paul Goforth, who thought that an appeal from women would most likely be heard, and seconded by Lieut. H. A. Heaton, a winner of the Military Cross.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE

Women's Auxiliary Organize For Food Saving Campaign

When the committee of twenty-one drawn from the three military districts of Ontario, one of which Mrs. W. R. Morris of this city is a member, to serve as a Women's Auxiliary to the Organization of Resources Committee met yesterday at the Parliament Buildings, it was to elect from among their number a small executive. On this executive are: Lady Hendrie, Honorary Chairmen; Mrs. F. H. Torrington, Chairman; Lady Hearst, Mrs. N. W. Rowell and Mrs. W. Buchanan of Ravenna, ViceChairmen; Miss Ethel Chapman, Department of Agriculture; Mrs. W. E. Sanford, Hamilton; Mrs. George Brodie, Newmarket; Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, Toronto; Mrs. T. H. Patterson, Ellesmere.

The auxiliary, which was given power by the convention to add to its numbers, also appointed the following to serve on the general committee:

Mrs. Dinsmore, Sault Ste. Marie; Mrs. Comstock, Brockville; Mrs. R. V. Bray, Chatham.

CONSERVATIVES ELECTED

Premier Arsenault and J. D. Stewart Are Returned.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., July 26.—Both Conservatives were elected in the bye-elections held yesterday, Premier A. E. Arsenault by a majority of 99, and J. L. Stewart by 87.

At the general elections of 1915 Arsenault had 122 of a majority in the third district and ex-Premier Matheson 212 in the fifth. The vote in the third district showed little change.

FATHER GETS CHILD.

Campbellford Man Has Case in Toronto Court.

Toronto, July 26.—Mr. Justice Sutherland at Osgoode Hall yesterday granted an order to Mr. Reuben Tuttle of Campbellford for the custody of his ten-year-old girl. Mr. Tuttle is working at present at Campbellford, while his wife remains in Toronto with the child. In making the order, his Lordship did not discount the view that perhaps the wife might be more capable than her husband, but made the order on condition that Mr. Tuttle satisfy the court he had a proper home for her.

BRITAIN TO DISCHARGE GERMAN-BORN PERSONS

Bonar Law Intimates Government Will Look Over Civil Servants

London, July 26.—In the House of Commons Mr. Joynson-Hicks suggested that on the completion of the third year of the war all men of German extraction in any branch of the public service who objected to sharing in the defence of their adopted country enough no longer be employed by the state.

Bonar Law, Colonial Secretary, replied, saying that he sympathized with the views expressed by the honorable member, and that after inquiring at the various departments, the Government would consider whether such a course as that suggested was necessary.

"'Yes, Mr. Warburton,' said he, 'it's what you might call a very fine Panama.'"

WOMAN'S WORK.

What She May Do to Help on the National Struggle.

What can "she" do? How did Eve spend her time while Adam was hunting dragons? How did Calpurnia help when Julius Caesar was practicing frightfulness on the Gauls? What aid did Mrs. Grant give while the general was fighting the Virginia campaign? What have heroic women always done when the war cloud descended upon their country and their men took up spear or crossbow or rifle? Just the same thing that the women of America are to do during the continuance of this tremendous war.

"She" can keep the family going. The profession of most women is homekeeping, and there is no lessening of demand for competent mothers and sisters and aunts and sweethearts to feed the hungry, bring up the children and strengthen the hearts of the faint. Every country that goes into a real war fights on the base line of the home, from which aid, comfort and love flow without cessation to the men in the trenches. The great work of the home, which is the preservation of civilization, must go on, war or no war. If the father is where he cannot take part, the mother must shoulder care.

"She" can take a part in the industrial life of the country which will set hundreds of thousands of men free for the hard campaigning which they alone can perform. She has long been a workwoman in a factory, a saleswoman, a stenographer, a bookkeeper, a business woman—all those things she will keep on doing, and she will add innumerable tasks that are waiting for women to perform. In the great organization of the industrial forces of the country she will give indispensable help. The war cannot be successfully fought without her. New opportunities will open up to her as telegrapher, department clerk or confidential secretary. She will have the most glorious opportunity in the history of womankind to share in the constructive work of war.

"She" is wanted as an actual sharer in warlike operations. She will furnish the nurses, the experts in cooking, the storekeepers, the accountants, the searchers for lost soldiers, the aids to the convalescent. She will offer to many a poor wounded fellow that touch of home and humanity which will coax him back to life. She will furnish courage to her man on the firing line and to some other girl's man in the hospital.

"She" will nerve the nation up to its work. She will hold the patriotic meetings and organize the women of her city or of her hamlet to work together for the common need. She will be brave in defeat, she will urge on after victory. She may be depended upon, whether maid, wife or widow, to bear her equal share of the sacrifices and sufferings, of the joys and triumphs of the national struggle.

New Ribbons.

Bold effects confront one from the ribbon counters nowadays. The latest in ribbon fancies show vivid plaids and unusual color combinations in stripes. The reason for such is evident when the number of sports styles is taken into consideration. One could never use a dainty flowered or figured ribbon for a sports girdle, tie or vest, but these huge plaids and striking stripes are just the thing for the bright sports suit or dress of solid color. Some of the ribbons even go so far as to combine stripes, checks and plaids in one pattern.

LESS DUST WANTED.

Citizens Complain of Wretched Condition of Hunter Street, at the Bridge.

Complaints are continually reaching this office of the wretched condition of Hunter street, approaching the bridge, where the dust lies so thick that passers-by do so at the risk of dust-asphyxiation. One prominent citizen yesterday phoned to enquire if the whole City Council were out of town. While recognizing exceptional conditions owing to Quaker Oats construction work at this point he thought citizens were paying sufficient taxes to warrant temporary road work on the Hunter street bridge approaches and the occasional use of a little water, if oil is not practicable under the circumstances. It is to be hoped that Ald. Weir, Chairman of the Board of Works, will get busy on this question, and "let there be less dust."

PRIVATE R. PATTERSON IS REPORTED GASSED.

Word was received here yesterday that Private Robert Patterson, a son of Mr. W. J. Patterson, formerly of Ashburnham, had been gassed. How badly the young man is injured the notification does not say. He is a nephew of Mr. Alex. Patterson, of Ashburnham.

FREE TRIP FOR THE ORPHANS

AT EXPENSE OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL.

There was joy in the Children's Shelter today when the little folk received a cordial invitation from St. John's Church Sunday School to make the trip to Bewdley on the excursion to be run to-morrow under the auspices of the latter organization. The invitation includes the Shelter's executive staff and all expenses will be borne by the Sunday School. It is unnecessary to say that the invitation has been accepted with unqualified appreciation.

The children at the Shelter are mostly orphans and all of them, to say the least, neglected little ones, whom the Children's Aid Society have rescued from deplorable conditions, and to whom a participation in the joys of their more fortunate brothers and sisters is a rare treat indeed, and a God-send. And the practical sympathy extended by St. John's Sunday School in providing for them at least one real summer day's outing is a Christ-like act, worthy of emulation by other Christian organizations. Let us hope the weather man will also be kind on this occasion.

CANADIAN GUNS GET UPPER HAND

KERENSKY CALLS MEETING TO DISCUSS RUSSIA'S PERIL

Gathering Will Comprise Members of Duma Representatives From Labor Unions and Univerities---More Rioting in Petrograd---Kerensky Wounded Own by Soldiers.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, July 27.—Moved by the extraordinary gravity of Russia's position, Premier Kerensky is taking the exceptional step of convoking at Moscow July 31st an extraordinary National Council, which includes all the members of the Duma, prominent men from all parts of the empire, representatives of local assemblies, labor unions and universities.

More Rioting In Petrograd

London, July 27.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph through Copenhagen says there was fresh street rioting in Petrograd in the last two days in which the military completely suppressed the revolt led by the extreme Socialists.

Kerensky Wounded

Geneva, July 27. — A despatch dated July 22nd, printed by the Budapest A Zest, records the first contact of Austrian troops with Russian women battalions. The fighting took place on the Brzezany front, and the despatch says the women fought with extraordinary bravery, counter-attacking fiercely.

The same despatch ascribes to Russian prisoners the statement that M. Kerensky, the Russian Premier and minister of war and marine, was severely wounded in the arm near Brzezany. A Russian infantry regiment, says the despatch, refused to fight and retreated, whereupon the Russian artillery turned its guns upon it.

M. Kerensky, in an automobile, rushed between the two bodies and succeeded in stopping the slaughter, but was himself severely wounded.

Woman For Russian Navy

London, July 27.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Petrograd says that Rusian women have offered to train themselves as crews for battleships and that M. Kerensky has accepted their offer.

IRISH MEMBER IS SUSPENDED

MR. GINNELL REFUSED TO OBEY RULING OF THE SPEAKER.

London, July 27.—Laurence Ginnell, the Irish member, who has so often threatened to follow the example of other Sinn Fein members and abstain from attending parliament, was suspended by the Speaker in the house of commons for refusing to obey a ruling of the chair.

At the conclusion of the question period, Mr. Ginnell accused the government of having sent secret service men to the house yesterday to discredit the Sinn Feiners, and amid roars of laughter he said that if these men had been searched bombs would have been found in their pockets. In reading a number of threatening and abusive letters which he had received, he declared emphatically:

"I believe my life is in danger in this country. If my life is taken my death will be a death for Ireland and I consider it cheap."

He refused to resume his seat when ordered to do so, and the Speaker instructed the attendants to remove the unruly member. The house adjourned while the attendants hustled Mr. Ginnell from the chamber.

NEARLY DROWNED.

Sergt.-Major Jacobs had Close Call in the Water.

Another accident in which a soldier was involved took place this week at Tully's Landing when Sergt.-Major Jacobs of the arsenal guard was rescued from certain death in the Scugog by one of his men.

No further particulars are at hand except that he was going down for the third time when rescued by one of his companions.

LIBERAL EDITORS HOLD CONFERENCE IN TORONTO

Try to Find Way Out of Most Perplexing Situation That Has Ever Confronted Them—Examiner not Represented.

A conference of editors and publishers of Ontario Liberal newspapers was held at the Ontario Club in Toronto yesterday afternoon to discuss the political situation.

The gathering was fairly representative, but we fail to observe that our local contemporary had a part in the deliberations., probably deciding that the safer course is to watch in which general direction the band wagon will start before it commits itself by climbing on board. Then, too, it would probably be just as hard for our neighbor to locate itself on this issue as it is for its readers to form anything like an opinion as to where it stands.

The deliberations were something like a reproduction of "Hamlet" with the main character in the piece left out. The name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not mentioned. The Liberals cannot hope to escape by being non-committal on this point. Until they openly repudiate their former idol, the public are justified in the inference that he is still accepted by them as their leader.

The Liberal editors who find themselves in the most delicate position into which they have ever been forced by political exigencies, after a long discussion, sent out the following as their platform in the coming campaign:

(1) Canada's task is to organize her man-power and resources for the winning of the war, including compulsory military service, conscription of wealth, progressive income tax, increased food production, control of profiteering, nationalization of munition plants, national and personal thrift and economy, etc.

(2) It is essential that our troops be backed up by the needed reinforcements, and that the Liberal party in Ontario should stand squarely for compulsory military service, and that no candidate should be supported who will not support this.

(3) Sir Robert Borden and his Government have proved themselves unequal to these tasks. No other purely party Government at the present time could deal with them. A war Cabinet and Government representing both parties and the strong forces of the nation working for the winning of the war is, therefore, necessary.

PARK AUTOS ON MARKET

In order to make the handling of the traffic on George and Water streets much easier and at the same time to strictly comply with the traffic bylaw, all merchants and owners of offices who have cars are asked to park them on the Market Square tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon and thereafter every day.

The law as it now stands makes it an offence to leave an auto in front of any place of business or office for an unreasonable time, and unreasonable is capable of a definition, so broad that many car owners would be up in court every day unless some action is taken.

Merchants are objecting to the cars being left standing in front of their places of business and while the farmers can leave their cars in the hotel yards where they stop, the citizens are asked to leave their car on the Market Square while doing business down town.

This regulation goes into effect tomorrow and all those interested are asked to govern themselves accordingly as Chief Thompson intends to see that the traffic bylaw is strictly enforced in the future.

347,000 More Acres Sown in Britain

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 27.—Official figures published to-day reveal for the first time what tremendous agricultural efforts have been made throughout Britain this year. The increased acreage in grain and potatoes in England and Wales is 347,000, or six per cent, and the official estimate is that the area of small vegetable gardens has been increased four times.

Deserter Reaches End of His Tether

Daniel Wallace, Preaching Pacificism in United States, Is Arrested.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, July 27.—Daniel H. Wallace, who helped organize here recently men and women calling themselves conscientious objectors to war under the title "The League of Humanity," was arrested this morning at Davenport, Iowa, on a charge of high treason. He is a deserter from the British army, having been through the first months of the great war and deserting after the battle of Neuve Chapelle. Since coming to America he has been speaking and writing against war, one of his books being "Shanghaied Into War."

TREATMENT OF WAR PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, July 27.—An agreement reached at the Hague between German and British delegates regarding the exchange and treatment of prisoners has been ratified by the respective Governments. Direct repatriation is to be resumed. The qualifications for repatriation or internment in neutral countries on medical grounds are to be made more lenient, and the more seriously wounded now interned in Switzerland are to be returned to their countries to make room for others. Officers and men and commissioned officers, whether in health or not, who have been prisoners for eighteen months shall be eligible for interment in neutral countries.

Jassy, Rumania, July 27.—Occupation of ten villages by Rumanians in their new offensive announced by War Office. Austro-German forces retired in disorder.

ALLIES HAVE ONE PURPOSE

Paris, July 27.—The Allies Powers concluded their conference with the following announcement: "The Allied Powers, more closely united than ever for the defense of the people's rights, particularly in the Balkan peninsula, are resolved not to lay down their arms until they have attained the end which in their eyes dominates all others to render impossible a return of the criminal aggression such as that for which the Central Empires bear the responsibility."

There was an unanimous agreement on all the decisions reached during the meetings. The Ministers of the Departments affected will meet in London to draw up executive measures.

PRUSSIAN GUARD HAVE NO CHANCE WITH CANADIANS

Fiercest Artillery Duel Since War Began Results in Defeat of Picked Enemy Gunners --- Germans Taking Church Bells For Munition Material.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters, July 27. — "Our guns have at last definitely secured the upper hand on this part of the western front. Artillery actions, by which this has been done have been in progress for several days. With the object of challenging our ascendancy in guns, the enemy recently brought up a battery of artillery attached to a Prussian Guard division. These additional gunners were given practically unlimited supplies of ammunition, which they used for the bombardment of our heavy artillery positions. They were good men and a duel took place between them and our guns in Loos and Avion sectors. It has ceased now.

"The counter battery work of the British and Canadian gunners proved too much even for the highly trained Prussian Guard, and their activity is now sub-normal. Perhaps the question of shell supply had something to do with lessening the enemy's fire. It is certain the Germans are finding increasing difficulty in replacing projectiles used so prodigally in these bursts of activity.

"A letter from a relative to a soldier on this front dated July 16th stated that on the previous day the bells of the Protestant and Catholic churches in the village in which the writer enlisted had been removed to provide material for shells. Having stripped the cities of brass and copper, the German metal controller is now taking the village bells.

The use alike of drums containing liquid fire projected into the enemy's lines, and gas shells increase steadily. The enemy is also going more freely into gas warfare, which is the most terrible of all forms of taking life seen here at the front. Yesterday 18 tons of gas were sent over the enemy's lines in the Lievin sector, with practically no retaliation."

BRITISH CAPTURE NEW VILLAGE BUT WERE LATER FORCED TO FALL BACK BEFORE COUNTER ATTACK

Severe Fighting Reported From Front, British Capturing Twenty-Nine Prisoners in Raids ---German Casualties Heavy and British Losses Light --- Huns Destroy Their Own Submarine.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 27.—The British captured last night Labasseville in Belgium near the French border, but subsequently withdrew in the face of a German attack in force, the war office announces. The statement says: There was local fighting last night in the neighborhood of Labasseville southwest of Warnelon in which our troops have drove the enemy from the village and took several prisoners. This morning the enemy counter-attacked in force and our detachments in the village withdrew to own lines.

We captured twenty-nine prisoners last night as a result of successful raids in the neighborhood of Monchy and Le Preux, southwest of Labasse, and northeast of Ypres. Yesterday morning a German raid against our positions southeast of Gouzeaucourt led to sharp fighting. The enemy suffered considerable loss. Few of our men are missing.

Destroyed Own Sub.

Paris, July 27.—A German submarine was detsroyed on Thursday on the French coast west of Calais. The undersea boat went ashore and the crew unable to free her, opened the gasoline tanks and set fire to the vessel. Members of the crew reached shore where they were made prisoners.

THE WEATHER.

There has been a most agreeable change to cooler conditions today, accompanied by a fresh north breeze. Highest today, 83 degrees, as compared with 88 yesterday. Last night had the highest temperature of any night this summer, 68 degrees.—W.P.

STILL HOPING AGAINST HOPE

KITCHENER'S SISTER REFUSES TO BELIEVE HER BROTHER DEAD.

London, July 27.—According to The Morning Post, Mrs. Parker, sister of Lord Kitchener, opening a charity fete at Hastings, said she did not share the general belief that her brother went down in the Hampshire. It was the first time she has publicly announced her opinion on the subject, but it is her firm belief he is still alive and would one day return. Ever since the loss of the Hampshire she has tried to find out what happened to her brother.

AS TO MEMBERS ON HOME SERVICE

WILL BE RELEASED ONLY FOR VERY SPECIAL REASONS.

Military orders from headquarters, Ottawa, contain the following: "Numerous requests are received for the discharge of members of active militia units and special service companies on the ground that their detention in the service is a cause of hardship to their dependents. The urgent requirements of active militia units on guard duty and of special service companies are fully appreciated, and it is not the intention to release members of these units unless for very special purposes. There may be, however, special cases where the retention of married men in these units is the cause of undue hardships to their families, and authority is granted for the release of such cases as are absolutely deserving, but only after a thorough investigation of each case has been made.

Four New Members Appointed to Senate

REMAINING FIVE VACANCIES LIKELY TO BE FILLED AT ONCE.

Ottawa, July 27.—Four senatorial appointments were made by the Cabinet Council yesterday.

The new senators are: Richard Blain, M.P. for Peel; John Fisher, M.P. for Brant; David O. Lesperance, ex-M.P. for Quebec; Lendrum McMeans, K.C., of Winnipeg.

There are still five vacancies. It is understood that Claude NacDonell, M.P. for South Toronto, will get one. For the Montreal vacancies, Messrs. Smeaton White and H. A. Ekers are more prominently mentioned, though there is some uncertainty, due to the available material being in excess of requirements.

Angus Claude Macdonell, K.C., D.C.L., was born in Toronto June 23, 1861, is a barrister, unmarried, and has been a member of Parliament since 1904.

The local Collegiate Institute has added new honors to the already long record of successes scored at the various departmental examinations. Their names are as follows:

O. V. Armstrong (Pt. I.), H. S. Austin (Pt. II.), C. J. Carroll (Pt. II.), H. D. Crowe (Pt. I., honors), E. M. Curtis (Pt. II.), H. J. Halstead (Pt. I.), F. R. Pakenham (Pt. I.), T. Moloney (Pt. Where such candidate has still failed his statement of marks will be stamped as re-read and no further appeal will be allowed. In all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused if made before Sept. 1 and accompanied by the fee of $2. If made after Sept. 1 the fee is $5. "FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1917

PRINTERS IN THE WAR.

Forty-two crosses have been erected to mark the graves of members of the International Typographical Union killed in the war. A booklet published by the union and entitled "Somewhere in France," contains extracts from a very interesting letter written by Private Rothwell. His language is modest and unaffected. He is glad to know that he is doing his bit with more than six hundred members of the union.

There is a sentence in this little book that deserves to be read and pondered. "We are in favor of peace, national, international and industrial." The aim of a labor organization is not, as some imagine, the stirring up of strife. It seeks to protect he rights of its members, and so performs a function similar to that of a nation. But it also provides a means for the orderly settlement of industrial disputes. It is a safeguard against tame or helpless submission to injustice; it is likewise a safeguard against industrial anarchy. Its goal is peace with justice, as the goal of a nation ought to be.—Toronto Star.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR PROHIBITION.

THESE DAYS the majority of the electors and the public men are unquestionably in favor of prohibition. In the case of the latter class, this policy as often as not is inspired by expediency as well as by principle, the safety first theory, a desire in their own interests to give the people what they want.

If prohibition is to be made effective it must be instroduced and enforced in accordance with constitutional provisions. In the United States it must be admitted that temperance legislation, as exemplified in the various states is far in advance of that which prevails in Canada. Dry states are dry in effect as well as in name. But in that country men are still standing for constitutional rights, and if prohibition is finally made nation wide by federal enactment, the legislation will be proof against any attacks that may be made against it through the agency of the courts.

A short time ago a bill was introduced in the American Senate giving the President power to commandeer all the distilled liquors in the bonded warehouses of the United States, a supply sufficient, it was estimated, to serve the nation's purposes for ten years. The owners of this stock were to be paid the cost of production plus ten per cent by way of profit, and the liquor was then to be re-distilled for government use.

This step was acclaimed as a signal victory for the temperance forces, and in this country was cited as an example worthy the emulation of the Canadian Parliament. But the measure has been dropped as investigation has shown that under the constitution Congress has no right to fix, arbitrarily or otherwise, compensation for confiscated property, but that that authority comes within the jurisdiction of the courts.

But the American Congress is still working on a plan for federal prohibition, due regard being had to the constitution. If such a bill is passed it must be adopted by at least a two-thirds vote of both branches of the National Legislature, and then to have final effect must be endorsed by not less than thirty-six or three-fourths of all the states in the Union. According to the bill now before the Senate, the states are to be given six years in which to make up their minds as to whether or not the federal enactment is to be accepted.

Such a measure will hasten general prohibition in the neighboring republic, and the contemplated step will be perfectly legal. There is not the slightest possibility of a clash of national and state authority. In Canada, however, conditions are different. Any one province in the Dominion can, under the B. N. A. Act, remain in the wet column so long as the people by a majority vote so elect, no matter how pronounced may be the verdict for prohibition in the other legislative sections of the country.

THAT MISLEADING REPORT.

(Orillia Packet.)

NOTHING more misleading or dishonest than the O'Connor report on cold storage plants could well be imagined. The writer of it must have known very well, if he knows anything, that most people would understand the word "margin" to mean "profit," and in that way would be grossly misled. Mr. J. D. Flavelle for instance, shows, or points out, that the profits of the concern in which he is a partner last year amounted to barely one per cent.

MAJORITIES OFTEN WRONG.

IT HAS BEEN CLAIMED by men who are in favor of conscription and have been ever since the system was first suggested, that the Military Service Bill would be rejected if referred to a popular vote. The opposition of Quebec would be practically solid and there would be sufficient adverse votes in other parts of the Dominion to defeat the bill. Even taking this for granted, would it be the part of wisdom to divide the country at this time on such an issue?

No student of history need be reminded of how often the majority of the people have been wrong in the past, as subsequent events have so clearly shown. There is the possibility that the same condition prevails in the present instance.

Quebec's indifference in the work of carrying on the war is due not to any real lack of patriotism, but to a failure to realize the danger that threatens Canada in common with the rest of the world now in arms against Germany. This sentiment, in the early stages of the conflict, was not confined to Quebec. There were plenty of people even in Ontario who wondered why Canada should be drawn into a maelstrom of carnage in the creation of which this country had no voice. But to all such new light has been given. The fate that overtook Belgium and that was reserved for France by the invaders, would have befallen Canada had not the advance been halted where it was.

The people of Quebec are still the victims of a provincial spirit which limits their vision to the confines of their own province. If Canada was invaded by a foreign foe, the young men of Quebec would be found in the forefront of the battle. If they could be made to realize the danger which threatens them, if they could be freed from the malign influence of the blatant agitators, who for their own aggrandizement have misled them for years, and of politicians who traffic on their prejudices, the record of that province in the military annals of the nation would be vastly different today.

A vote on conscription, a general election on the old political lines, would not correct the errors under which the people of Quebec are living. An adverse verdict pronounced upon the present Government would not prove that the latter was wrong and the majority right, any more than a referendum vote recorded against conscription would demonstrate that that method was not the only recourse left the country under the circumstances.

The present is no time to dissipate the precious hours with academic discussion of constitutional rights or by weaving theories. The country is confronted by prosaic facts. What is required is less talk and more definite action. What may be regarded as an infringement of popular rights should be tolerated when the object in view is taken into consideration. When a city is on fire, the discussion of the best apparatus for fighting a conflagration is not opportune. The patient is often made the victim of seemingly harsh measures in order to save him from his own obstinate refusal to accept the treatment.

When a man gets the last word in an argument the chances are that it is because she throws it at him.

APPEAL TO CANADA'S PATRIOTS

The following is the call, signed by hundreds of the leading citizens of Ontario, including a number in Peterborough, for the Win-the-War Convention to be held in the Arena, Toronto, the largest building in the city with a seating capacity of 8000, Aug. 2nd and 3rd:

Believing as we do that in this crisis in the affairs of our country it is of vital importance:

That Canada shall dedicate all her resources of men and means to the winning of the war.

That if we are to justify our national existence, to succour our living and be worthy of our dead, conscriptive measures be immediately adopted and enforced to maintain the strength of our forces at the front and to discharge our full duty in the existing emergency.

That a national non-partisan government be established for the vigorous prosecution of the war.

That all patriotic elements in the country which place the winning of the war above all other considerations be united, to the end that their strength may be made effective to overcome selfishness and indifferences, and that the people of Canada may be dedicated anew to their high destiny of service in the war.

And deeming it essential for the welfare of Canada that all citizens of Ontario wha share these beliefs shall have an opportunity of expressing their adherence to these principles and of ensuing their enforcement,

And being convinced that patriotic Canadians can render no higher service to their country than by uniting our people to "carry on" with increasing vigour to the end,

We therefore invite all public-spirited citizens, of whatever political faith, to attend an Ontario Convention in Toronto, the capital of the Province, on Thursday and Friday, the 2nd and 3rd of August next.

The convention will be called to order at 3 p.m. on August 2nd.

All citizens desiring to be enrolled for this Convention are requested to send their names at once to the Recording Secretary of the Win-the-War Convention, 76 Adelaide Street West, Toronto. Tel. Adelaide 32.

JOHN M. GODFREY, Chairman.

BENJAMIN A. GOULD, Vice-Chairman.

FRANK WISE, Hon.-Secretary.

HENRY W. KING, Recording Secretary.

Toronto, July 24, 1917.

NO CHANCE FOR OTHER THAN WIN-THE-WAR CANDIDATES

The Ontario non-partisan Win-the-War Convention on Thursday and Friday of next week will be held in the Arena, the largest building in Toronto. The announcement of the convention has already produced so many requests for enrolment, said Mr. Gould, the vice-chairman of the executive, to-day, that the other halls under consideration had to be abandoned.

It is evident that a call for a truly popular convention looking for deliverance from the bondage of partyism will be the most welcomed event in Canadian national affairs since Confederation. Citizens who have called themselves by every political name unite in saying that the Convention is just what is needed to express the deep patriotism of the people who care intensely for success in the war and wish to translate their feelings into effective non-partisan action during the coming election. We have been obliged to take the arena because no other place would do.

Ladies' organizations want to be present at a gathering which promises to be epoch-making in Ontario and Canadian history. We are assured of unique support. From one riding alone fifty Liberals and fifty Conservatives will attend and every mail brings lists of public-spirited men who are with us heart and soul.

Asked as to the attitude of the political parties to the Convention, Mr. Gould said he knew very little about that and was not worrying. One prominent politician from a riding near Toronto, who had been in to see him, had said that there was mighty small chance of his being re-elected unless he got "under the wing of the Win-the-War Convention."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AND UNDER different conditions, Peterborough might have had a senator, too.

ABOUT THE ONLY hope left the Kaiser these days is that extended by the anti-conscriptionists.

THAT ESTIMABLE and thrifty couple, Mr. Jack Sprat and his wife, should be taken as models in every household in Canada.

SOME OF THESE DAYS the people of Peterborough will have a holiday with a really novel attraction—getting up to witness a sunrise for once.

THE GERMANS have been three years on the march to Paris, and are still far short of their objective. We have a number of octogenarians in Peterborough, any one of whom could easily beat that record.

THE DIFFERENCE between the anti-conscriptionists and the Germans is that the latter would rather die than be free, whereas the others would rather take a chance as slaves than risk their persons in combat.

* * *

THE ATTEMPT to take the vote of the soldiers at the front in the British Columbia election was considerable of a failure, and the result is still in dispute. How much worse would it be in the case of a general election?

PRESS OPINIONS

Mr. Graham's Devotion.

(Toronto News.)

Do Mr. George P. Graham and his ambitious associates believe that the Liberal party of Canada is an aggregation of feeble-minded devotees whose whole idea of patriotism consists in swinging censers of a sweet savor before the Buddha who sits on the Speaker's immediate left?

In Ireland.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

It is stated that the only parties not to be represented in the Irish conference to meet in Dublin tomorrow are the Sinn Feiners, Independent Nationalists, Labor Unionists and near-Socialists. Good heavens! how many more parties have they got there?

Conspiracy.

(Philadelphia North-American.)

Three thousand Italian barbers here have organized an anti-Baldi society. That looks suspiciously like a move to boost sales of hair tonic.

Hindy May Have Been Right.

(Buffalo Courier.)

Maybe, after all, Hindenburg was right when he said that the side with the better nerves would be the winners. Maybe, also, when he said it he had only imperfect knowledge of the nerves of those bulldog British.

Must Abdicate.

(New York Evening Sun.)

If we have a world-wide democracy the American Food Kings will have to abdicate, too.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of July 27, 1900:

There was a collision on the Grand Trunk near Madoc between the Belleville train from Peterborough and the Madoc train from Belleville. Archie Edmonds of Lindsay, engineer on the Peterborough train and Samuel Bird of Belleville, brakesman on the other train were killed. Both locomotives were reduced to scrap iron. Several passengers, besides Bert Hawkins, brakesman, of this town, were badly bruised.

Wit and Wisdom

His Step.

"Has he enlisted yet?"

"Not as yet, but I think he's going to. At least he has bought himself one of those military overcoats, with the belt and the big buckle in front.

Surely.

"He borrows from Peter to pay Paul."

"Well, that's all right, if you happen to be Paul."

Playing Safe.

"We have asked her several times to sing, and she has refused each time."

"If I were you I'd let it go at that. Some of the strangers may go away thinking they've missed something."

Surprised.

"I have called, sir, to ask your permission to marry your daughter."

"Thank you, young man. This is the first time that I can remember ever having been consulted first about anything appertaining to the plans of my household."

His Decision.

"I have been in your train a long time now."

"I can't marry you," said the girl.

"All right. Here's where I change cars, then."

Making Garden.

"Dearie, we ought to plant some pieplant."

"To be sure. And what sort of pies shall we raise?"

Keep the Same Hours.

Wife—"Robert, how can you stay away from home so late nights?"

Hub—"Oh, easily, I acquired the habit while I was courting you, my dear."

Too Much.

George Ade said at a wedding breakfast in St. Joseph:

"Once, in putting on a new play of mine, the manager refused to have a young married couple in the cast.

"'I'll take on one or the other, George,' he said, 'but not both.'

"'Why not both?' said I. 'They're both clever.'

"'That may be,' said he, 'but the public, George, doesn't care to see a man making love to his own wife.'

"'Looks too much like acting, eh?' said I."

Up To Germany.

"Germany, with her infernal military despotism, caused this awful world war, and hence Germany will have to bear the brunt of the indemnities and reparations."

Ambassador Gerard was replying to a toast to a Boston banquet. He went on:

"Germany, at the war's end, will be like the German private in the Civil war.

"A polecat one night got into a tent where a German private slept with a dozen other privates. The German woke up and looked about him helplessly, but his comrades, every one, slept on.

"Py chiminy, phew!" he exclaimed. "All der rest asleep, and I got ter shmell it all!"

NOT A ROMAN.

Here is a story from H.M.S. Erin: The Swedish drill-instructor was putting the men through it, and while the younger ones seemed to get on all right, one or two of the older men looked a bit puffed. At last one man, who had been younger in his day, told the instructor that he was too old for that sort of practice.

"But how old are you?"

"Forty-one next month," was the reply.

"Why," exclaimed the instructor, "the Romans used to do this sort of exercise at the age of sixty."

"Perhaps they did," said the perspiring private, "but I'm not a Roman; I'm a Wesleyan!"

Beer is said to be fattening, but much of it will make a man lean against something.

Time and tide wait for no man, but a woman before marriage may have more patience than Job.

WILLIAM BROWN IS SAID TO HAVE VIOLATED RULE

AND CAUSED THE EXPLOSION AT THE LINDSAY ARSENAL.

The coroners inquest to inquire into the cause of the death of the late Wm. Brown, of Keene, who was killed at the Arsenal on Monday was held in the Council Chamber, Lindsay, Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock.

The inquest was further adjourned until Gordon Stinson had sufficiently recovered to give evidence.

Evidence was submitted at Wednesday's hearing by Lieut.-Col. Weatherbee, Commandant at the Arsenal, who submitted a plan of that section of the plant, where the accident occurred, and also told the jury of the instructions given employes regarding the handling of explosives.

Mr. H. McEwan, foreman of the filling department, told of the instructions given deceased in the handling of explosives, and Louis McEwan, in charge of the mixing department, told of duties performed by Gordon Stinson, and instructions given him. Evidence was also submitted by Mr. D. Curtin and Miss E. Grozelle, employees at the Arsenal.

To be brief it might be mentioned that the evidence went to show that the deceased in carrying the explosive from the filling room to the receptacle violated the rules in going four and a half feet beyond in order to met Stinson. It was at this point the explosion occurred.

MONTREAL LADY SAVED FROM DEATH IN SCUGOG

The treacherous Scugog at Lindsay was near claiming another victim at about 3.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the brick yard wharf, when Mis Hooper, of Montreal, was heroically rescued from drowning by Mr. Frank Johnston of Toronto.

Miss Hooper is a guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Martin Palfrey, Pottery Corners, while Mr. Johnston is visiting with Mr. Wagstaff, proprietor of the brickyads.

The unfortunate lady was disappearing for the third and last time when she was sayed from a watery grave by the heroic efforts of Mr. Johnston. Such noble action as this surely deserves some recognition.

Some people are away up in the social scale because they are too light to bring it down.

HOW BANKS ARE AFFECTED BY NEW INCOME TAX BILL

Will Pay Vastly More in Taxes Than Under the Old System of Levy on Business Profits.

Having large reserves invested in their business and the 7 per cent. exemption allowed being calculated in total capital invested, the banks got off pretty lightly under the old business profits war tax. They will, in most cases, have to pay more under the new income tax. For example, a bank with $1,000,000 capital stock and $1,000,000 reserve was exempted for $140,000 profits, that is, 14 per cent on the capital stock. Under the new income tax the bank with $140,000 profits will pay four per cent on $137,000, or $5,480, instead of nothing as before. Under the business profits war tax the banks paid 25 per cent. of their net profits over 7 per cent., calculated on the total of their paid-up capital, of profit and loss carried forward, reserve fund, and balance at credit. Under the new income tax they will pay a straight 4 per cent. on their net profits, less the $3,000 exempt. From their net profits in both cases have to be subtracted contributions to the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds, etc., and the war tax on their bank note circulation.

According to their report submitted on Jan. 9th, 1917, for the year ending Nov. 30th, 1916, the Canadian Bank of Commerce's paid-up capital, amount of reserve, and balance at credit of profit and loss carried forward, amounted to $28,961,892.

Their net profits, minus contributions to Red Cross, etc., and war tax on bank note circulation, amounted to $2,240,427.

Seven per cent. profits on the $28,961,892, namely, $2,027,332, were exempt under the Business Profits War Tax, but they had to pay 25 per cent. or one-fourth of the difference between this $2,027,332 (exempt) and the $2,220,427 (net profits, with deductions), which amounted to $48,273 in taxes to the Government.

Under the new income tax they would pay a straight 4 per cent. on $2,220,427, less $3,000, or $88,697.

The Bank of Montreal has to pay $81,498 more than before, and so do most of the other banks, as the following table shows:

Name.	Amount paid Under Business Profits War Tax.	Amount to be paid under new Income Tax.
Canadian Bank of Commerce	$48,273	$88,697
Bank of Toronto		24,624
Bank of Montreal		81,498

TAKES LAW INTO HIS OWN HANDS

JOHN RICHARDSON FIRED GUN AT BOYS WHO ANNOYED HIM.

John Richardson, who lives on Waterford street was fined $5.00 and $2.60 costs for discharging a gun in the city limits.

It appeared from the evidence that a number of young men and boys were in the Goose Pond bathing and that sometimes the boys annoy the defendant. On this occasion he loaded his gun with a blank and a loaded cartridge and discharged both barrels into the water. The defendant alleged that the boys called him "Navigator," a name which he does not like. He also stated that the boys had frequently broken windows and committed other nuisances.

The magistrate told him that to report the boys direct to the police but he also informed him that he must not take the law into his own hands.

The defendant threatened to appeal from the conviction at the conclusion of the case. He was advised to give the gun into his employer's care.

For some time past Chief Thompson has been receiving complaints from the residents of East City regarding unknown men prowling around the rear of stores and residences.

This morning two young men from Montreal, whose names sounded Polish, appeared before the Police Magistrate on a charge of vagrancy. It was the old story that they were trying to get work and were going to get a job. The men admitted coming from Trenton to work for the Leonard Construction Co. but finding the work too hard had quit. They were told to go to work and stay at it or get out of the city. The other option was a jail sentence.

An examination of the hands of the men did not disclose evidence of very hard work.

TY. COBB DRAFTED.

But Georgian Peach Will Not Be Called Out Just Yet.

Ty Cobb has been notified that his number had been drawn in the military war draft, and therefore the king of batsmen may soon be shouldering a gun instead of a bat. The Detroit fans and Manager Jennings are not feeling greatly perturbed at present, as Cobb's number is a high one, and there are excellent chances of him not being taken in the first draft. Besides Cobb, Heilman, Boland, Yelle, Ehmke, Cunningham and Daley have been notified.

MASONIC FRATERNITY HOLD HOLIDAY SPORT AT IDLEWYLD

Athletic Games of all Varieties on Program—Outing so Enjoyed That it is to be Made an Annual Event.

Taking advantage of the Thursday half-holiday now a settled institution, for all who take advantage of it, the Masonic fraternity organised a small jaunt down the river, quite on fraternal lines. It was appreciated and enjoyed so much that the event will be an annual affair, and possibly grow in importance. Over one hundred participated; those who did not mised the time of the summer.

The steamer "Rainbow" carried the party. Idlewild was the objective. Reaching the island a series of sports were run off these being participated in and contested by those who seemed to like to work oc a quantity of energy. The programme gives the routine and the winners and avails. For to make the events worth while certain very valuable prizes were secured and awarded. It is understood that the general committee sanctioned and the sports committeed expended so much as 75 cents on the batch of prizes, without counting a box of good cigars. The prizes were valued not for intrinsic worth, but for the tremendous efforts put forth to be a winner.

Want of time interfered with the finish of a very sanguinary baseball game. As the game started off one side threatened by the way they went at it to wipe the other side out of existence. Hostilities closed down to go to dinner. That seemed the more important thing for the larger part of the gathering.

Dinner was served at the Harwood hotel. The tables had to be laid three times before all were served with a good well-cooked fish dinner, enjoyed by all, the guests being hungry from the outing in the lake air. A threatening storm cleared away, and the run home was very pleasant up the river.

List of sports and winners:—

50 yards running race.—Won by Ira Moore, second, J. Downing. Prizes, diamond ring and silver watch fob (said to be).

Fat man's race.—Won by Ward Patterson and D. Jardine. Prizes complete set of garden tools and a hammock. Prizes should be seen to be appreciated.

Hop, step and jump.—Many entries. Everybody participated—Won by Fred Roy and Mr. Reid. Prizes, dinner gong and flute. Both prizes well worth the price of admission.

Backward race.—Many contestants, many tumbles—Won by Chris. Graham and Louis Bowles. Prizes, special bull pup (bestowed on Chris.) and silver cup (to Bowles). Prizes greatly admired, especially the pup.

Standing broad jump (the jump was broad, not the men).—After fearful efforts and much energy, won by Fred Roy and J. A. McKone. McKone jumped in real business college style, but Fred Roy is a self-starter at jumps. Prizes, paid of motor goggles (very choice and stylish), and a reading lamp. When Mr Roy dons the goggles, his best friends won't know him. The lamp of knowledge Mr. McKone will take care of.

Shot Put.—All the modern Herculesses participated. As was to be expected, Chief Thompson put the rock all over the lot. He had elevation, weight, length of arm and authority all in his favor. Still. Ward Patterson made a good second. Prizes, pair of very fancy and reschere suspenders (a mile too short) and a game of chances). The latter well bestowed for Mr. Patterson took all the chances.

Tug-of-War.—Between a variety of teams. No less than three. This event was a screamer. The hotel guests turned out en masse to discern the cause of the excitement. Everybody howled themselves hoarse in delirious shouts of encouragement.—Won by the team chauffered by J. C. M. Wilson, of the C. G. E. Co. staff. Mr. Wilson has the pull, no doubt of it. The sod will need to be renovated. The teams captained by Chief Thompson, Pete Laing, Chas. Adair and Bro. Wilson, as before mentioned. Prise, a box of cigars.—N.B.:The weeds were burned on the way home. N. B.B.: It is darkly hinted that H. Abramson, the "anchor" for the Pete Laing team, held to his tracks, and that the evidence of the opposing team winning was that the rope stretched. Fact.

Baseball game.—Team of Shriners (whatever they are) and All Comers. Walter Stocker captained the Shriners, as any man might be proud to do; and Chris. Graham the All Comers. Shriners won by a score of one to nothing. But Chris did not get fairly started, and his team were expecting dinner to break out at any moment.

The general-committee-in-charge was made up of the officers of the local lodges, with Alex. Weddell as chairman. The sports committee was tooled along by Ross Dobbin, W. Richardson, Ira Moore, and Geo. Evans. The quartet looked and worked the part. A good share of the fun was due this committee. Ross Dobbin, chairman. This committee discharged the onerous duties of selecting the prizes on a very much attenuated appropriation with elegance and precision. It will be noted that someone had to decide who and who were not fat men. This pleasurable duty had to be given to someone impervious to public opinion. Walter Stacker was elected Official Weight Guesser. No appeals from decisions.

The excursion was indebted to Mr. Britton, of the Heintzman Co. local depot, for the use of a very fine Victrola or Sonora. with an ample repertoire of records. The refrain of "Roamin' in the Gloamin'" and "We Parted on the Shore" and many other vocal gems floated from the boat to the shores of the river on the trip home. Lauder has a good, strong voice, suitable for acquatic reproduction. All enjoyed the music.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Thos. Hooper for the use of the Idlewild, where hostilities of the games were carried on. And, furtherther, on the motion of W. R. Morris, it was decided to make the affair an annual one.

There were proceeds! Sure thing! And the balance it was decided should be handed to the Red Cross.

ENLIST ALL MEN THE NEW ORDER TO RECRUITERS

PETERBOROUGH MAN WINS RECOGNITION ON THE BATTLE FIELD.

Instructions have been issued by the Militia Department, Ottawa, to the different military districts, to the effect that all Infantry and Artillery Recruiting officers should enlist all men they can. In the case where a man enlisted is found to be of a lower physical standard than that required, he should be enlisted at once for other branches of the service. It has been pointed out that a great many prospective recruits have been lost to the service owing to the fact that recruiting officers are only interested in men who come up to the required standard for their special branch of the service.

Promoted on the Field

Lieut. J. Russel Patterson, of Peterboro, who went overseas as a private in No. 7 Queen's Hospital, and who returned to Canada to complete his course at Queen's University, has been appointed on the medical staff of the Military Hospital at Orpington, England. Lieut. Patterson, after completing his studies at Queen's, returned to the front, and was awarded a commission. He was with the Queen's Hospital at Cairo, Egypt, and also in France. His appointment is a source of great pleasure to his many friends.

CAUGHT A FOURTEEN POUNDER

Napoleon Trombley hooked a nice fourteen pound Lunge this morning. He was trawling near the C. P. R. bridge and with his old time skill his old luck nabbed this beauty. Nap swerved into the old eddy and with en ons a good fish as well as a good fish story.

CITIZENS ENJOY HALF HOLIDAY BY TRIP DOWN THE OTONABEE

Two Boats Were Required to Carry the Crowd to Rice Lake Resorts Yesterday—Incidents of Trip.

Yesterday afternoon the half holiday was thoroughly enjoyed by a host of pleasure seekers who took the delightful sail down the river to the Rice Lake resorts. There was plenty of accommodation for all yesterday, as the "Stoney Lake and the "Geneva" both proceeded down the river, and stopped at different points along the route.

The weather was just what "the doctor ordered" for a real afternoon's enjoyment, and those on board took in the beautiful scenery to their heart's content. To some members of the party the fields of ripening grain and the farmers drawing in the hay were of added interest. Judging from appearance some of the farmers will have their hands full getting the grain out and into the barns as fast as it is ripening.

To those who were looking to the future, the flocks of young wild ducks were a decided charm, and Rice Lake will be a marked spot as there were hundreds of little divers to be seen at the river marshes and at the lake.

Some of the barbers had a holiday, and with their families and friends took in the trip on the Otonabee. The tonsorial artists have made up their minds to follow the crowd and enjoy themselves on Thursday afternoons.

At Gore's Landing, which was the main objective point, those having baskets proceeded to the park, where lunch was partaken of, and those who were not provided enjoyed a good meal at the Rice Lake House.

On board the "Stoney Lake" some amusement was cause on the downward trip by watching the flight of a dollar bill, which a freak of a wind drew from the hand of a thirsty member. A well-known man of Irish descent watched carefully all the way home hoping to get sight of the lost slip, but no trace was heard of it. This is another strong argument in favor of carrying silver on your boat trips.

The trip home was made in good time, and all enjoyed the day's outing. The rain which started for a short time at Gore's Landing did not mar the fun.

Adjutant McIlbiney and his boy scouts were out in force at Jubilee Point to bid the excursionists a passing welcome.

At T. A. S. Park a large party of picnicers got up from their lunch and gave a cheer to the returning party.

Hundreds of small craft were encountered on the voyage home, and the wild remarks of a well-known comedian about "subs" and other things caused shivers and fun.

Capt. Scollard's development as a bureau of information is sometimes taxed, but there is one thing—he is seldom stuck for an answer.

GAMBLING DEBTS.

National Commission Will Not Take Up Cases for Ballplayers.

Cincinnati, July 27. — Baseball players who indulge in gambling and expect redress through the National Baseball Commission are doomed to disappointment, according to a decision handed down by the commission this week.

"Investigation established," says the commission, "that this obligation was incurred by the player as the result of gambling in a card game, and that at the suggestion of the claimant gave him his note for the amount.

"Following the precedent in all other cases in which financial obligations are contracted by players in games of chance, the commission dismisses the claim and serves notice that redress of that nature will not be recognized as enforceable."

Several complaints have been made to the commission in the past few years, and it is expected that this finding will settle the matter for good and all.

AT THE TEMPLE.

The Holiness service in the Temple will be conducted by Lieut. Kent of the Browmton Corps at 8 o'clock this evening. The week-end services will be conducted by the Band. Everybody welcome.

MRS. ADA JARVIS' SISTER DYING

PATIENT IN MICHIGAN HOSPITAL ANXIOUS TO HEAR OF HER RELATIVE.

Chief Thompson has been handed the following letter, which was adresed to Mayor Duffus, and he will be glad of hearing of any informaton that will lead to the location of the party:

Law Office, George C. Otto,
Chicago, July 23.

To the mayor of Peterborough.

Dear Sir:

I white this jetter in the interest of Mrs. Alice Maud Lavashere Taylor, an Englishwoman born at Manchester, England, and now ill in the Three Rivers Hospital, Three Rivers, Michigan. U.S.A. Mrs. Taylor wishes to locate her sister, Mrs. Ada Jarvis, who, some ten or more years ago, lived in your city. Mrs. Jarvis was the wife of a laboring man and had three sons. Both Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Jarvis were born in Manchester, England, and were the daughters of William L. Lavashere and Mary Ellen (Moore) Lavashere. They had one brother William. There was also a third sister, whose name I do not know.

Mrs. Taylor is alone in the world, and is so ill that the chances are she will never get out of the hospital. She would like to hear from her sister, or any other of her people. Mrs. Taylor's brother, William Lavashere, when last heard of, was on the ship Shapire, in the English navy. Mr. and Mrs. William L. Lavashere, Mrs. Taylor's parents, are both dead.

If you can locate Mrs. Jarvis, or any of her family, you will confer a great favor upon Mrs. Taylor. I shall, be indeed obliged for your kindness in any effort you may make to aid her.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) GEORGE C. OTTO.

MISS A. R. GRAY IS SECRETARY OTTAWA Y.W.C.A.

WAS FORMER ASSOCIATE SECRETARY OF PETERBOROUGH ASS'N.

A new general secretary to the Ottawa Y.W.C.A. has been appointed to succeed Miss Charlotte Sutcliffe, who leaves Ottawa to join the Dominion Council of the Young Women's Christian Association after many years of earnest and appreciated work.

Miss Annie R. Gray, who has been assistant secretary for four years, will be her successor, and the Ottawa association considers itself fortunate in obtaining her and is confident that the work will be successful under her direction. Miss Gray, who is from Pembroke, Ont., where she was educated in the public and high schools, taking honor matriculation from the latter, is also a graduate B.Sc. of first rank honors of McGill University, the latter degree being held by few women in Canada. Miss Gray also has the distinction of being a prize essayist of the Delta Sigma Literary Society, Royal Victoria College, Montreal. The social service appealed most strongly to Miss Gray after graduating in spite of many openings along scientific lines, and after spending a year as associate secretary in the Peterboro Y.W.C.A., she came to the Ottawa association four years ago. Miss Gray has also taken a very active part in missionary wark.

ENGINEER IS STRICKEN AT CAMPBELL CROFT

Mr. Harry Reeves, the well-known G.T.R. engineer, of Lindsay, was stricken with the heat at Campbellcroft, near Garden Hill, and as a result his left arm and leg are paralyzed.

Mr. Reeves was engineer on the engine attached to the work train, with Mr. P. Murphy as fireman. It had just pulled out of the gravel pit at Campbellcroft for Port Hope, when Mr. Reeves was overcome. Everything possible was done for him and it was decided to take the engine and caboose off the hauling train and bring him to Lindsay.

The special reached Lindsay shortly after ten o'clock on Wednesday evening, and Mr. Reeves was at once taken to his home on Henry Street.

Dr. Wood is attending Mr. Reeves, and the prospects are most favorable for complete recovery.

Mr. Reeves is one of the most popular of the G.T.R. employees and regret is expresed on all sides at his sudden illness.

"HOME" AT THE ROYAL.

This society comedy-drama success at the Royal Theatre tonight and to-morrow is the story of a girl who devotes her efforts to saving her family from the evils of a too-suddenly-acquired wealth and who nearly sacrifices her own life's happiness in succeeding. It is replete with comedy situations, although its fundamental theme is based on a big, serious idea. It narrates the experiences of a sensible girl upon her return from a European finishing school and shows how she cleverly awakens her kin to a realization of their mistake.

Peterborough Fair Will Be Held September 13-15.

The date of the Peterborough Exhibition is September 13, 14, 15th, and not the 20, 21, 22, as stated in the list issued from the Department.

Just where the mistake occurred is hard to state but the fact that Peterborough dates never conflict with other fairs was sufficient evidence that some one erred. Please bear this in mind and remember the date.

CHORISTERS AND CHRISTIANITY

Team Work Is Needed In Musical Organizations

Any small town may have a choral society, but its maintenance for more than one season may be difficult unless all concerned are willing to make sacrifices to ensure its success. If there is need for "team work" in baseball or hockey, how much more need in an organization of fifty or a hundred peaple of varying temper and temperament? Usually church choirs are the basis of such a society, but for some reason there is difficulty always in getting them to co-operate. The slightest jealousy on the part of one choir leader or organist towards another will make union imposaible. Some man must lead, and that fact must be ground into the singers even though their favorite leader is not the one chosen to wield the baton. Some man or woman must be the accompanist, though the one chosen may in the opinion of some singers have defects.

There must be a committee and in the selection of all committees the members of the society not chosen for this service may be discontented. Let them suppress their discontent and play the game. Finally the choice of music by the director may not satisfy every element of the chorus. Let them understand and remember that they have volunteered as choristers and that discipline is the foundation of success. They must obey someone, and it would be just as well to obey the director as some agitator in the back row. Finally it may be wise for choristers to remember that only one person can sit in each seat. It was the Pharisee who loved the chief seat in the synagogue. Probably also he demanded the chief seat in the Synagogue's Choral Society.

In truth, a chorus singer needs a good deal of Christianity. He must suppress his tastes, his likes and his dislikes in order to enjoy the satisfaction of a good ensemble. He must not be easily insulted. He must not be one of those tender souls hunting for occasions of offence. He must cultivate the sweet smile and the thick skin, and develop the sentiment of loyalty for those placed in authority over him. When enough persons of that type can be assembled in city or town or village, then a choral society is possible.

The board of health consists of three square meals a day.

In a collision between a street car and an automobile at Port Arthur Mrs. Findlay was killed, her husband badly injured, and Mrs. Chipman, Mrs. Nicklin and Mr. Gerry are in the hospital.

THE SAGEBRUSH ORCHESTRA

Interesting Story Of A Musical Missionary

All missionary work brings results, for the plain reason that the person who bears the message is an enthusiast. He or she compels attention and by personality forces concurrence. A musical missionary went six years ago to Harney County, Oregon, where the sagebrush is a salient feature in the landscape. In the middle of the county is the town of Burns, a hundred miles away from any other settlement and not even provided with a railroad. Mrs. M. V. Dodge was the missionary. Boston had been her home, the violin had been her amusement and her delight, and teaching children had been her hobby. There were children in Burns. What she did with them is explained by Mrs. Pauline De Vin, whiting in The Musician. "She proceeded, against all odds and prejudices to teach the little ones the kind of music that was worth while, to give them the mesage of the masters." Gradually her pupils became more efficient, and soon she was able to form them into a string orchestra of thirty members. Only the best compositions are used, and every child is required to memorize his or her part before being allowed to play in public. The result is that all the instrumentalists can keep a close eye on the conductor and give expression to the various "effects" desired. Kathleen Jordan, aged thirteen, is the star of the organization. She plays Brahms' Hungarian Dances and a dozen other solos with accuracy and distinction. Last month the band appeared in concert at five Oregon cities. Last autumn it was heard in Portland, and won the highest praise. At the State Fair in Salem a prize of $100 went to the little folk. To describe the enthusiasm of the children is impossible. To bound the satisfaction and pleasure of the teacher who has opened for them a new and delightful world need not be attempted by the most gifted writer.

It would have been easy for Mrs. Dodge to make a nuisance of herself in Burns. She might have gone about deploring, she might have enlightened all her associates concerning the wonderful opportunities of Boston and the appalling deadness of her new home. She might have mourned in public and in private. Instead, she "got busy." She was wise enough to know that people were people, and that children were children no matter where they happened to live. Without "side," without an exalted contempt for her non-musical acquaintances she plodded along telling the good tidings, and already a great thing has happened. There are towns in Ontario which might be made musically interesting if the people who know would bestir themselves, if the music-teachers would cease being drudges and become enthusiasts for a while. What can be done among the sagebrush and in an isolated community is not beyond accomplishment in Ontario.

TRICKS IN SIGHT READING.

Peculiarities of the Physical Constitution of the Eye.

It is the universal testimony that a course in the Theory of Music is of the greatest advnatage in the practice of correct and rapid reading. Yet few persons have grasped the reason for such increased facility. It may be said that the practice of recognizing the various chords as they appear in each major and minor key is the sole clause. It is more probably a secondary cause. The study of Harmony induces the pupil to read from the bottom up, instead of from the top down. All chords are named from the lowest bass note, whether 1. 3. 5., 2. 4. 7., or 4. 5. 7. As a general rule the whole reading system of the student is revolutionized by this fact. Children, especially if they are taught indifferently, take more interest in the "tune" than in any other part of the music. After the "tune" the righthand harmonies are more interesting. And this despite the certain truth that the bass is the foundation of all concerted or harmonized music.

The physical constitution of the eye is such that it looks upward about twice as rapidly as it looks downwards. In our ordinary reading of English we proceed by recognizing the tops of the letters and rarely concern ourselves with the bottoms of them. Those who doubt this statement may find their answer by covering the upper half of a line of newspaper type and seeing whether or not they can read it. They may be able to do so, with difficulty. But let them cover the bottom half and the line will be as plain and as easily read as if the letters were complete. There is reason, therefore, for the belief, that it takes much longer to read a chord from the top downwards than if the eye began at the bass note of it.

If teachers would consider this physical fact we would have fewer "musicians" who play well but whose sight-reading is like that of the orchestra player who had applied for a job. When he had made several ghastly mistakes, the conductor said, "I thought you said you could read at sight.' "So I can," responded the candidate, "but not at first sight."

Reading music is not a gift. Like reading English it improves by practice. Inasmuch also as we read the newspaper by word and by whole phrases, always having our eye half a line ahead of our understanding, we must read music in a similar way, if we hope to do it effectively. As one's musical knowledge enlarges, it will be possible to read by four-bar phrases. The student who reads and plays only chord by chord is similar to the primary schoolboy who reads his lesson as follows: "This—is—a—cow—by—the—stack."

THE CARELESS ENGLISH

He Slovens Over His "Ah's" And His "A's"

Singing in Latin and Italian a student is seriously concerned about the words, and particularly about the vowel sounds. He may not have a thorough knowledge of either language, but he knows enough to pronounce "Cum Sanc o Spiritu" as Koom Sahnktow Speereetoo and he "gets away wth it." Let him pick up an English song and immediately his interest in correct vowels disappears. He "slovens" over his "ah's" he makes a throaty nuisance of his "a's." Worse still he pronounces his consonants only when he feels like it. He knows English. He speaks it continuously, and carelessly. Naturally enough when he sings, the habit, of years persists. We have come a long way since Richard Brinsley Sheridan's father taught young gentlemen how to pronounce the English language, but the journey has been backwards. We are slovenly, slip-shod talkers. We nip off the final "g" in "ing." We use flat "a's" instead of broad ones. We do not distinguish between "t" and "d" between "p" and "b". For singers the chief result of such habits is that they can succeed admirably in making themselves understood. Sometimes an audience can catch several words of a song, but more frequently it can catch none at all.

Perhaps, then, the first requirement of vocal instruction is to teach the student to read. Two months of daily practice ought to be sufficient for him to grasp the salient peculiarities of the tongue he presumes to speak. Then as he learns to produce an open-throated resonant tone and to pronounce his consonants clearly and instantaneously he is on the high road to achievement—if he maintains his interest.

A MUSICAL SPOKESMAN FOR THE JEWISH PEOPLE

In a perusal of a number of American papers, there is noticed several references to a Jewish composer who is attempting to reflect in his music the racial characteristics of his race. He is not singled out because he is the first of that nationality to attain distinction in the word of music. Many Jews have won prominence as composers but they did not aim to produce essentially Jewish music. This man whose ambition is announced is Ernest Bloch born in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1880. He is the son of a merchant. At an early age he showed musical talent commencing to play the piano at the age of eight. His musical studies included training under Jacques-Dalcroze, Ysaye, and Rasse a pupil of Caesar Franck's. After a sojourn in Paris, he returned to Switzerland and owing to the reduced circumstances his family were in, worked as bookkeeper in his mother's shop. In his spare hours he worked on an opera. Later on he for a time conducted Symphony concerts.

Concerning his own aspirations he is credited with saying: "It is not my purpose, nor my desire, to attempt a reconstruction of Jewish music, of to base my work on melodies more or less authentic. I am not an archeologist. I hold it of first importance to write good genuine music, my music. It is the Jewish soul that interests me, the complex, glowing, agitated soul, that I feel vibrating throughout the Bible; the freshness and naivete of the patriarchs; the violence that is evident in prophetic books; the Jew's savage love of justice; the despair of the Preacher in Jerusalem; the sorrow and immensity of the Book of Job. All this is in us—in me and it is the better part of me. It is all this that I endeavor to hear in myself and to transcribe in my music, the venerable emotion of the race that slumbers way down in our soul."

It is claimed that none of Bloch's themes are Jewish and they are not even in the manner of the traditional Jewish melodies. Again he says of his work: "Superficially, my works are not Jewish at all. The learned Jews will no doubt reject them altogether. In fact I expect the strongest opposition to my work to come from Jews." Regarding Bloch's music Mr. Rosenfeld writing in The Seven Arts says: "It is authentic by virtue of qualities more fundamental than the synagogical modes on which it bases itself, the semitic pomp and color that inform it. There are moments when one hears in this music the harsh and haughty accents of the Hebrew tongue, sees the abrupt and passionate gestures of the Hebrew soul, feels the titanic burst of energy that created the race, and carried it safely across lands and times, out of the eternal Egypt, through the eternal Red Sea. It is as if an element that has remained unchanged throughout the ages, an element that is in every Jew, an element by which every Jew must know himself and his decent, were caught up in it and fixed there."

Charles E. McCool, a well-known newspaper man of Winnipeg and Saskatoon, has won his commission on the field.

A REMARKABLE PROPOSAL

A remarkable story has been enunciated by a distinguished operatic singer. He suggests that it may be wise for a vocalist to think about the song he is singing. Such a suggestion is revolutionary. It strikes at the very root of vocal practice amongst our people. It is well known that a singer must pay attention to his breath control, to the intonation, to the enunciation, to the phrasing. That is admitted. How then can he spare the time to meditate upon the idea of either the poet or the composer? Thinking, in any case, is an unpopular exercise, and if we apply the practice to our music there is no telling how far-reaching the silly practice might be.

Lord Devonport Worked At Very Difficult Task Forming England's Menu

WHEN the British food controller was appointed, it was predicted that the end of his career would be either a statue in Trafalgar Square or a lamppost in Whitehall. Lord Devonport has escaped both pinnacles. After less than six months in office he resigned, owing to a breakdown in health. The announcement curiously recalls his declaration, when voluntary rationing was introduced, that he had for some time been practicing the limited diet himself and had never been better and stronger in his life. Even if ill-health had not made his retirement necessary, it could not have been long postponed. His regime had been far from satisfactory, though some of the food controller's ideas worked well.

The policy of the British Government in relation to the food problem has undoubtedly had some good results. It has checked various forms of habitual waste. It has promoted more intelligent and economical methods of cooking, in the upper and middle classes, at any rate. The traditional British conservatism in matters of diet has been modified, if not reformed. Dishes hitherto unknown have become familiar on the menu of the household and the restaurant, and strange foodstuffs have begun to be utilized. Further, exhortations to increase the national food supply have led to the transformation of many of the waste places of the land into vegetable gardens. The neighborhood of even the most unpromising industrial centre has become brighter and more cheerful through this by-product of the war. The result of all this will be indirectly seen presently in a demand by the workers for better opportunities of getting in close contact with the land.

LORD DEVONPORT

The reduction of waste and the zeal for the cultivation of the land have combined to induce a more optimistic feeling with regard to the menace of compulsory rationing in the near future. It is most desirable that such a drastic measure should be avoided if by any means possible. It would require, we have been told, 50,000 officials to work it, and the printing of 120 million food tickets a week. Besides, the experience of countries that have already tried such a system shows that it creates many difficulties of its own, and in particular, does not really insure the equal treatment of town and country, and rich and poor.

It is recognized that one of Lord Devonport's blunders was his neglect to avail himself of expert assistance in the problems of food preparation and distribution. He is himself a big tea merchant, and presumably understands his own business thoroughly. But he has not thought it worth while to obtain first-hand information about other trades concerned. Bakers, for example, complain that, since they have been prohibited from making up the weight of a loaf with a cut piece of bread, there has been great waste. They cannot get every loaf from the oven the same weight. The task of equitable distribution, again, might have been greatly eased by inviting the help of the co-operative societies. These organizations have a membership of three or four millions, and were doing a trade, even before the war, of 450 million dollars a year. They know intimately the needs and habits of the working people, and are experts in everything that has to do with retail distribution. But their experience and skill have not been utilized by the Food Ministry.

Bolivia's New President.

Jose Nestor Gutierrez, the Minister of War, elected president of Bolivia to succeed General Ismael Montes, is a well-known political economist and banker. His political career dates from the beginning of the great war, although previous to that time he had held non-political posts in the national government. Since then his rise has been rapid. After being elected a deputy in 1914 he was appointed Minister of Finance in 1915, and in 1916 he became leader of the Liberal party and was talked of for president.

He was born on September 5, 1869, of noble English ancestry, his maternal grandmother having been Mrs. Rynde de Guerra. He studied in London and Manchester, and in 1887 entered the employ of the Huanchaca de Bolivia Mining Company. From there he went to the National bank of Bolivia, and in 1892 became chief accountant at the national treasury.

In the following year he was appointed reviewing officer of the national delegation in the North-West. Since then and until he entered politics he had been chief investigator of the Potosi bank, assistant secretary of finance, and inspector-general of banks. He is the author of "Banking Questions" and "Banking Reform."

By accepting the election of deputy he severed his relations with several financial enterprises, but was soon after successively elected vice-president and president of the chamber. He still held the latter office when he was appointed Minister of Finance in 1915.

Bolivia was the first South American state to ally herself with the United States after the rupture of diplomatic relations between Berlin and Washington, and she is the only South American country which has succeeded in placing a long-time loan in the United States since the war in Europe began.

Slavic Superstition.

In a sketch of the Russian peasant-autocrat, Rasputin, which appears in The Century, Princesse Lucien Murat calls attention to the fact that much of the power of Rasputin lay in his comprehension of the Russian character. "It is a platitude," she writes, "to say that the Slav is a mystic. It is less known that in the upper classes, where he is nearly a pagan, he is quite as superstitious as a peasant. He crosses himself incessantly, and is full of small superstitions. He shudders at the sight of three lights at a time. A raven on his right hand, or a solitary magpie, disturbs his equanimity for a whole day.

Beards Were Effeminate.

The ancient Romans considered it effeminate to wear beards. All their busts, representing the famous men of olden times, are without beards.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

The British Government agent at Winnipeg reduced the price of wheat to $2.35. He has been buying on basis of $2.40 No. 1 Northern.

Fire destroyed the grand stand and other buildings at the Regina exposition grounds. The big crowd in the grand stand got out in an orderly way.

Enlist Your Kitchen in the War!

"The kitchen must help as well as the workshop and the trenches"
Mr. Lloyd George has said it!

What does he mean?

He means you must know and practice real thrift—make every dollar you spend on food serve your family and your country. Banish those things which are wasteful and substitute real foods.

Lovers of tea and coffee must realize that these beverages are in no sense of the word food, but merely pleasant, slightly stimulating drinks, which, by the way, are soaring in price!

Thrift Suggests Serving Cocoa

It is a scientific fact that a cup of Cowan's Perfection Brand Cocoa contains more actual food value than a cup of beef extract, bouillon, or chicken soup.

Economies like Cowan's Cocoa render the diet more delightful, while saving money. And the saving effected in household expenses will enable you to help win the war another way—by Purchasing War Certificates!

For $21.50 you can buy at your nearest bank or Post office a War Savings Certificate for which in 3 years' time the Government will refund $25.00.

Remember every food economy you practice helps to defend the brave boys at the front.

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

He returned to the men. At his orders they placed their wet clothes in the boat, and, nearly naked, tried to run her out again through the surf. Three times they were swept back, each time narrowly escaping breaking the dinghy to matchwood, and when they did finally get past the hammering breakers the boat was full of water, and all three men were nearly exhausted. Laurence alone was happy—happier than he had been since the start of the voyage. The monotony of the last three days, broken only by the episode of the firebox, had nearly sent him to drink again. Perhaps nothing but the necessity of keeping a clear head had saved him; and this wild wet toil came as a distraction from the endless round of unhappy meditation that bade fair to break him on the slow wheel of thought. He baled the boat as the men rowed back to the trawler; and then, taking the dynamite, parcelled in cloth and tied with four long dangling rope ends, into the rocking dinghy, they rowed, aided by a third hand, back towards the river's mouth.

Waiting for a wave longer than the rest, Laurence rapped out a quick order, and the boat, propelled by one last mighty pull at the oars, shot over its crest and ran perhaps twice its length up the shallow stream, ploughing into the furious rush of water with a run that sent the fresh ice-cold spray over them in sheets. All four leaped out, lifting the parcel of dynamite by the rope ends and allowing the boat to slide back into the surf. The force of the stream, well over their knees, nearly swept them off their feet; the dinghy, caught in the roar of a following wave, was smashed to fragments close behind them; but at Laurence's shout they turned and staggered to the bank with their precious burden, depositing it safely on the beach and shouting like boys at their success.

"But th' boat's gone, Averil," said one of them at length. "How will we get off again?"

"Time enough to bother about that," he told them. "Here's work to do ashore first. When we've done we'll swim—or steal an Icelander's boat," he added, for the reckless joy of successful struggle was in his veins.

They unpacked the dynamite, repacking it in two parcels, each slung from shoulder ropes; and in an hour Laurence was leading them carefully across the bare wilderness, now warm with summertime, that he had traversed in those cold and weary hours two months before.

It took the little party with their dangerous load two hours to reach Uthild rock. The heat, to thickly clad, heavily loaded men, was overpowering, and the abundance of flies surprised Laurence greatly. The road was rough, too. Once past the [illegible] and deserted settlement it was necessary to scramble up and down over a constant succession of slippery lava hummocks, their faces and edges hard and sharp as polished steel; and the route that Laurence, stupefied with drink and misery, had traversed without notice in the [illegible] of early spring, proved a difficult matter for a body of men loaded with dangerous explosives to negotiate in the scorching midday of the brief northern summer. They were done up and exhausted, their nerves unstrung by occasional slips of booted feet on the bare lava, the surface of which gave but insecure foothold, long before they reached the rock. When they were within half a mile of it, Laurence ordered one of the packages to be left, and the four men together carried the other to the foot of the great boulder. There was no need for excavation, even had tools for the purpose been at hand. The poor mould that lay between the broken masses of malachite was easily removed by hand. He distributed the heavy cartridges he had brought between three of the cavities, and sent the men back to the other package whilst he affixed the fuses. Then with one last glance upwards at the great wall of hard tufa that centuries of weathering had barely smoothed, he set light to them and ran for dear life.

They were arranged to burn for ten minutes—and Laurence never lived a longer ten minutes in his life. The ground was hard and rough; his sea-boots of a sudden seemed to have become as heavy as lead; and he scrambled and ran, jumping from boulder to boulder like a man in a nightmare. Once he slipped, and imagining a twisted ankle, even before he touched ground, his blood ran cold with fear. But he was up again next minute, and threw himself down by the waiting men, sweating and gasping for breath, a full minute before the charge exploded.

Then!—a roar that seemed to shake the very ground, and that echoed from hill to hill, progressing faint and ever fainter towards the great glacier-topped uplands of the interior. A mighty and beautiful plume of white smoke jetted high into the sunlight, and wafted inland before the breeze in the direction of Asaa. As it cleared they looked anxiously at the rock, expecting to see no more of it; but as the white cloud around it was dispersed by the southerly wind, a stump full half its original height slowly emerged, still standing.

Without waiting a moment, Laurence set off towards the scene of his labors, telling the men to remain where they were. On reaching the spot he found the hollow had entirely vanished, its lava walls having been blown completely away. The turf and mould that had formed its carpet had also gone, leaving a pit with sides and bottom of dark grey shale. Over the spot where the malachite had been an enormous wedge-shaped slab of tufa, detached from the summit of the rock, had slid down when the base of the rock had been destroyed, and all traces of the malachite were hidden completely.

He went back to within shouting distance of the men, and called to them to bring up the remainder of the dynamite, sending up a fervent prayer that the quantity he had brought would be sufficient for his purpose. When they arrived he crawled beneath the great wedge and found a vacant space under a portion of the rock base that had escaped destruction. In this he placed his cartridges, reflecting that he would have to take care to crawl out without delay, and again sending the men to the rear, he fitted and lighted the last of the fuses.

Crawling out from that crack was the most awful ordeal that Laurence Averil had ever undergone. His movements were perforce deliberate; any hurry, any change from the exact direction in which he had entered, and he might stick fast, for the crack between the rocks was narrow in the extreme. In places he had to crawl sideways, his weight on the hand beneath him, and there was not room to bend his knees more than a hundredth from the straight. In thought he suffered death a hundred times as with teeth set and slow and careful motions, he edged himself towards outer air, the fuses fizzing merrily behind him. Once in the open he ran like a deer, reaching safety just as the second explosion occurred; and not until the smoke had blown completely away did he rise to a sitting position, his breath drawn in sobs between his teeth, to look at its work.

This time no trace of the rock remained. With the piled up lava that had buttressed it behind, it was strewn in shattered fragments over a circle a quarter of a mile across. He stood at the edge of the great pit the explosions had made and looked over its naked surface intently. Then he rubbed his eyes and looked again and then descended into the hollow to carefully scrutinise every portion of its interior.

But careful scrutiny only told him again the truth he had learned in that first glance. An unbroken face of shale met his view on every side of the pit, except where a cavity had become filled with once molten lava, and of malachite there was not a trace! and all his dreams, first for himself and then for Marion, had vanished into thin air—had drifted away into nothingness with the smoke of the two explosions!

The men, advancing, stood upon the brink above him, regarding the destruction with astonishment. He scrambled up to them to search among the debris of rock for a fragment of malachite. Two or three small pieces lay upon the lava, and he picked one up and showed it to them.

"See that green stuff?" he said. "That's what I'm looking for. Never mind any bits lying about here. Get into the pit and see if you can find any left stuck in the sides. There's a sovereign for the man who sees it first."

They searched for a couple of hours, Laurence going carefully over the ground after them, but not a trace of malachite was visible, and the stratified lines of the shale ran in unbroken regularity all round the excavation. At the end of that time he rose erect, straightening his back. "All right," he said. "That'll do. We need waste no longer time here. Now to find a boat," and the four men set off on their return to Langholt.

The inhabitants, alarmed at the explosions, had returned to their house, and two of the men met them when halfway to the shore. Laurence told them to return, saying that he wanted a boat. When they understood his Danish they shook their heads, saying that the surf was too high for one to be launched, but they walked back to the beach in company with the party. Once there, the first of the boats was taken by force and thrown into the breakers, no permission being asked of the owners, and Laurence, taking no notice of the Icelanders' cries, grasped one man by the collar and flung him in after it. The boat, being heavier than the smashed dinghy, rode off at the first attempt, the men hauling the weeping native on board as they shipped the oars. At the trawler's side Laurence gave him a sovereign, leaving him to beach the ungainly looking pram as best he might; and once aboard he gave orders to get under way at once, only going below to change his clothes when the anchor was up and the screw had begun to revolve.

When he came on deck an hour later Iceland was fading away to the northward, and long before the clear grey light of midnight had briefly replaced the summer sun it was gone from sight—as utterly gone as his golden dreams of but two short weeks before.

CHAPTER XXI.

Marion Stewart stood as Laurence had left her, dumb with surprise. In the course of a single forenoon she had received an offer that raised her to what she considered unheard-of affluence, and had asked Laurence for advice—more as an excuse to tell him of her good fortune, it is true, than because she desired any advice at all. He had told her to refuse—refuse—this most providential of offers; had informed her he was the son of the man who had ruined and killed her own father, and then had walked off, his manner as serenely matter-of-course as though such revelations were to him but daily events.

As he had anticipated, her surprise gave way to slow anger. That he, the son of that miscreant, that villain, Herman Averil, had ever dared even to speak to her! And he had kissed her—against her will, it was true, but still, kissed her he certainly had. The offence had rankled less in her mind this last week—some queer feeling that was not all antipathy had blended with it—but now this bouleversement of everything brought back her first impression of his hatefully masterful bearing, and she rubbed her mouth, half unconsciously, with the back of her little glove.

How dared he even to speak to her? But perhaps he had only known when he saw her letters that Fate had so linked their parents together. Whether he knew or not, he was bad—bad all through—of bad stock. No wonder he had gone away as he had. He dared not stay, the coward! Oh that she could tell him bitterly what she felt towards him and his father! Her two past years of strife and some of her early discouragements—the strife and discouragements that lie about the lonely and pretty woman's path—came to her mind, and she paled with anger. Well for him he had fled. "Coward, coward," she said—and, in her heart, knew she was lying. Well, brute, then. Detestable, hateful, and vile he had been, even—even if he wasn't afraid of things. She sat down and thought it all over. Could he have known anything of the circumstances of her father's case? She thought not, but reconsidering the fact of his friendship with Dwyer, left that question for the time unanswered. In any case, Dwyer's offer was outbidden. Laurence had said so himself. And she was to go to him for advice. She decided to do so on Monday. Meanwhile she would get a map of Iceland and some books and try to learn something of the place. She remembered it was sulphur her father had anticipated finding there, but, short of that, she remembered little of the catastrophe that had ended his days and turned her adrift to shift for herself.

She walked home slowly, to find Laurence had gone, and after the excitement of the morning the day dragged wearily and uneventfully. She went to the Exhibition in the evening, but returned early. Hating him as she was sure she did, she would not admit even to herself that his absence spoiled her pleasure; but although her good fortune was vividly present to her when she went to bed, some unformed feeling within her dulled its brightness. Was it regret that he had gone? she asked herself. No—a thousand times no. How could she possibly regret having seen the last of him? She fell asleep trying to find justly opprobrious terms in which to describe his effrontery and [illegible]

FORESTS FOR WEST MEAN PROSPERITY

Irrigation and Industries Depend On Trees—Wood Lots Are Big to Future

The Canadian Forestry Journal says: If the prairie provinces are going to have the timber that they will require in the future for the buildings of the towns and villages and for the supplying of wood using industries, it is necessary to begin considering immediately where the supply is to come from and where it is to be located. If there is no local supply of lumber there will be nothing to regulate the cost and almost any price may be charged by the importer. The time to make sure that the future prices and supply of lumber will be kept under control is now. A crop of trees cannot be grown in one year like a crop of wheat, and it is necessary to decide a long time ahead what particular piece of land is going to be kept for producing timber. Fortunately, timber will grow where nothing else will and the decision as to the lands on which the timber crops should be grown should be easy if it is once realized that the timber crop is essential and that a fair proportion of the land must be used for that purpose.

Develop Forest Reserves

The forests of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba gathered up in the Forest Reserves under the Dominion Government amount to over 25,000,000 acres. These reserves have been racked by forest fires in the past, but are now receiving protection. Those that are denuded of trees will be reforested as soon as possible and on those covered with trees steps will be taken to introduce more valuable species where advisable. The reserves are a valuable source of supply for fuel and small timber. They must be carefully protected and developed for years to come if they are to play their logical part in the commercial future of Western Canada. Ultimately, their contribution to the public service will be supplemented by the matured woodlots of the prairie farmers, for which four million trees are now distributed annually by the Dominion Forestry Branch.

For The Cities

The towns and cities reasonably expect to secure thriving industries utilizing wood products. The spruce and poplar of the prairies are the best species for making pulp and that manufacture opens up a field for many varied products and industries. Most municipalities of the West are looking forward to the day when industries will add to their population and prosperity. But what will give support to the industries if forest products have been blotted out?

The West possesses enough water powers to over-supply a populous nation. Water power development is possible in almost all parts of the country and is the keystone in any scheme of large industrial expansion. Irrigation is bringing millions of otherwise arid acres under revenue-producing crops. But what powers, whether for turbines or irrigation ditches, are not self-contained. They measure their value by their uniformity of flow. That uniformity is largely a question of abundant forest growth on the watershed of the streams. A stream without heavy forest growth to act as a natural storage reservoir is not dependable and loses a big part of its commercial value. The forest growth of Western Canada is not only a source of rich raw materials for immediate and future use, but represents the commercial availability of the water powers and irrigation projects.

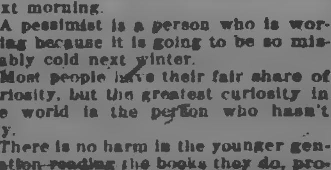
ELECTRICITY IN BELTS

Problem of Counteracting Its Effects is Mastered

Much difficulty was experienced in overcoming static electricity in belts and machinery in a large manufacturing plant. Grounding in the ordinary way proved useless and after numerous experiments the device shown in the sketch was installed and overcame the trouble completely. Two pieces of No. 6 copper wire, 14 in. long, were soldered to 12 prongs of No. 24 copper wire, 2 in. long and 1 in. apart. The resulting device appears like a comb, as shown in the illustration. One of the "combs" was fastened above the belt, as indicated, and the other was placed beneath a water pipe, or other grounded metal, so that the prongs came within 1-16 in. of the pipe or metal. Care must be taken that the combs do not touch the pipe, metal, or belt. The two combs were connected with a No. 24 wire, supported on a piece of wood, about 1 in. square and of proper length. The device may be used on various types of belts, providing a metal pipe or other medium for grounding the static electricity properly is available.—Samuel Baker, Toronto, Ont.



Fears Effect of Mother's Curse

INCREDIBLE as it may seem there is lying in a hospital near London a young British officer who is slowly losing his sight through the curse of an angry woman, says The London Weekly Dispatch.

Young Lieutenant K. (for obvious reasons names cannot be published) about eighteen months ago met a Miss M. and fell in love with her. After a short acquaintance they became engaged to be married, and soon afterwards he left England with his battalion—one of a famous infantry regiment—for the French front. Early this year he was wounded, and on his return to England discovered that his affection for Miss M. had cooled, that their temperaments were not suited to each other, as he had imagined.

Lieut. K. then took a step which required a great deal of moral courage, and before which many older men have shrunk—he is only in his early twenties. He wrote to his fiancee, frankly and sincerely told her the truth, and asked her to release him from his engagement. It was a brave and manly course to take, and Miss M., though she still loved her wounded warrior, recognized that he had decided wisely in withdrawing before it was too late from a union that could only have meant lifelong unhappiness for both. She gave him the freedom he sought. But her mother, infuriated into a sort of demoniac rage by what she regarded as the insult inflicted on her daughter, wrote to Lieut. K., who was then convalescent after his first wound, a letter, the burden of which was as follows:

"From the depths of my being I curse you. I curse you at night before I sleep and I curse you in the morning when I wake.

"I curse you wherever you may be, at home or abroad, in waking or in sleeping, at war or at peace.

"May your eyes lose their sight so that you may never again look into the eyes of a loving woman.

"May your ears lose their hearing so that you may never hear words of love whispered to you.

"Never again may it be your happiness to feel the arms of a loving and beloved woman round your neck. . . ."

There was more in this strain, but enough is quoted to reveal the woman who could express herself in such venomous terms.

It is not hard to imagine the effect of such a curse on the mind of a lad going out to the trenches for a second time, harassed by the doubt whether, after all, he had done the right thing by his fiancee. He went out to the Somme carrying Mrs. M.'s letter in his pocket.

In a few weeks he was home again, slightly injured by a shell-splinter, suffering from gun-deafness, and prostrated by shell-shock. And by an unfortunate coincidence the shock had affected his optic nerves.

It would not in ordinary circumstances have been a very serious case. Complete rest would probably, as in many other cases, have cured Lieut. K. of his gun-deafness and restored his nerves to their normal state. But when the poor boy found himself in hospital in France with his hearing affected and his eyesight impaired he bethought him of the words of that terrible letter from the mother of the girl he had once loved:

"May your eyes lose their sight;
May your ears lose their hearing."

It was the curse that had taken effect. He was going blind. He was going deaf. This was the vengeance of some Unseen Power for the wrong he had done to an innocent girl.

It is some weeks since the afflicted young officer was removed to England, and in his mind remains ever the idea that the curse is being fulfilled. It is seriously retarding his recovery, and it is impossible to predict how far the nerves may be wrought upon by the power of self-suggestion.

The Poison Gases.

We do not know definitely the composition of the gases used in trench fighting. From the appearance, odor, and effects on the men it is believed that a mixture of chlorine and bromine is employed with the possible addition of sulphur fumes or formoldehyde gas. Germany produces chlorine and bromine in large quantities. These gases attack the eyes, the lining of the mouth, throat, and nose. One part of bromine or chlorine in one thousand parts of air produces almost instant death. The gases first cause a violent cough, followed by spitting of blood.—Popular Science Monthly.

HER HOME NO LONGER CHILDLESS

Operation not Necessary after Taking the Great Medicine for Women.

Miller's Falls, Mass.—"Doctors said I had displacement very badly and I would have to have an operation. I had a soreness in both sides and a pulling sensation in my right side. I could not do much work the pain was so bad. I was also troubled with irregularity and other weaknesses. My blood was poor. We had been married four years and had no children.

After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I became well and strong and was saved from the operation. We are now the parents of a big baby girl and I praise your remedies to others and give you permission to publish my letter."—Mrs. JOSEPH GUILBAULT, JR., Bridge Street, Miller's Falls, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is famous for restoring women to normal health and strength. When this is done wives no longer despair of having children.

A woman should be reluctant to submit to a surgical operation until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. If you have a case that needs special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Suffragettes Still Work.

Advocates of equal suffrage who have devoted much time to its promotion are turning their activities into other channels, now that the success of that cause appears to be assured. The Ontario Equal Suffrage League may be cited as an illustration. That body has reorganised, under the name Ontario Citizens' League, and has adopted a platform including a number of needed reforms. Temperance promulgators will doubtless pursue a similar course, on the arrival of national prohibition. Workers for civic progress are certain to find plenty to do, if not in one field, then in another.

Nearly all artificial gems—that is to say, stones that are really made by artificial means—are compounds of alum crystallised under special conditions. TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

PROPERLY COOLED CREAM

Complete Directions For Clean Handling After Separated

Cool the cream immediately after separation by setting the can in cold water. The spoiling of cream, as well as the decomposition and putrefaction of other food stuffs, is caused by germ life, bacteria, yeast, and molds. Like other living organisms, germs require warmth to thrive. In the absence of warmth they are inactive and are unable to continue their work of destruction.

When the cream comes from the separator it is warm and in ideal condition for bacterial decomposition and spoiling. If it is cooled promptly the activity of the bacterial is checked and the cream will keep sweet for a reasonable length of time. The lower the temperature to which it is cooled the longer it will keep in normal condition. Cooling to the temperature of the water available on the average farm alone greatly retards bacterial action and prevents spoiling. Cream should be cooled at once after it leaves the separator.

Prompt cooling is not possible by merely letting the cans stand in the air. Air is a very poor conductor of heat. The cans must be set in water. Water cools cream about thirty times as fast as air. Set the cream cans in a trough, tight box, tank, or half barrel containing water. If running water is available, let the water run through the tank continuously; if not, fill the tank up with fresh water at least once every twelve hours. If the cooling tank is connected with the stock watering trough, the water needed for the stock serves to cool the cream by running through the cooling tank first.

PRESERVE EGGS FOR NEXT WINTER

The indications are that eggs will be dear next winter, dearer than they were last winter, so those who want eggs had better put some down while they were cheap. Do not use oats, bran, salt, or such mediums; moreover, the patent preservatives usually advertised as being so simple and effective had better be adopted with caution. Better use something that has been tried and found satisfactory.

According to Dr. Frank T. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, lime water is one of the best preservatives, and we quott the following from his Exhibition circular No 42.

The method of prepatation is quick lime with a small quantity of water and then stir the milk of lime so formed into five gallons of water. After the mixture has been kept well stirred for a few hours it is allowed to settle. The supernatent liquid, which is now "saturated" limewater, is drawn off and poured over the eggs, previously placed in a crock or water-tight barrel.

As exposure to the air tends to precipitate the lime (as carbonate), and thus to weaken the solution, the vessel containing the eggs should be kept covered. The air may be excluded by a covering of sweet oil, or by sacking upon which a paste of lime is spread. If after a time there is any noticeable precipitation of the lime, the lime-water should be drawn or siphoned off and replaced with a further quantity newly prepared.

Precautions to Take

It is essential that attention be paid to the following points:—

1. That perfectly fresh eggs only be used.

2. That the eggs should throughout the whole period of preservation be completely immersed.

Although not necessary to the preservation of the eggs in a sound condition a temperature of 40 degrees F. to 45 degrees F. will no doubt materially assist towards retaining good flavor or rather in arresting that "stale" flavor so often characteristic of packed eggs.

Respecting the addition of salt, it must be stated that our experiments conducted throughout fifteen seasons—do not show any benefit to be derived therefrom; indeed salt frequently imparts a limey flavor to the egg, probably by inducing an interchange of the fluids within and without the egg. Our advice is, do not add any salt to the limewater.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Meat Pies

Meat pies are made most satisfactorily by first cooking the meat and vegetables as for a stew. Put the meat in the baking pan with vegetables and gravy. Cover with dough and bake in a hot oven.

Meat Turnovers

Place any chopped cooked meat available on circles of biscuit dough about the size of a saucer. Fold the dough over the meat, crimp the edges, and bake in a hot oven. Vegetables may be combined with the meat filling as desired, and the whole may be served with gravy.

Beef Birds

Cut very thin meat into roughly rectangular pieces of a sufficient size for individual servings. Place on each a stuffing of bread crumbs, seasoned with chopped onions and other flavoring vegetables and herbs. Fold or roll up the meat and skewer in place with toothpicks. Brown the rolls in fat, remove and make gravy from the fat, flour and stock is available. Place the rolls in the gravy and cook slowly until tender in a covered baking dish, a steamer or a fireless cooker.

Chilled Rice

Have in readiness a cupful of cooked rice with every grain distinct, add half a cupful of any preferred fruit with half a cupful of powdered sugar. Mix well and fold in half a cupeful of double chilled cream that has been stiffly whipped.

Blackberry Jam

Prepare the fruit and allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit. Crush the fruit, put it over a moderate fire and let boil for twenty minutes; then add the sugar that has been heated in the oven and boil, skimming frequently until a little almost "jells" on the cold saucer. Store as for jelly.

Baked Rice Curry

Wash a cupful of rice till clean and let it soak fifteen minutes in water enough to cover it. Boil an onion in a quart of water, until the onion is very soft, then strain the water discarding the onion. Add a heaping teaspoonful of curry powder to the water, bring it to a boil, and pour it upon the rice and water in which it is soaked. Turn all into a casserole dish with a cover, and set it in a moderate oven until the rice has soaked up the liquid and is swollen and soft, but not broken. Pour a few spoonsful of melted butter over it before serving, loosening the rice gently with a fork to allow the butter to run through. Serve with roasted chicken, veal, or fish.

Economical Cakes

Beat up two eggs, then add one-quarter cup of milk, dessert spoonful of sugar, pinch of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of baking powder. Then add enough flour to make stiff dough. Roll out thin and cut with cutter. Have pan on fire ready with hot fat. Drop them in and cook just about a minute or so, till they are a golden brown.

Floor Mixture

Mix together boiled oil, vinegar and turpentine in equal parts and apply to hardwood or stained floors with a soft cloth. It prevents the dust from scattering and leaves the floor clean.

When washing greasy dishes, etc., use a few drops of ammonia in the water instead of soda.

FOOD QUERIES

Orange Juice for Baby.

Q.—How is it possible to overcome constipation in a baby that has been brought up and is still fed by bottle?
MOTHER.

Give the baby fruit juice three or four times a day. The freshly pressed, carefully strained juice of oranges is the ideal fruit juice for the infant.

A teaspoonful of such orange juice three times a day is the most important addition to the artificially fed baby's diet. Never give fruit juice immediately after or immediately before feeding. Never use juice from fruit containing bruises or from green or overripe fruit. See to it that it is scrupulously strained, so that none of the fruit pulp is swallowed. Even the child fed from its mother's breast is benefited by the fruit juice addition to its food. The acid of the fruit almost instantly decomposes in the child's stomach and is converted into alkaline salts of calcium and potassium which contribute to the growth of bones and teeth and the health of blood and tissues. Do not fear such "acid" for the child. At the age of one year the baby may well consume the juice of a whole sweet orange between feedings.

Light or Dark Honey.

Q.—Sometimes the honey I buy in tins is of a light color, at other times it is dark. Which is better. E.J.

The color has nothing to do with the quality of honey. A bee which feeds on white clover will impart to the comb honey of a light color. On the other hand, buckwheat and golden-rod fed bees give dark honey.

Sage honey is light, almost water white; alfalfa honey is the same color. Neither is purer than the brown buckwheat honey.

Follow Doctor's Orders.

Q.—I have a baby 10 months old and am very anxious about his diet. What do you think of feeding him now vegetable soup, broth, graham crackers and cereals—the doctor's orders?
MOTHER.

Children less than a year old should be fed only according to the instructions of a doctor. As for the rest, be sure that the grains or cereals are not refined, processed, polished or denatured and that any fruit given the baby is thoroughly ripe.

COOKING FOOD IN CLOTH BAGS

Cooking in Cloth Bags.

I have read many articles in the last few years about the use of paper bags for cooking. Has any one ever tried the cloth bags for the same purpose? I have used them successfully for several years, says Mrs. E. H. Poller in the Chicago News.

I prefer an open cloth to a bag, as they are more convenient to manage and much easier to clean. About a half yard square is the most convenient size for a moderate sized family. Where one is using any kind of heat for cooking other than the old cookstove the saving of heat is quite a consideration. Where the cook wishes to prepare two or more vegetables at one time they can be cooked all in one kettle or saucepan simply by placing them, after they are prepared, in separate cloths, which should be perfectly clean, and dipped in cold water first, and tying the corners crosswise, and placing them in the kettle, in the order of the time it requires to cook each vegetable. Put a tin of some kind in the bottom of the cooking dish that has been punched full of holes, to keep the cloths from the bottom of the kettle so they will not settle and burn.

On top of the kettle the pudding or custard can be steamed.

Only enough water is required so they will not dry out. The vegetables can be easily removed when cooked and turned into a dish for seasoning. The cloths will not be hard to wash if they are put at once into water. They should be kept perfectly clean, and used for this purpose only. Tied in cloths, in the way I have described vegetables will not flavor each other and the plan affords a great saving in the heat bill.

In Mono township, Dufferin County, Cartney Cone, aged 95 has been 80 years an Orangeman. He has not missed a 12th of July parade in that time.

It was 104 above at Camp Borden on Wednesday. All the milk for the camp hospital for the last four or five days, 75 gallons in all, has been sour when it arrived.

SAVE WATER USED IN COOKING VEGETABLES

Mineral Salts, Lost in Cooking, are Essential to Health—Steaming Without Adding Water

A municipal health bulletin says: "Vegetables like onions, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, turnips and carrots provide very little energy for the body as compared with bread, corn meal, rice, dried beans and potatoes, as may be seen from the following table. (Vegetables—food unit per pound not counting waste in preparation for the table):

Celery	85	Cabbage	145
Cucumbers	80	Bread	1315
Lettuce	90	Corn meal	1650
Onion	225	Rice	1630
Carrots	210	Dried beans	1620
Cauliflower	140	Potatoes	385

"The great value of fresh vegetables lies in the mineral salts which they contain. Among these are salts of iron, phosphorus and lime, a liberal supply of which is necessary to health although life may be sustained for months without them. These valuable substances are soluble in water and when vegetables are boiled in the ordinary way the water dissolves a great part of the material and the vegetable itself is left in a comparatively worthless condition. Vegetables should be cooked in such a way that all their soluble mineral constituents may be used for food.

To Make Soups Better

"If vegetables are boiled in a large quantity of water their water should be added to soup or boiled down and added to stews and similar dishes. Vegetables may be steamed in their own juices without the addition of water. The liquids that come out of them in the process of cooking should be served with them as sauce. Carrots, turnips, radishes, outside stalks of celery, cut into short lengths, may be cooked in a covered dish in the oven with meat of any kind.

For Use with Meats

"The cheaper cuts of meats lend themselves particularly well to this treatment. Beet tops, radish tops, turnip tops and carrot tops may be used as spinach. Even parts of green vegetables that are too dry or too tough to be eaten by themselves, may be cut into small pieces with the scissors and boiled in water, which is then drained and added to soup or stew. Not an inch of any sort of vegetable should be wasted." Acording to the department of health, a pound of soup vegetables bought for six cents, will add all the mineral matter necessary in the food of a family of four persons, using rice and corn meal in place of potatoes.

Drive Autos Faster

Driving over rough roads at the slowest possible speed is not always the best plan for the motorist. It often happens that a very slow rate will result in the setting up of much more severe vibration than a slightly higher speed, which would tend to interrupt the swing of the body on the springs.

It is usually not advisable to turn or cool the eggs after the 18th day of incubation.

Safety first is the protection of human life; the conservation of the human factors of production.

MORE U.S. SOLDIERS IN EUROPE

BRITISH CONTINUE RAIDS AND REPULSE ALL ATTACKS

More Successful Operations Carried on Last Night—Huns Keep up Artillery Fire on French Positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 28.—We raided the enemy's trenches last night south of Armentierres, said to-day's official report on the Franco-Belgian front operations. A hostile attack upon our positions of Costaverne was successfully repulsed. The enemy's artillery has shown considerable activity during the night in the neighborhood of Armentiers, north of Ypres, and in the Nieuport sector.

Huns Lose Heavily

Paris, July 28.—The night was marked by violent bombardment, followed by a series of new German attacks on the whole front before Brays En Laonnois, Epine De Chevregny and the Hurtebize Monument. All efforts of the enemy infantry to penetrate our lines were repulsed completely, and its losses were very heavy. There was active artillery fighting in Champagne, at Mont Haut and on both banks of the Meuse.

THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Peterborough will celebrate the third anniversary of the opening of the war by holding services in Victoria Park on Sunday evening, August 5th. All the clergy of the city will be invited to be present, and Acting-Mayor Duncan will arrange for the speakers. A band will be in attendance, and it is expected that the Great War Veterans will also attend in a body.

It is the intention of the committee to carry out the idea of the Dominion and Provincial Governments and pass resolutions expressing approval of the prosecution of the war until victory is a reality, and also expressing a confirmation of the justice of the cause for which we are fighting.

While the anniversary falls on Saturday it was felt that a much greater attendance of the citizens is assured in holding it on Sunday evening.

TWO PETERBORO BROTHERS MEET WITH DEATH IN ACTION

Stanley and Benjamin Rippingdale are Both Reported Killed.

Two more Peterborough boys have laid down their lives for the cause of the Empire, and it is a rather remarkable fact that it is two brothers and they met death just exactly one year from the date on which they sailed from Canada. It was a very sad blow to the parents when the messenger delivered the news that both Privates Stanley and Benjamin Rippingale had been killed in action on July 16th. Both young men enlisted and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion.

The father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Rippingale, 464 Parnell street, will have the heartfelt sympathy of the citizens generally in the sacrifice of their sons.

LOST LIFE IN ST. LAWRENCE

ONE TRAGIC DEATH ALMOST LED TO HUNDREDS OF OTHERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Kingston, July 28.—While returning from Ogdensburg on an excursion steamer, the Thousand Islander, last night six hundred passengers saw a man fall from a passing steamer, the St. Lawrence, a few miles above Alexandria Bay. C. H. Godfrey of Godfrey Station, near Kingston, dived from the upper deck of the Thousand Islander but the unfortunate man had been injured by the St. Lawrence paddle wheel and sank before Godfrey could reach him.

The Thousand Island passengers rushed to the side of the boat which careend badly and for a time there was much excitement.

Two Are Drowned In Lake Winnipeg

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Winnipeg, July 28.—Scoutmaster Aitken, returned soldier, aged twenty five, and Assistant Scoutmaster William Coates, nineteen, were drowned last night in Lake Winnipeg. Two Scouts with them swam to the shore. They were in charge of a party of Winnipeg Scouts camped on the east shore of Lake Winnipeg and their boat was swamped in a gale.

MRS. ROLLINS IS ENGAGED IN Y.W.C.A. WORK IN ENGLAND

British Paper Gives Report of an Address Delivered by Her in Church in Sussex on Woman's Duty in the Struggle.

Mrs. (Rev.) James Rollins, formerly of this city is now actively engaged in war work in England as official organizer for the Y.W.C.A. While residing in this city during the pastorate of her husband in St. Andrew's Church, Mrs. Rollins always took an active interest in social and church work. There was no more enthusiastic worker in patriotic organizations ever since the war broke out. When Capt. Rollins gave up his pulpit temporarily and went overseas as quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion Mrs. Rollins, with her daughter Jessie, followed him. Mrs. Rollins has been in her present position since her arrival. A letter from her to the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's was recently read at a meeting of the society. She is a graduate of Queen's University and is in every way well equipped for the important work she has undertaken.

The Sussex Daily News of July 10 publishes a report of an address delivered in the Union Congregational Church in that city by Mrs. Rollins. Mrs. Rollins said:

The Young Women's Christian Association has gathered new scope and impulse through the quickening power of the enormous weight of responsibility thrust upon it by the war. With the necessity of touching closely the lives of the young women war-workers of the Empire, in a practical and protective way, there was created a wonderful spiritual opportunity to form higher ideals and nobler standards. The almost insuperable difficulties that attend such great opportunities challenged supremely the faith and courage of the leaders in this work. But the Englishwoman—like the Englishman—refuses to acknowledge failure. Devoted women throughout the Kingdom met the challenge with such courage and ordered efficiency that at the present time one colony in a munition area is now housing and caring for 700 women munition workers. There are today upwards of 50 other munition centres in which the Association is also working; while nearly 80,000 meals a week are provided in canteens and hotels, and the paid staff of 120 are assisted by over 1,000 voluntary workers. Besides that, more than 1,000 women war workers are housed in hostels which either belong to, or are managed by, the Association.

A Plea For Interest and Support.

There are about 6,000 members of clubs in munition areas, which afford recreation and light refreshments in the evenings, especially for girls living away from their home. The speaker made a strong plea for interest in, and support of, the war-work which the Association, at the urgent request of the War Office, has undertaken for these heroic girls both at home and in France. England's greatness and protection lies in a measure in their young toiling hands. They are, in a measure, the guardians of the future of the race. Without the munitions, which they help to supply, our men at the front cannot hope to win the war. By reason of our neglect of these patriotic workers someone dear to us my go under at any critical moment through the failure of a cartridge or the premature explosion bomb, by the lapse of a girl who—had we done our part—would not have collapsed or failed. They tell of one girl who lost both lover and brother on one day at the front. The news reached her as she stood at her machine. She went on grimly making cartridges, with tears streaming down her cheeks; and all that week the whole shop worked at top speed to show their sympathy.

EXTENDING AID TO SICK WIVES OF SOLDIERS

Sir Herbert Ames Recommends That the Patriotic Fund Do So.

GET DOCTOR TO OPERATE

Special Cases Call for Unusual Methods of Dealing.

The following is of general interest to the public:

Some time ago a soldier wrote to Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., stating that his wife in Peterborough would have to be operated on and that as he could not afford the expense of an operation he asked the government if they could lend a hand to the soldier in such a case.

The Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund did not feel that they could undertake to assist people in this way, as it might mean a serious drain on the fund.

Mr. Burnham took the matter up with Sir Herbert Ames, president of the fund in Canada, and the following is a copy of his ruling which will govern all patriotic funds. It is as follows: "In respect to the case of Private —— who I understand is making an application for help in order that his wife may be admitted to a hospital to undergo an operation, we certainly feel that in a case of this sort the Patriotic Fund should by way of compassionate allowance help a deserving woman.

Probably you could arrange to have some surgeon perform the operation free and also have the hospital charges abrogated or reduced. Having done this the Patriotic Fund should make whatever additional advances that are necessary.

I can hardly reason that there would be many such cases where a woman would be willing to undergo a painful operation were it not a matter of vital importance to her future health.

It is customary to manage in this way in the other branches.

This was sent to the secretary of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund.

RUSS. RETREAT DEVELOPES INTO A PANICKY STAMPEDE

Germans Apparently Find no Opposition to Advance in Galicia—Hundred Villages Cleared of Russians.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 28.—The Tageblatt correspondent with the Austrian armies in Southern Galicia reports that railroad communication from Golomea to Cernowitz is now seriously menaced and threatens to cut off the Russian eighth army and the remnants of seventh which escaped across the river Dniester. The German advanec troops are said to be only a day's march from Loops on that river.

The evacuation of the Carpathian forest is already becoming a panicky flight. Since the fall of Larnpool, sixteen towns north and south of the Dniester and more than one hundred villages have been cleard of Russians.

RUSSIA ISOLATED.

Petrograd, July 28.—The Provisional Government has issued a decree closing the frontiers of Russia until August 15, both for persons desiring entry and those wishing to leave the country. The only exceptions will be persons holding diplomatic passports and diplomatic couriers.

Route Seems Complete.

New York, July 28.—The Associated Press issued the following statement:

The Russian retirement in eastern Galicia continues. There has been a noticeable slackening in the Austro-German advance north of the Dniester, where the Russians are now offering more spirited resistance, but south of the river to the Carpathians the Teutonic forces are moving forward almost unimpeded.

Around Tarnopol the Austro-Germans have met with stubborn resistance from the Russians, but Prince Leopold's soldiers were able to enlarge recent gains on the eastern bank of the Sereth. Between Trembowla and Skoromocze, south of Tarnopol, the Russians were forced to yield the crossings of the Sereth and Gniza Rivers on a front of about eight miles, according to Berlin. Southeast of Tarnopol, Petrograd reports, the Austro-German attacks were repulsed.

The Russians have retired to new positions southeast of Trembowla, but whether they also surrendered the crossings of the Sereth there Petrograd does not say. Between Czertkov and the Dniester Russian cavalry has repelled Teutonic assaults and driven the attackers northwestward toward Monasterzyska.

ROY RUTHERFORD WINNER OF THE BURNHAM WATCH

Award This Year in South Monaghan Captured by 12 Year Old Pupil in S.S. No. 3 ---Presentation Last Night.

Miss Marjorie Finney, teacher in S. S. No. 3, South Monaghan, sent five pupils to the recent examination, and scored the enviable record of passing every one of them. In addition to this, one of her pupils, Roy Rutherford, a promising little fellow of 12, as bright in appearance as his record shows, won the honor of taking the highest standing of all the candidates from that township. This entitles him to one of the gold watches Captain Burnham has offered for years to the pupil in each township who takes such a stand at the entrance examination.

The Presentation.

Te presenation exercises were held in the school house last night, and as usual on such occasions, which are regarded as functions by the friends and parents of those interested, there was a large attendance. The notice had been short, but the ladies of the district busied themselves in the interval, and the interior of the school was in holiday array, the walls and teacher's desks being tastefully decorated with flags. There was also a handsome display of flowers. Besides this, the ladies introduced a new feature into such events by serving lemonade and delectable refreshments at the close of the literary part of the program.

Capt. Burnham, accompanied by Messrs. J. T. C. Laing and John Riddell, motored out to the school house, and after Reeve George Geer had been called to the chair, Mr. Burnham presented the watches to the grateful young pupil with a few well-chosen words of advice.

The speech of the evening was made by Capt. Burnham, who addressing himself particularly to the young people, counselled them to practice self-control as an essential to success and to apply themselves to the study of intricate problems. It was not necessary to go to college to acquire an education. Use should be made of the public libraries and other advantages. Capt. Burnham deplored the tendency of young people to read novels rather than the more substantial works. By way of illustration, he cited the fact that in the past year only fourteen scientific works had been taken from the Public Library in this city and that happened to be the exact number of the books of the kind drawn by Capt. Burnham himself.

Keep a Good Teacher.

Speaking to the men who are old enough to be trustees and to the women who, when they vote, will hold such offices themselves, Capt. Burnham advised them, when they got a good teacher, to hold her and pay her what she asked. His recipe for the enjoyment of life was to learn duty and then faithfully perform it.

In conclusion, Capt. Burnham spoke of the war and the new duties that will call for a higher type of citizenship when the conflict is over.

Other Speakers.

Brief addresses were then made by Mr. John Riddell, who was born in the neighborhood, Mr. J. T. C. Laing, who claims the same district as his birthplace, Rev. J. A. MacConnachie, pastor of the Centreville Presbyterian church, to which Roy Rutherford belongs, William Rutherford, a trustee of the school and father of the successful young pupil; Charles Wicks and Mr. E. Dawson. Brief addresses were also made by Miss Iva Dawson, and Miss Finney, the teacher, who graciously placed all the honor for his success to the credit of the young pupil.

Mr. W. A. Woods loaned his gramophone for the occasion, and a number of patriotic airs were enjoyed by the audience.

Notes.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., was expected, but a business engagement prevented his attendance at the last moment, and he sent his regrets by Capt. Burnham.

ACKERMAN COMPANY WILL START SHOE FACTORY HERE

Provided City Gives Them Fixed Assessment at Present Rate for Ten Years---Bylaw Will be Voted on September 6.

Peterborough will have another new industry if a bylaw which will be submitted to the people on September 6th is approved of and the general opinion is that it will be.

At a meeting of the Manufacturers Committee last night The B. F. Ackerman Co. made a proposition to the city whereby they will start the manufacture of boots and shoes in the city, employing 30 hands inside of six months and possibly 60 within a year. In return they ask the city to fix their assessment at what it now stands for the next ten years.

The members of the committee were unanimous in recommending to the Council that the offer be accepted and that a bylaw be prepared submitting the proposition to the ratepayers on September 6th.

Mr. W. C. Ackerman, and Mr. Borbidge appeared before the committee and stated that they had decided to go into the manufacture of shoes owing to the great falling off in the saddelry business due to increase in the use of autos. He drew the attention of the Aldermen to the fact that the firm were employing three times as many men as was agreed when they first started here and he was quite sure that the new industry would be a good thing for the city and would get larger every year.

The present factory will be large enough for the instalation of machinery which will give employment for 30 hands capable of turning out 300 pairs of shoes a day but which can be speeded up to 800 pairs a day. When the demands of the factory require additional buildings the firm have the 50 ft. lot to the north and will immediately build on it as the present factory will not accommodate more than the 30 shoe machines referred to.

There is no doubt in the minds of all who have been consulted that the citizens will be as unanimously in favor of fixing the assessment as the aldermen were last night.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1917

FOR UNITY OF PURPOSE.

I WISH THAT, [illegible] two right hon. gentlemen who lead the respective parties in this House would consider a moderate proposition. I have stated, taking my illustration from what was said by my right hon. friend who preceded me (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), that an election on the grounds I have mentioned would be a misfortune for the country; I have said that it should not be fought upon the faults of the Government; I have said that it cannot be fought upon a difference of issue as to policy, because both sides pretend to have the same policy. It would be a splendid thing for this country, if, even now, moderate counsels should prevail, and a course of procedure that would redound to the lasting honor of Canada.—Michael Clark (Liberal) in Parliament.

A CHANCE FOR A SHOE FACTORY

PETERBOROUGH has an excellent opportunity to acquire a new industry which will not only employ a number of hands, but will be an additional advertisement to the city as an industrial centre. B. F. Ackerman, Sons & Co., one of the most progressive and substantial business firms in Peterborough, a corporation of high standing in the manufacturing world, and whose goods are sent to all quarters of civilization, propose to add the making of shoes to their present line. All they ask for from the city as an inducement to undertake this venture is a fixed assessment for ten years, or, in other words, that their present rate of assessment be continued for that period. The City Council does not hesitate to accept the offer, and a bylaw will be submitted to the ratepayers on September 6th.

B. F. Ackerman, Sons & Co., are not a new firm coming to the city [illegible]. They have been tested, and their dealings with the civic authorities have been entirely satisfactory. They have, in short, done more than they ever agreed to do when they received inducements to locate here. The plant now operated by them is many times larger than the one they obligated themselves to put up, the number of employes is larger, the factory has been free of labor disputes, and has been operated continuously since it first started, with the exception of the brief periods required yearly for the taking of stock.

The company recognise the fact that their present business is likely to fall off, especially after the war, owing to the increasing general use of the automobile, which year by year is steadily supplementing the horse, both in business and pleasure lines. Peterborough is without a shoe factory, and now the city has an opportunity to secure one and to perpetuate a substantial industry. The firm agree to employ at least thirty hands at the start and to turn out three hundred pairs of shoes a day. They can do this without erecting additional buildings. As the new business grows, when it reached the point where sixty hands are necessary, additions will be made to the present plant, and for these additions the company already own the land.

All they ask for is that when their factory is enlarged their assessment be not raised inside ten years from the date of the adoption of the bylaw.

The firm can be depended upon to do just as they say or even more than they agree to. The city takes no chances in this matter, and there should be no doubt in the minds of the electors when it comes to voting on the bylaw September 6th.

AS GUESTS OF THE CITY.

THE RETURNED SOLDIERS and their families are to be entertained as the guests of the city for one day. Acting Mayor Duncan has been authorized by the City Council to charter one of the local steamers and turn it over for a day's outing to the veterans, who can do with it what they will. It will be their [illegible] the date lasts, and no better form of [illegible] could be devised for their benefit during the summer months. And yet, graceful and considerate as the action of the aldermen may be, it is after all a small recognition of services faithfully and unselfishly rendered. But the aldermen have done all that lies in their power when they extend courtesies to the returned heroes of the war.

The material recognition of and rewards for the sacrifices of the returned men must come from a higher authority. We believe that the members of the Veterans' Association in this city are vastly more concerned over the welfare of the comrades they have left behind them in the trenches than they are for their own interests. It is hardly necessary to say that every veteran is a conscriptionist. He believes that Canada should back up the fighting forces in Flanders with the last man, as this country has pledged itself to do. When that pledge is fulfilled the men who have done their bit will be generously dealt with. The country that at the outset paid them the highest compensation ever allowed soldiers and that cared for their dependents will not forget them when their work is done.

SOLDIERS' PAY AND PENSIONS.

IF THE FINANCIAL POST is the mouthpiece of the interests, as has been charged, then it is evident that the moneyed men of the country recognize the fact that the soldiers who are making so many sacrifices on behalf of the country are entitled to better pay while they are on active duty and to a higher scale of pensions when their work is done and, by reason of injuries received while at the front, they are unable to resume their old places in industrial life.

The Post says that when Frank Darling began his successful campaign for a more generous pension scheme than the one the Government had decided upon, he received his greatest encouragement from the financiers and business men of the country—the men who would personally bear the greatest burden of pension taxation.

And today, when the question of still better treatment of our men who have faced danger on sea and land is being considered, we have no hesitation in saying that these interests will give it cordial support. The feeling is growing that our fighting units have been unjustly treated, in comparison with those who remained to perform the very necessary work of producing food and supplies. The time has come when pay and rewards should be equalized—when the men who take the greatest risks should receive the greatest pay. In considering the question we must bear in mind that, while some, in the early days, enlisted with an interesting holiday trip in view, the great majority who have gone overseas joined as a matter of duty. An inquiry at any place of business will reveal that the men who enlisted were among their best employees, their most useful, most promising young men. To offer them a less reward than we are paying the munition, railway and other workers, is a gross injustice.

DODGING A WAR TAX.

THE LIQUOR DEALERS of Montreal and other cities in Quebec are still flooding Ontario with circulars advertising their goods, sending their circulars to all classes of citizens on [illegible] customer, even though a large percentage of those "worked" may be practical temperance advocates. But in this campaign the dealers have an eye to economy, and in the pursuit of their business are dodging the war tax that is represented by the additional cent required to pay the postage on a letter mailed in this country. The other day a deluge of these advertisements were received in Peterborough, and investigation showed that they had been posted in Baltimore, U. S. A., in which country penny postage still prevails. Considering the number of these letters sent out, the loss in revenue to Canada must be considerable from this item alone.

When the new postal law takes effect in the United States, no dealer in Baltimore or elsewhere can send his advertising matter into any state that has adopted prohibition. It is certainly unfair, to put it mildly, if the business is to be still carried on with Canada, even if it did not involve a transparent attempt to dodge a war tax.

AN ELECTION CERTAIN.

THERE SEEMS TO BE a popular impression to the effect that if a union government is formed at Ottawa the country will be spared the turmoil of an election. Of one thing the people of Canada may be assured—an election is certain, and that the appeal will be made to the people probably no later than September.

Sir Robert Borden has made that point clear. There can be no extension of Parliament, no suspension of the B. N. A. Act, except upon the unanimous request of the Canadian House. One Liberal voted for an extension, so that matter is finally and effectually disposed of.

The people may just as well accept the inevitable, something that has been forced upon them by the Opposition, and prepare for a campaign. The issues are as clear as day. The country is divided now on lines that were never before known to exist. There must be an election even if there is a union or national government formed at Ottawa. The formation of such an alliance would not win over the Opposition to the extent of gaining unanimous consent to another extension.

STILL IN THE WOODS.

THE LIBERAL EDITORS of the Province have not yet escaped from the woods, even after their confab in Toronto the other day. Lacking a leader, their Moses having left them in the lurch to wander after new gods, they are still hopelessly lost.

It must be said that the editors are muddled as they have never been before. They lack the courage to criticize even their old leader, who first chased them up a tree and then left them to their own devices. They ask the people of the Province to believe that they are in favor of conscription. They can never hope to succeed in this attempt until they clearly and unmistakenly repudiate Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has committed himself irretrievably to the contrary. The public will place no faith in a band of men, be they editors or active politicians, who in such a time as this will attempt to play a double game. No party can be regarded as in favor of the Military Service Act so long as it is even remotely associated with the arch anti-conscriptionist of them all, and so long as it depends for the bulk of its support upon the Province that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has chosen for his kingdom.

To fail to repudiate Sir Wilfrid was sufficiently bad, but it was infinitely worse to take the course which the Liberal editors did and abuse Sir Robert Borden. Criticism comes with ill grace from such a source. It will fail of its object. There are too many people in Canada who share in the opinion of the most liberal Liberal of them all, Dr. Michael Clark, who said in Parliament that Canada could not find another man worthy to stand in the Premier's shoes. We still think, however, that if Sir Robert Borden believed that his retirement would clear the atmosphere, remove one element of discord and make for the winning of the war, he would gladly step aside.

The editors who committed themselves at Toronto have lost all claim to be called Liberals. They are not even Laurierites. Simply trimmers looking for a way out of the wilderness.

Bankers Will Join the Board of Trade

PROSPECTS BRIGHTER FOR STRONGER ORGANIZATION THAN EVER.

The Peterboro Clearing House Association, which comprises all the banks doing business in the city, have [illegible] the financial section of the Peterboro Board of Trade.

The new officers of the board are making appeals to all the different organizations to join in as a section of the board, and are having great encouragement in their efforts. If all the merchants and others interested will fall in line, Peterboro Board of Trade will become an organisation that will be of increased benefit to the city.

ENORMOUS WASTE OF COAL

War, the well-known twentieth century educator, perhaps will teach us how to eliminate the smoke nuisance. It promises, at any rate, to effect this marvel, and the threat of a coal shortage should prove a sharp goad in the flanks of wasteful fuel users.

The United States bureau of mines asserts that "fully $500,000,000 or one-fourth the issue of Liberty loan bonds was wasted last year in that country through the inefficient use of coal." This declaration is approved by the federal department of the interior.

Director Manning of the bureau of mines estimates that many small power stations which generate electricity [illegible] as much energy out of the coal consumed by them as efficient power plants obtain from a similar amount of fuel. Steam plants, he thinks, make so poor a showing that the average energy developed is only five or six per cent. of the potential energy in the coal burned by them.

Here is presented an inviting and profitable field for investigation and experiment. Owners of power plants ought to secure from the federal bureau of mines its various reports on fuel saving methods. Then they should set themselves seriously to work, to increase the efficiency of their furnaces and boilers. Why waste coal in a time of alarming fuel scarcity and exorbitant fuel prices? Neglect of this form of practical economy under existing circumstances is as reprehensible as it is stupid.

CITY WILL TAKE UP SEWER WORK

ENGINEER TO HAVE FULL AUTHORITY IN BOSSING THE JOB.

The Board of Works met last evening and decided to proceed with the construction of the sewers in the South Ward and the City Engineer will have absolute control of the whole work.

City Solicitor Gordon advised the aldermen that they could not alter the frontage assessment on work already started but that the bylaw could be amended at any time and would apply to all new work.

Following this report City Engineer Parsons stated that his estimate for the work figured out about $3.48 per foot and he thought that he could carry it out on that basis.

Ald. McIntyre questioned as to how the Engineer could do the work for $3.48 when the cost of the first 100 feet had been so great.

This was explained as including the cost of hauling the material to the work as well as overcoming all the difficulties of starting. The Engineer was never in absolute charge as the foreman was chosen by the council.

Ald. Stratton then asked if the City Engineer would be responsible if the work was started under his estimate.

City Engineer Parsons did not consider that he was responsible until he had absolute control over the foreman.

Acting Mayor Duncan was in favor of giving the work over to the City Engineer and then there would be no doubt as to the responsibility.

Ald. Smith stated that the appointment of the foremen and the responsibility had always been a bone of contention and he would remove it and give the appointment over to the City Engineer. The chairman should not be required to lose his time settling disputes between the engineer and foreman. He moved that the work on the sewers proceed and that the work be under the absolute control of the City Engineer so far as the hiring of the help was concerned.

Ald. Dobbin seconded the motion which carried.

Contractor J. E. Hayes will have his check returned to him.

GOLD WATCH FOR PTE. DAVIDSON

ASPHODEL PAT. SOCIETY WELCOMES RETURNED SOLDIER.

The town hall, Westwood, was packed to the doors Friday evening when the residents of the Township of Asphodel and vicinity gathered under the auspices of the Asphodel Patriotic Society to welcome home Private Davidson of Asphodel, who has been invalided home, being severely wounded at the Battle of Vimy Ridge. A magnificent gold watch suitably engraved was presented to Private Davidson by the Patriotic Society, and an address read by Mrs. Birdsall, was also presented expressing the thanks of the community for his splendid services. Pte. Davidson with great modesty accepted the gifts and address, and on resuming his seat was greeted with an outburst of cheering.

A splendid programme of music made the evening a most delightful one. Mr. Knox, the chairman, introduced in quick succession a number of speakers, who delivered patriotic addresses suitable to the occasion. They were: J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., James Thompson, M.P.P., Warden Maxwell Brown, Reeve Fowlds of Hastings, and Lt.-Col. Miller and F. D. Kerr from Peterborough, and the Rev. Mr. McConnachie and the Rev. Mr. Davis.

The Asphodel Society has been most active in all patriotic work, and nothing could be more helpful than the splendid home coming receptions that have been tendered to the returning soldiers at Westwood by the Society.

The society splendidly entertained Pte. Davidson, his mother and the other members of his family and the outside visitors at the conclusion of the evening at the residence of Mr. Matthew Breckenridge.

Mr. H. G. Walker of Peterborough very kindly placed his automobile at the disposal of the Patriotic Committee, and motored the Peterborough visitors to Westwood.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE BATHING QUESTION

Editor Review: The river is again taking its usual yearly death toll, and nothing is done to stop it.

Acting-Mayor Duncan complains because Mr. Ketcheson says that the city officials were doing nothing in the latest mentioned death. In reality they were seeking the bodies; that is certainly a grim joke. We don't want them to seek our dead bodies, but to give us proper safe guards and swimming facilities so that there will be no dead bodies to seek. Shortly after the fatality above mentioned, there would have been another, involving two young ladies if it had not been for the resourcefulness of a young man whose bravery I sincerely hope will be recognized in a tangible way.

I understand that 500 bathers were counted in one evening at Inverlea Park, and no doubt there were just as many at Lake Street, and the Vermont Marble Co., if somebody undertook to count them some evening.

The Otonabee River ought to be the pride of the citizens of Peterboro, but, instead of that it is a source of fear to the greater part—I mean the parents. Had we now what we ought to have had many years ago, that is, supervised swimming beaches, this fear would cease, and an absolutely necessary recreation would be provided for the citizens. If the city council cannot see their way clear to help us, there are other ways, for example, Senator Corby gave the City of Belleville $5,000 to spend on bathing facilities a short while ago. We have also big and rich men in Peterboro. The word is sufficient.

Yours truly,
J. W. WORTH.

The Story of the Stairs

Every time you go up stairs you can test your state of health—the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anaemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the stair-case becomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watery and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay and so build up your health anew. To get this new, rich blood give Dr. Williams Pink Pils a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and throw off disease. For more than a generation this favorite medicine has been in use throughout the world and made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHY NOT USE THE CAGE?

In an address before the Boston convention of the women's homestead association Mrs. Charlotte Smith recently demanded a law compelling every employer of a young woman stenographer to provide a wire cage for her. The idea is, apparently, that the protective bars of the cage would make the fair young stenographer immune from the attentions of the males of the human species who by bon-bons and soft words so beguile her that too often she ceases to stenog and takes to cabarets, says the Chicago News.

If, however, it is the male of the species that offends, why not put him in a cage? That is what the plain American wants to know. It is opposed to the American theory of government to let the offender go free and lock up the offended. Not only the stenographer, but all the employes of a boss who bites would be glad to see him caged, or at least chained by one leg.

Possibly, however, the ulterior design of the cage is to keep the stenographer from escaping. Good stenographers are rare, and an employer who captures one may feel justified in preventing her flight. Regarded in this light the cage notion becomes appealing. One might cage one's cook. House husbands of nocturnal prowling habit might be caged every night except lodge night. Club ladies might be caged on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Grand vistas open up. Why should we not cage our public officials? A caged mayor or congressman would not be nearly so likely to misrepresent his constituents as one at large. Altogether it is a suggestion of pleasing possibilities that Mrs. Charlotte Smith has made.

With a large stock car in flames, in which were imprisoned seventeen head of cattle, a G. T. R. freight train pulled into the Ingersoll yards. All the cattle perished.

Currant Jelly

The best zest with all red meats

A pretty and economical cake filling

A beautiful garnish for fancy desserts

MAKE plenty of currant jelly. All men like this piquant sweet. Children never get enough of it. You can use it in many ways by itself or in other dishes. Good home-made jelly is not only an enjoyable relish but a nourishing and valuable food.

A Reliable Recipe for Currant Jelly

Gather the currants as soon as they are red. Do not let them over-ripen. Wash and mash them lightly in the kettle. Heat slowly until the skins look blanched and transparent. Turn the hot fruit into a flannel jelly bag wrung out of warm water and let the juice drip through slowly. It will take several hours. Measure the juice into a clean kettle and boil hard for ten minutes. Do not boil more than six or eight cupfuls at a time. Meantime heat in the oven a cup of LANTIC PURE CANE SUGAR for each cup of juice and add this at the end of the ten minutes. Under the most favorable conditions the jelly will begin to coat the spoon by the time the sugar is all dissolved. Sometimes it will need to be boiled for a few minutes more. You can tell when the jelly is done by trying a spoonful on a cold dry plate.

For all Jellies Use Lantic Pure Cane Sugar

It is pure and reliable and dissolves quicker. At preserving time you will find the larger packages specially convenient.

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

On Monday she went to Dwyer & Tyrrell, to be received with the respect due to a client with thousands of broad acres beneath her sway. As an obsequious clerk heralded her into Dwyer's private room, she compared her reception with that which she had encountered only a few days before when she had called for Webster's address, and the alterations gave her warm delight. She entered with her little chin up, doing her best to seem oblivious of the fact that she still wore her array of springtime, and her haughty demeanor made Pat Dwyer chuckle inwardly. Laurence's bare admission that he knew her name, coupled with his instructions before departure, had excited his curiosity. Remembering Constance Armitage's visit and anxious demand for his address, he had believed her to be the source of his knowledge of Mortimer & Reingold's offer, and of the name of the holder of the shares; but at sight of Marion's delicate, cameo-like face and slender figure, he began to understand more clearly how things stood. "Quixotic ass," he said to himself, and turned his attention to this new client.

"Miss Stewart?" he interrogated, consulting the card she had sent in.

She bowed.

"You have called about our offer for your holding in the Iceland Development Company?"

"Not altogether. I've received a higher offer from a firm of stockbrokers—Messrs. Mortimer & Reingold—and I have come to you for advice respecting it. Can you tell me anything about the firm? Your own offer, being outbidden, I presume falls to the ground. A—an acquaintance of mine, a Mr. Averil, told me to come to you."

"Yes?" All Pat's professional manner was needed to conceal his surprise. Laurence had sent here there himself! "Laurence Averil, eh? A good—well, he is a good chap at bottom. That's true. I've known him years. We were at Oxford together. Do you know him well?"

"He is an acquaintance," she repeated coldly. "As I never knew he had been at college at all, you can see I know very little of him. May I ask your advice respecting these shares?"

"Oh, you won't sell at present, of course. I think I am at liberty to tell you that—er—some valuable minerals have been discovered on the ground. The fact has leaked out, somehow, and consequently there is every probability of the price of your shares rising higher, so that your proper course is to keep them in your own hands at present."

"Leaked out. How—who made the discovery?" But she had no need to ask. She knew.

"That I am not at liberty to say."

"And has Mr. Averil instructed you to withdraw his first offer for the shares?" she hazarded.

Pat looked at her keenly. Laurence, after telling him his name was not to transpire, had bolted without explanations and left him groping in the dark.

"What offer?" he said innocently.

"This." She tapped Dwyer's own letter with an accusing finger. "I—I saw Mr. Averil on Saturday and—and I understood the offer came from him."

"Oh, if he told you so——" said Pat, trapped.

She jesuitically congratulated herself on keeping within the limits of strict truth. "Did he instruct you to withdraw?"

"Yes. It wasn't important that he should do so, of course. The other offer settled that. I rather fancy he thought it would clear the way for us—our advising you, you know."

"He's returned to Leith, I believe?"

Pat nodded.

"Thank you. That's all now, I think." She rose to go. "I am to keep the shares until you instruct me to sell. Is that right?"

"Quite right." He rose and opened the door for her. "Good-morning."

She went down the stairs in a greater rage with Laurence than ever. So he had found this stuff—whatever it was—and had come to London with the deliberate intention of cheating her out of her shares. No wonder he had been so upset when she told him his offer was insufficient—the cheat! And when his wicked plans had been frustrated, he had run away. He was a coward, too, after all. With a woman's reasoning, she pushed aside the few facts that interfered with her theory. True, he had reeled and shown all the signs of agitation before she had shown him the second letter, but her first words had informed him the offer was five hundred pounds, and that must have told him his own efforts were fruitless. The mean, cowardly cheat! How she hated him!—Yes, she really did hate him now. On reflection, only one doubt came to assail her. If he had told her to wait a few days, he could have made a larger offer than five hundred pounds for the shares, and acting on his advice, she would probably have accepted it. Why hadn't he done that? she wondered. She must beware. Perhaps he intended doing it even now. Could it be that Dwyer was in collusion with him? She shook her head sagely, suspecting all men, and reserved to herself the right to accept or decline Dwyer's advice when it was forthcoming.

Tuesday morning brought another letter from yet another stockbroker. It was incited by Clement Harper's London agent, if she had but known it. Clement had decided that no harm could come and much good might possibly accrue from a judicious agitation respecting the Iceland shares, and the barely worded inquiry as to the terms on which she would part with ordinary stock was the direct result of his action. She went straight to the office from which the inquiry was dated, and was able to discover that it came from Leith. As a natural result, she attributed it to the evil machinations of the unspeakable Laurence—who at that moment was grilling on a firebox, like a later incarnation of his own patron saint, in her service—and her refusal to state terms was as shortly worded as politeness would allow. She told Dwyer of the letter, however, and Pat saw that the inquiry was discreetly advertised in the proper channels. When it came to Reingold's ears he fell into a profuse state of perspiration.

"There'th nothing in that tale of your'th, Harry," he told Mortimer. "There'th more of 'em after thothe cuthed thareth of Averil'th. Where'th that girl'th letter?" He glanced over it and wrote again to Marion, asking her to state her own price for ordinary shares.

She took the letter to Dwyer.

"I hardly know what to advise you," he said, perplexed. "Definite offers below par of course you should refuse, but this is different. Will you allow me to answer it?"

"What shall you say?" she asked.

"I'll ask double the price of the shares," he told her. "They'll refuse that, but it'll show them we're not ignorant of their value. Will that do?"

"I am in your hands," she said, and Pat wrote accordingly.

Reingold tore his hair when the letter arrived. "Look at it!" he cried to his partner. "There'th that blathted Dwyer at it again now. Harry, my boy, we're out of thith. We've been done by that pup. To think we wath directorth of the company a fortnight ago!"

Mortimer looked at the letter stolidly.

"We'll buy," he said, mindful of Constance's advice. "We'll buy the ruddy lot. Sixteen hundred quid! and we could have got 'em for the asking. It's heart-breaking—but six per cent. on ten thou. debentures is only six hundred quid a year, and if the tale I've heard is right there should be a thundering sight more than that in it. We'll become good little industrial investors with money to spend for once, Heiny. Anyhow, we shall have the control of the biz if we've all the ordinaries." And Dwyer's surprise and disgust when the acceptance reached him next morning nearly deprived him of speech.

"I'm sorry, Miss Stewart," he told Marion, who, summoned by wire, sat in the office, radiant. "I never imagined they would look at it—and yet here's their cheque. What on earth Laurence will say—" He stopped short.

"What's Mr. Averil got to do with it?" Marion demanded sharply.

"He—he—well, he told me I should advise you to hold on. Perhaps these shares would have gone higher, you know."

"Perhaps he would have had time to make an offer through another agent?" Marion suggested scornfully.

"Laurence! What do you mean?" Dwyer was wide-eyed with surprise and indignation. "Do you imagine Laurence would—would try and get them behind your back in that way? Besides, he can't—he hasn't the money."

"I thought he was rich?"

"He isn't, then. He's a poor man. If you remember, that offer of two hundred was to be paid in two instalments. He only had a hundred pounds to his name."

"And I've made sixteen hundred—one thousand six hundred pounds—off less than a tenth of what he offered me two hundred for. Do you call that honorable?"

"He—he didn't know you were the holder of the shares."

"What has that got to do with it?"

"I don't know—perhaps it hasn't anything. But you must remember nobody thought the shares of any value then."

"Nobody except himself, and he knew. And now I can get twice their face value for them."

"For ordinaries—yes. But they're only a gamble, you see. Under no circumstances can you expect to get much more than face value for your debentures. You must remember that. If all goes well, you might—might, I say, mind you—you might get a hundred and five or a hundred and ten for each debenture. Not more."

"Why can't I get as much for them as the other shares?" she asked; and Pat, in a long explanation as to the respective qualities of debentures and ordinary stock, was able to lead the conversation away from Laurence and his criminal tendencies.

For the next week Marion enjoyed herself hugely. For the first time in her life she had money to spend without having to count every penny, and she displayed a taste in clothing and amusements that made her landlady and [illegible] real friend, Mrs. [illegible]

[illegible] dragged that long-suffering body from the theatre to the milliner's, and from concert hall to show room, at a rate that barely allowed her time to throw up her hands and say, "Well! well!" in a faint crescendo, at each new departure. She spent nearly a hundred pounds of her new capital in ten days, and, in satisfying her womanly yearning for pleasures and pretty things, was able to congratulate herself on having had her money's worth. Then came a letter from Dwyer, and she attended the office again, fashionably dressed, bright with anticipation, and altogether a very different being from the meek little workwoman that had first come there seeking an address.

She sank into a chair with a luxurious rustle. "And what is it now, Mr. Dwyer?" she asked merrily. "More fortunes for me?"

"'Fraid not." Dwyer looked serious. "Fact is, I think you won't make much more out of the shares

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG
589 Casgrain St., Montreal.
April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A DAILY NOVELETTE.

Or the Director Who Was on a Search for Information.

The brand new directors of the brand new Over-Night mining company, grouped about the new directors' table of walnut, leaned back in their comfortable chairs of leather and looked about the newly appointed office as they exhaled great clouds of expensive tobacco smoke.

Under their feet the flooring was covered with three rare rugs. Through a glass partition they could see three beautiful stenographers manicuring their nails at three priceless desks.

One of the directors, a little man with a worried nose, spoke:

"Gentlemen—that is, fellow directors—I hope I will be pardoned, having paid $10,000 and been made a director of this company, from which I have already received half a million in dividends, if I make so bold as to ask a question. Or, to be exact, two questions. First, I should be very grateful to be informed of the location of the mines upon which this $1,000,000,000 company has been formed. And, second, it would give me great relief to have a slight inkling as to the nature of the metals mined in those mines."

There was a startled silence, broken only by the gentle sound of tobacco smoke coming in contact with the ceiling. Then another director spoke.

"Fellow directors, I think the gentleman's inquisitiveness is simply monstrous. I move we give him back his money and kick him out."

The motion was carried with only one dissenting vote—that of the director who asked the questions—and again there reigned an air of opulent peace.

Keep Children Well During Hot Weather

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious litle life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MAYBE BUYING MATCHES

Never Struck You As Being An Important Job. But It Is!

It is important that you buy none but EDDY'S

Chemically Self-Extinguishing "SILENT 500"

The matches with "no after glow."

EDDY is the only Canadian maker of these matches, every stick of which has been dipped in a chemical solution which positively ensures the match becoming dead wood once it has been lighted and blown out. Look for the words "Chemically self-extinguishing" on the box.

Who Made That Mistake?

No charge was made for some goods sold on credit. Money was paid out twice for the same thing. And a number of other mistakes were made. These are daily occurences in many stores. They eat up profits. And unless some change is made will ultimately put the merchants on the road to bankruptcy.

If these conditions exist in your store they should be corrected at once. They can if you adopt the National Cash Register system. The National Cash Register makes an automatic record of cash, credit and C.O.D. sales. It shows how much money has been paid out. It tells the sales each clerk makes and how much money there should be in each clerk's cash-drawer. It enables you to locate mistakes.

Such a system as this will prove itself invaluable to the prosperity of your store. Investigate this profit-increasing, mistake-eliminating system at once. We will be glad to explain the National Cash Register system in detail.

Help to Save Canada's Fruit Crop

A Practical Thrift Suggestion

This year, as never before, every quart of Canada's fruit crop should be used to the very best advantage. Though it all ripens within four months, it can be made to supply every table, every day in the year, at moderate cost.

Canning and preserving, done at home at the time when each fruit is cheapest, provide in delicious and economical form the daily fruit so necessary in a wholesome diet. Fruit put up at home is much cheaper than that which you buy, and the slight increase in its cost, due to the higher price of sugar, is small compared with the mounting cost of other foods.

Successful preserving and canning are by no means difficult, either, if you are careful to boil everything, and use

Redpath SUGAR

In Canadian homes, for the last Sixty Years, REDPATH Sugar has been the standby for preserving. It is always absolutely pure, and can be depended upon to do everything that sugar can do to ensure success.

Buy it, according to the quantity you need, in 2 or 5 lb. Cartons, or in 10, 20, 50 or 100 lb. Bags.

WHAT THE Y.M.C.A. IS DOING FOR THE SOLDIER BOYS

Secretary Meserve Receives an Interesting Letter From Private Arthur J. Lewis Who is Now in England.

Secretary Merserve of the Y.M.C.A. has received the following letter from England writter by Pte. Arthur J. Lewis and which is especially interesting as showing the work which the organization is doing in the war:

Witley Camp, July 2, 1917.

Dear Mr. Meserve:—

Well I guess you no doubt have the idea that I have forgotten about you, but such is not the case, but just because its hard for me to get started. I wrote to Mr. Galley sometime ago but I guess the letter has gone astray as I haven't received any answer.

I suppose the most interesting things I could write about to you would be the doings of the "Y" over here. Well they are certainly doing a great work over here as I'm sure we could hardly get along without them.

After we landed we were in quarantine ten days and then I had a five day trip—to "Blighty." London. I didn't know much about the city so I thought the "Y" would be a good place to stop at. They have "huts" all over London. Some are just temporary frame buildings, while others are buildings taken over by the "Y" for the duration of the war.

The place I stayed in was formerly a theatre, but was rather small compared to some of the other theatres I saw, but was a fine place for "Y" work. I got bed and breakfast for 1s. 6d. (about 36 cents). The bed was fine, a cot, and it had regular white sheets and breakfast consisted of porridge, two eggs and meat, bread butter and coffee. The other meals were run a la carte. I spent the first night in London there after attending a show of course. I sure hated to get up next morning, but we wanted to see some of the town.

We didn't know where to start first so the "leader" in charge of the hut advised us to go with the "Y" guide. All we had to pay was our tram fare. As far as I know these guides are volunteers who "do their bit" by showing the "Tommies" the sights. In this case our guide was an elderly gentleman, so we started out.

That day we visited the Law Courts, Tower of London, Dicken's "Old Curiosity Shop" and some more places too numerous to mention. Before our leave was up we had seen most of the places of international importance and we certainly weren't anxious to return to Witley. However our time soon passed so I have been here ever since.

The "Y" hut, I think I may safely say, is the most popular place in camp. I heard a soldier returned from France remark that "the 'Y' was the link between mother and the trenches." From my own experience here it appears so to this camp anyway.

There are four huts in camp and all are busy every time I come around. The huts are built the same, of frame, and are 200 ft. by 75 ft., I should judge. At one end is a stage, while the other end is the canteen. Between the two, seats are placed or tables for writing, as some nights they have letter writing when the boys get caught up in their back mail.

The entertainments are mostly very good and some of the best concerts and speakers I have ever heard are seen on the "Y" platform.

Most of the performances are by London parties and they are all real good. It's great after working and drilling all day to go to the "Y" and hear the best that's going on in the concert line. This is where we hear all the latest songs right from London as some of the entertainers are regular professionals.

One of the bet addresses I have ever heard was by Dr. Rice of Detroit and he certainly was great.

On fine evenings these concerts are held in the open air and I wish I just could have you here to witness one. At the back of one of the huts here is a fine grove of trees. A stage is erected and from it the ground slopes upward forming a natural ampitheatre. Here gather some four or five hundred Tommies out under the trees and a London concert party is one of the favorite attractions. Sometimes the program is further enlivened by one of the battalion bands and they sure have some good ones here.

The program consists mostly of the popular songs of the day, recitations and other musical numbers. One of the best entertainments I remember was a debate. "Resolved that conscription should be applied in Canada." The affirmative was taken by the Divisional Signallers and the negative by our unit the 15th Field Ambulance, and we were fortunate in winning. Its too bad our orators aren't over there to settle all the conscription troubles over in Canada. A band was there also and played all the popular tunes of the day. By the way, when I came over here I had the idea that "Blighty" was rather behind us for the popular ragitme, but there are so many popular ones over here that it is hard to remember them all. A few of them are "Blighty," which is rather old here now but was the rage for a while; others are "Broken Doll," "If you were the only girl in the world and I was the only boy," "When a wonderful boy meets a wonderful girl." and a good comical one is "I want to go home." There are lots of others but they are the most popular.

Well about the only fault I have to find with the "Y" is that there is too big a crowd around the canteen mostly and it is hard to get at anything, but just have to wait too long. Mostly the huts are too small to hold the audience but that only speaks for the popularity of the "Y" and these huts seat about three or four hundred I should judge.

Well, I'm writing you a longer letter than I intended but when I started about the "Y" I just had to finish it all as I know you would likely be interested in "Y" work. I don't forget the good times I had around the old "Y" at home either and I guess it was almost a second home to me there.

I suppose you know that Jack Smythe and Gerald McCarthy are back in this unit with me. They left a good thing in Hastings to get back in this unit in order to go to France as we hope to go before many moons have passed.

Vun Lyle is in a sanitary section here so you see the old bunch is almost together again. Clarence Vradden is with No. 5 Field Ambulance in France and Charlie Richardson is in a hospital at Brighton.

As you probably know, the 52nd is here also and also part of the 247th. The other night I met Segts. Latimer, Dunsford and Primeau and we hiked it over to the 52nd and there was quite a gathering from Peterborough.

Well, I guess I'll stop for this time. Give my best regards to all back there and I would be peased to hear from you all.

Yours sincerely.

NEW YORK HOSTELRY WILL SERVE 10,000 MEALS A DAY

Largest Institution of Like Kind in the World ---Small Army of Cooks and Waiters to be Employed.

The fry cook, the fish cook, the roast cook, the sauce cook and the pastry cook and other chief cooks, will each have separate quarters, with a great section of range and personal staff of assistants in the gigantic Commodore Hotel, now being built in New York city. Mr. John McE. Bowman, president of the Biltmore Manhattan and Ansonia Hotels, is president of the company which will own and operate the hostelry.

Plans for the kitchens, which, it is said, will be the largest in the world, have just been completed. In the kitchens, 10,000 meals a day will have to be prepared. The kitchens will form a long chain of rooms, floored with marble, walled with white tiles and divided into working compartments, with counters of glass and white Carrara marble.

4,000 to Work in Hotel.

Of the 10,000 meals to be prepared each day, of which 4,000 will be for employes. A battery of brass pneumatic tubes will bring down the orders from the various floors, and electric elevators will shoot back the dishes. In addition to the preparation of meals for those who will stay at the Commodore, elaborate dishes for public and regimental dinners, wedding parties, balls and receptions will be prepared in the banquet kitchen, which will be 145 by 34 feet wide.

The meals for employes will be served in a cafeteria. The main kitchen will be 200 by 64 feet. More than a hundred cooks will be employed there under the direction of the head chef, the under chef and the night chef. An elaborate ventilating system will eliminate all excess moisture and odors.

Dishwashers to be Noiseless.

There will be a dozen or more economical dishwashing machines, operated by electricity. They will be noiseless. These machines will have a capacity of from 5.000 to 8,000 dishes an hour. There will be enormous soup cooling devices, steam serving tables, automatic egg boilers, electric silver and knife cleaning machines, puree and vegetable preparing machines, vegetable steamers and boilers and innumerable other utensils.

Fifteen Butchers in Kitchen.

Above the main kitchen will be the preparatory kitchen, divided into departments. For instance, in the preparatory kitchen there will be the butcher's department, under the supervision of the head chef and head butcher, who will have fourteen assistants, divided into three small departments—first, five butchers for meat; second, six butchers for chicken, game, etc., and, third, three butchers for fish.

Hardly Realizes He is Same Man

"I Can't Describe How Miserable I Felt," Says Connell—Like New Man After Taking Tanlac.

"I have improved so much since taking Tanlac I can hardly realize I am the same man, and my wife says she hasn't seen me looking so well in a long time," said Frank Connell, 196 Mavety St., Toronto, employed by the Gunn Packing Co. Mr. Connell has lived in Toronto thirty years and his many friends will be glad to earn of his recovery.

"About six months ago I lost my appetite," Mr. Connell continued, "and soon fell off from a big healthy man to almost a skeleton. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could hardly eat a thing and nothing tasted right. The gas that formed on my stomach caused sharped pains around my heart and interfered with my breathing. I would wake up at all hours of the night, had terrible nightmares, and would get up in the mornings as tired as when I went to bed. All my strength and energy seemed to leave me and I was just losing weight and going down hill every day. I would get so weak and dizzy I would have to catch hold of a table to steady myself. Every hour was just an hour of torture. I can't describe how miserable I did feel. I didn't have the color of life in me and my friends were talking about how bad I looked. I would come home from my work in the evenings all played out, fall across the bed and my daughter would have to take off my boots for me.

"I had no faith in Tanlac, but I bought a bottle anyway, more to please my wife than anything else, and it has done me a world of good. My appetite returned. I began to eat and enjoy it and feel stronger and better. I have just started on my third bottle and there's no comparison in my looks and feelings. I am now eating three big, hearty meals a day and sometimes I can hardly wait for meal time to come. I sleep like a log every night and get up in the mornings full of life and energy. I am now putting in full time at my work every day, and when I get home in the evenings instead of dropping down on the bed like a dead man, I eat a hearty supper and go out and work around the house.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

CONVERSION OF BONDS FOR CANADIANS ONLY

Ottawa, July 28. — Referring to the privilege of conversion which has been given to holders of Dominion of Canada Domestic war loan bonds, it is pointed out by the Finance Department that this applies to issues of the internal loans only, and has no connection with such financing as the Government of the Dominion of Canada may do in the United States or other outside markets, such as the operations now being undertaken in the United States in the issue of two-year notes.

MORE PAY FOR CLERKS

G. T. R. Staff To Get Increase Of 15 Per Cent

Two hundred Grand Trunk employes in the services of the Grand Trunk Railway doing clerical work were in high glee when they were advised that their wages would be increased about 15 per cent.

"That they will and do appreciate this act on the part of the management," said one local official, "can best be judged by looking into the faces of the men and women in the service. It was so unexpected and this fact makes it all the more acceptable." "The increase," said another, "comes at a time when it is most needed."

AGAIN THE PROFITEER.

Charged With Holding Country Up On Prices of Flags.

Washington, July 28.—The Federal Trade Commission recommended that Congress take up immediately the consideration of laws which would protect the public against "indefensible and extortionate" prices which, it is alleged, are being charged for some commodities, the demand for which had been increased greatly because of the entrance of the United States into the war. The Commission based its charges on an investigation into the tremendous increase in the price of flags, which it was hinted, had approached a national scandal so far as some manufacturers and dealers were concerned.

OFFICERS OF C. D. F. TO BE RELIEVED OF DUTY

The officers in charge of the C.D.F., and the officers attached to these units have been notified that their services will not be required after the 31st July. The C.D.F. has not seen the success that the authorities would desire and it is thought that their abolition is advisable. All the C.D.F. officers will resign on the last of the month.

Col. D. King Smith Tells Of Work At Saloniki

Back from the scene of active warfare, suffering with fever, Lieut.-Col. (Dr.) D. King Smith, of Toronto, has high praise for the Canadians at Saloniki. The outstanding contribution of the Canadian Army Medical Corps to the health of the troops in that region was the dental department affiliated with the two generals hospitals. They did notable work.

According to the first-hand testimony of Lieut.-Col. Smith, the hospitals were splendidly equipped, and the bacteriolligical and pathological laboratory in connection with No. 4 Hospital was especially well arranged. The comfort of the patients was well looked after. Games and social relaxation were provided. The nursing sisters were ever patient and cheerful, no matter what the demands made upon them.

On one occasion, according to Lieut.-Col. Smith, Premier Venizelos paid them an unofficial visit, and charmed everyone by his quiet and courteous manner.

Saloniki, itself had improved vastly since the troops were quartered there, he asserted. There were fine restaurants in the city. To the returned officer, however, the most wonderful thing of all was the way in which the British kept the troops so amply supplied with all manner of necessary provisions.

Guelph firemen will get 20 cents a day increase until three months after the war.

BARON BORROWS SHIRT.

Forced to Obtain Garments From Brother.

New York, July 28.—Baron Robert Oppenheim, in the Supreme Court, confirmed the statement made a week ago by his brother, Baron Eugene F. E. Oppenheim, that the latter is compelled by financial circumstances to wear his brother's shirts. The Oppenheims were formerly engaged in the development of South African railways, and in 1893 Eugene inherited $300,000 from the estate of his father and mother.

The shirtless baron was examined a week ago to ascertain whether he had sufficient assets to satisfy a judgment for $3,369 held by Morris K. Parker. He testified that he didn't even own the shirt he wore.

"I did loan my brother my shirt on June 29," Baron Robert testified yesterday, "and I often loan him my shirts, and also my ties, handkerchiefs and socks. But I do not loan my underwear, as I do not wear underwear."

To be held in the ARENA, TORONTO

(SEATING CAPACITY 8,000)

BELIEVING AS WE DO that in this crisis in the affairs of our country it is of vital importance:

1. That Canada shall dedicate all her resources of men and means to the Winning of the War,

2. That if we are to justify our national existence, to succour our living and be worthy of our dead, Conscriptive Measures be immediately adopted and enforced to maintain the strength of our forces at the front and to discharge our full duty in the existing emergency,

3. That a National Non-Partisan Government be established for the vigorous prosecution of the War,

4. That all patriotic elements in the country which place the Winning of the War above all other considerations be united, to the end that their strength may be made effective to overcome selfishness and indifference, and that the people of Canada may be dedicated anew to their high destiny of service in the War,

AND DEEMING IT ESSENTIAL for the welfare of Canada that all citizens of Ontario who share these beliefs shall have an opportunity of expressing their adherence to these principles and of ensuring their enforcement,

AND BEING CONVINCED that patriotic Canadians can render no higher service to their Country than by uniting our people to "carry on" with increasing vigour to the end,

WE THEREFORE INVITE all public-spirited citizens, of whatever political faith, to attend an Ontario Convention in Toronto, the Capital of the Province, on

DUST ON HUNTER STREET IS CAUSED BY WRECKING PLANT

Impossible to Entirely Abate it Until Quaker Oats' Ruins Are Down But Watering Cart is Used Several Times a Day.

At a meeting of the Board of Works last night a number of matters that really belonged to other committees were dealt with to save calling special meetings.

Lights for the Foot Bridge.

The Peterborough Utilities Commission will be asked to place lights on the C. P. R. foot bridge and approaches, and it was particularly urged that two of them be placed at either end at once so as to show the sign that the bridge is not yet open for traffic and that anyone using it does so on their own responsibility. The railing will be placed in position shortly, and all danger will be over.

Flushing the Streets.

It was pointed out that the firemen, in flushing the streets, were washing out the gravel where repairs had been made on the asphalt. The city engineer was instructed to get the Standard Paving Co. to send men at once to make the repairs.

Bad Crossings.

Chairman Weir was ashamed of the crossings at the Hunter street bridge. The planking in the centre of the tracks was in bad shape. In regard to the dust complained of, it was impossible to prevent it until the buildings were all wrecked. The watering cart was over the street several times a day, and it would be useless to put oil on the thoroughfare.

City Engineer Parsons stated that the Quaker Oats Company had been notified regarding the planking of the tracks.

The city engineer was instructed by resolution, to proceed with all the repair work as fast as possible. Ald. Dobbin wanted to hold up the sewer work until the repair work was completed, but this did not meet with favor.

New Light.

A new light was ordered placed on Romaine street between Monaghan road and the G. T. R. tracks. Another was ordered placed on Rubidge street in front of No. 595.

New Poles.

The Utilities Commission were granted permission to place poles on Princess street near Lock street.

New Crossings.

Ald. Smith fathered a resolution, which carried, ordering the building of crossings on Rogers and Mark streets midway between Hunter and Douro streets.

Ald. McIntyre's request for a crossing on Aylmer street north of Smith street was left over for investigation. The city engineer did not think it necessary.

COAL DEALERS OBJECT.

To Establishment of Municipal Yard In Toronto.

Toronto, July 28.—Mayor Church's action in instituting on behalf of the city an application to the Ontario Railway Board for a municipal fuel yard has aroused the censure of Mr. H. A. Harrington, of the coal section of the Retail Merchants' Association. He states that the dealers are in first class shape as far as orders are concerned to care for the coal trade of Toronto. According to Mr. Harrington the Mayor protests against income taxation, yet takes action to increase taxation when such a policy is unnecessary.

CIVIC HOLIDAY, MONDAY, AUGUST 13TH.

Peterborough's Civic Holiday will be held on Monday, August 13th. Many excursions are being planned for that day.

AMERICAN DOCTOR BROKE FROM HUN PRISON CAMP

Tells of Inhuman Treatment of Captives Especially Those From British Army—Dead Bodies Treated Like Carcasses of Animals.

Indignities suffered by Allied prisoners in German detention camps were described by Dr. A. M. Marx of San Francisco, on his arrival recently in New York. He succeeded in escaping from a German camp by drugging one of the guards and disguising himself in the man's uniform.

"Near the prison, which was situated at Diebkieck, in Luxemburg, was a rendering plant, where the bodies of those killed in battle were treated to remove all the animal fats and glycerine," Dr. Mars said. "In the prison camp itself the English received far worse treatment than the French. Many times I saw the German officers spit in the food they gave the English, and when I remonstrated, they told me it was none of my business."

Dr. Mars was in Luxemburg at the beginning of the war, settling an estate left by his mother. Being an American, he thought he would experience little difficulty in getting out, but as soon as the Germans took possession they arrested him. He was eventually released, but was required to report twice weekly to the military commander.

Interned in Prison Camp.

Then, when he criticized the actions of the Germans he was interned in the military prison camp. When General von Gotch, in command of that sector, learned that he was a physician, Dr. Mars was ordered to treat the wounded Allied soldiers. The majority of them suffered from dysentery, contracted from eating unleavened bread.

Dr. Mars gained the confidence of the German officers and soldiers and he was permitted to eat at the officers' mess. He was allowed much greater liberty than any of the rest of the interned soldiers and civilians and was only slightly guarded.

Five months ago he determined to escape. The two officers guarding him suffered from insomnia, and were accustomed to get small doses of veronol from him to make them sleep. Finally one night, when the officers had begged three days for their customary supply of veronol, he gave them each a large overdose.

Escapes at Dawn.

Donning the uniform of one of his former captors, he left camp at dawn and boarded a train for Aix-la-Chapelle. He paid his fare out of money found in the uniform. After crossing the border he discarded the uniform and made his way on foot in the white garments worn in the prison camp.

"It was pretty hard going at times," he said. "I received some money from the monks in a monastery where I attended confession, but for the most part I ate grass, and even refuse. An American can't beg. I wandered from farm to farm, walking by night and hiding by day, finally reaching the Dutch border. After much difficulty I gained Flushing, going from there to Amsterdam, from whence I sailed on a cargo vessel for Vigo, Spain."

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

The market this morning was not a very large one and as a result the farmer ladies did not experience much difficulty in getting rid of their produce.

Eggs were firmer and sold at 39 and 40 cents per doz.

Buter was also a little stronger selling at 39 and in a few instance 40 cents.

There was a shortage of spring chickens. A few very poor hens comprised the bulk of the fowl market.

Cherries sold readily at $1.00 to $1.50 per pail.

New potatoes were fairly plentiful but sold easily at 60 to 65 cents per peck.

Hogs are quoted at $15.25 for next week's delivery.

HARDWARELINES BUSY FIGURING ON 1918 SEASON

MANY MERCHANTS WILL HAVE TO REDUCE SIZE OF THEIR ORDERS.

A General advance has been recorded in practically all lines of shelf hardware during the past week and manufacturers intimate that the top of the market has not yet been reached. They state present costs of finished products are not yet in keeping with the prices of the raw materials. In some lines, such as lawn mowers, the manufacturers are accepting orders for 1918 delivery to the extent of only 75 per cent of the purchases of 1917, and are not guaranteeing shipment of even that quantity. Wholesalers closely in touch with the situation assert their belief there is every evidence that there will be shortages in practically all lines wherein steel enters. Booking prices on harvest tools for delivery in 1918 have been announced by some concerns which are considerably higher. New prices on some makes of lawn mowers for shipment in 1918 have been issued and show advances of at least thirty-three and one-third per cent. over the opening prices for 1917.

Further advances have been recorded in plated loose pin butts, barrel bolts, chain bolts, hasps and staples, shelf brackets, corrugated strap hinges. Screw drivers have again been increased in price. Horse clippers and sheep-shearing machines of the power type have been moved to higher levels. Wedges and hammers of all kinds, including masons' sledges, have been increased considerably Cutlery, cheap shotguns, snow shovels, auger bits, axle grease are also included in the lines which have been moved to higher levels. Linseed oil is in continued firm market and the price of turpentine held steady. Business with wholesale hardware houses is reported very good. There is an inclination towards quietness in the city, but from the country districts trade is keeping up remarkably well in spite of the holiday season.—Hardware and Metals.

MANY ADVANCES COW PRODUCTS APPEAR ACTIVE

GROCERY TRAVELLERS GO ON ANNUAL VACATION FOR TWO WEEKS.

Starches, cornstarches and corn syrups were among the lines in which considerable advances were recorded during the week. Increases in the market for these commodities have been due to the acute situation in corn. Cocoa is in extra heavy demand at present. One large manufacturer is about to double the capacity of his present plant in order to take care of the trade that has developed within recent months. One line of package cocoa advanced during the week. Custard powder and egg powder and washboards were included in the lines in which there were changes in an upward direction.

Cooked meats, such as boiled and roast hams, were in slightly higher market, but smoked hams were quoted down. Trade in the latter has been dull and prices were lowered to induce business. In pure lard there was a decidedly easier tone during the week, due to the eagerness of some of the larger concerns to get business. Butter was in steady and firm market, but eggs were on the up grade, advances having been recorded. Production in the latter is now lighter.

Refiners were still quoting in a divided market so far as accord on prices on sugar is concerned. With the raw situation exhibiting strength the opinion prevails that the refiner quoting at low figure will in the not distant future move upward. Flour was unchanged for Manitoba, but in a fairly strong market. Millfeeds of all kinds are in better demand and prices are ruling firm at the high quotations of last week. Travellers for wholesale grocery houses throughout Ontario will not make their rounds during the coming two weeks, as it is vacation period. The arrangement has been made by common consent among the various wholesalers. Business continued somewhat quiet during the week.—Canadian Grocer.

BRITAIN WILL FIX FOOD PRICE

WHEAT TO BE SOLD BELOW ACTUAL COST BY STATE AID.

London, July 27.—Lord Rhondda, the Food Controller, outlining the policy he intends to follow to regulate food prices and eliminate profiteering, said he intended to fix the prices of commodities of prime necessity over which he could obtain effective control at all stages, from the producer to the consumer. Every effort would be made to prevent speculation, and unnecessary middlemen would be eliminated. Existing agencies would be utilized for the purpose of distribution under license and under the control and supervision of local Food Controllers to be appointed by the local authorities.

Where profits were made illegally, Lord Rhondda said he would press for imprisonment in all cases of sufficient gravity. He proposed to eliminate profiteering by fixing prices on the basis of pre-war profits. All flour mills would be taken over and worked on the Government account, the flour being sold to bakers at a uniform price, and the bakers being expected to sell loaves over the counter at a maximum of nine pence retail price and flour at a corresponding rate.

Wheat Prices Fixed.

British wheat will be purchased by millers at prices determined by the Government, these prices over the year averaging seventy-two shillings per quarter.

The prices charged to millers for both home and imported wheat would be lower than the cost to the Government, and the difference would be made up by a subsidy from the Exchequer. The policy of subsidies was only justifiable because of the impossibility otherwise of reducing the cost of food to the poor.

MEAT SCARCE IN YUKON.

Indians Kill Valuable Young Harness Dogs.

Dawson, Y.T., July 28. — Jacob Njootli, Indian school teacher of Rampart House, Yukon Territory, writing from that place to The Dawson Weekly News under date of June 1, says:

"Everyone at Rampart House is well. Caribou and moose are scarce. Game and fish were so scarce that some of the Indians killed their dogs. About thirty dogs were killed all told. Some of those killed were young dogs, and would have been most valuable in the winter teams. It is pretty hard to have to kill off the animals needed for the harness, but nothing else could be done when there was nothing to feed them.

"All the trappers have done well with the fur catch this year. Those from the head of the Porcupine River report no caribou there.

"Some trappers to reach here left Fort McPherson April 1, and report all at that post well. The Huskies took much fur. Meat also is not plentiful in the Mackenzie River District, but the trappers will live on lynx meat. They say there is nothing like it.

"The ice went out here May 21. We have had great weather since. We are expecting high water when the warm weather starts. I hope to make a trip down this summer, if possible."

Mrs. Ann Chambers died suddenly at Guelph just as she returned from a visit to her son in Toronto.

And now the Pirates will have to worry along for the rest of the season without the able assistance of Bill Hinchman. It will take some time before his fractured kneecap is healed sufficiently to enable him to get into the game.

Speaking of the Pirates there is considerable excitement in Smokeville over the dismissal of Jimmy Callahan. The fans are hopping all over Barney Dreyfuss for releasing him, and many are demanding that he, too, get his walking papers.

Grouchy Gus says: "When the war is over, the free peoples of Europe ought to mobilize a regiment of jobless kings to clean up the mess they and their kind are responsible for."

As a fly-catcher Benny Kauff, the Giants' centre-fielder, beats all the sticky paper manufactured.

Another pitcher who is attracting considerable attention because of the fine brand of ball he is delivering is Jim Bagby, of the Clevelands.

Ty Cobb has been slamming the spots off the ball for over a month now and has entirely made up for his seeming lack of pep during the beginning of the season. But no matter how hard he wallops the pellet there is hardly a chance that he will equal his greatest swatting campaign, that of the season of 1911. Six years ago Cobb carried out the greatest assault ever known in baseball. In that year Cobb smashed all records by scoring 147 runs, making 248 hits in 148 games. This record has never been approached. Ty recently passed the 100-hit mark this season, and has scored about 50 runs in something over 70 games. If he hopes to attain the mark he set himself in 1911 he will have to pound out at least 140 hits and score over 100 runs in the games still to be played until the end of this season. It is, of course, possible that this can be done, but it is most unlikely. Ty would have to keep up his June and early July spurt to attain this end. It means that for the remainder of the season his batting average will have to be 450. The truth is that for the past several weeks Cobb's average has been around 460, in one of the most remarkable batting demonstrations ever known.

John K. Tener's Big Job

For the past few years John K. Tener, former governor of Pennsylvania, has been president of the National League, and of all the big jobs he has held this is certainly one of the most trying. It was on July 25 that Tener was chosen for this job, which carries with it a salary of $25,000 a year. And the man who holds it down successfully certainly deserves every penny he gets. He must combine the qualities of a baseball genius, a diplomat, and a shrewd judge of men. His two principal jobs as president are the handling of a staff of umpires, their proper distribution among the various cities, and being a member of the National Baseball Commission. This latter is quite a job in itself. The presidents of the National and American Leagues with the chairman of that commission have absolute control of all organised baseball in the country. The job of taking care of the staff of umpires has given many league presidents premature gray hair. He is directly responsible for their performance, and it is a big task finding and drilling men to be competent judges of games. Besides that all sorts of questions come up for his decision, and some of them are mighty ticklish ones. Yes, being president of a big league is a fine job, if you can hold it.

Inside of a few minutes three places in Barrie were struck by lightning in a severe electrical storm. Neighbors rescued Jos. Howcroft and his two sons, stunned when lightning struck and fired their barn.

ROY RUTHERFORD

Miss Finney, the teacher whose pupil scored such a success, was born in the neighborhood, and at one time attended as a pupil the very school over which she now so successfully presides. She is a graduate of the Lindsay high school, and was formerly teacher in No. 5, South Monaghan.

The watches presented by Capt. Burnham are procured from Mr. C. S. McClelland and are guaranteed for three years.

The Burnham watch has been won by every school in South Monaghan except No. 5, and that section will never rest content until it, too, captures the honor. The prize is a great incentive to effort in the rural schools as well as to the city pupils, to whom it is offered every year.

Besides the watch, Roy Rutherford gets a cash prize of $10 from his father as a reward for his success.

RIVER OUTING FOR CHILDREN

INMATES OF THE SHELTER TREATED TO A SAIL TO BEWDLEY.

A very pleasant day was spent by the young people of St. John's Sunday School, who, with many parents and friends, took advantage of a lull in the hot spell and sailed away to Bewdley at the head of Rice Lake. The little folks from the Children's Shelter were on board with Mrs. Read, at the instance of St. John's Girl's Auxiliary. The president, Mrs. Conway, and Mrs. Touchbourne, also sent on board ample refreshments to ensure a happy time for their little guests. Lunch, swimming, and racing sports provided a splendid time at Bewdley and it was a happy band which debarked at the wharf at 7 p.m. with cheers for all those who had furnished such an enjoyable outing. With Mr. R. J. Devey in charge, all the programme was without a hitch. Mr. W. F. Johnston and Dr. W. T. Holloway, the church wardens, with Rev. Mr. Gay also helped to ensure a good time for the children and their efforts were thoroughly successful. Misses Fair and Gladman took charge of the booth and from start to finish the trip were kept busy supplying the wants of the children.

ENTERTAINMENT BY WHIZZ-BANG BOYS SHOWS TALENT

Delightful Performance of a Minstrel Character Wins the Approval of Enthusiastic Audience---Will Return Again.

The Whizz-Bang soldier boys from Whitby Convalescent Hospital were greeted with a warm-hearted and demonstrative reception last night in the opera house, the occasion of their [illegible] tainments of its kind, the fact that [illegible] less fortunate than themselves. The attendance however, was slim and certainly did not reflect credit [illegible] Peterborough's appreciation of the sacrifice these boys have made and others are still making, at the front for defence of our Empire and universal liberty and freedom. And apart from the quality of the Whizz-Bang offering, which is of a high grade minstrel nature, equal to most, and superior to many, professional entertainmenes of its kind, the fact that each member of this talented company is a battle-scarred hero, who will carry with him to the grave marks of the terrible world-wide war still raging, should have attracted a capacity house in well-deserved sympathy and appreciation of true Canadian manhood. However, these clever entertainers will make a return trip to Peterborough, in the same worthy cause which has actuated them the past season, and on a date, when summer weather and out-of-door counter-attractions will offer no excuse for lack of attendance on the part of a community which has heretofore so generously demonstrated its loyal patriotism in so many varied ways. As a sample of British indomitable pluck and courage, even under adverse circumstances, one could not help but admire the glorious type of true heroism manifested last evening by Pte. G. Hill, who, in full knowledge, The Review is informed, that today one of his legs is to be amputated as a result of injuries received in France, cheerfully stood up and entertained a fully responsive audience with song after song admirably rendered in splendid tenor voice.

The Whizz-Bang boys form a white minstrel troup of exceptional versatile talent. Their jokes in the first part are mostly original, and delivered in a manner readily comprehensive. As songsters they are of first quality, and an irresistible vein of humor permeates the whole entertainment. In chorus (popular at the front) they offer rich volume with a charming blending of fifteen musical voices. Corporals Healey and G. Fowler brought down the house in London's popular character duet "Broken Doll." In McNamara's Band, an exceedingly merry travesty on a wind instrument organization, the one-armed hero, Sergt. P. Whitnall presents a wonderfully faithful replica of Charlie Chaplin, the favorite comedian in photoplays, while Pte. H. Bentley, the Handcuff King, astonishes his audience by extricating himself from seemingly hopeless situations. With four handcuffs on his wrists, he marvellously frees himself; and even when fastened hand and feet to a cross with chains and handcuffs, he still regains his liberty. Pte. F. S. Brugger in "war" recitations showed considerable elocutionary art, and Pte. G. E. Seddon, in trombone solos, proved a favorite. All the vocal numbers were a credit to the boys, and well-merited the encores which the audience would not be denied. It is to be hoped that the Whizz-Bang entertainers will give Peterborough citizens one more opportunity of demonstrating their appreciation of the concert talent of Canadian wounded soldiers who have done their bit, and the cause for which they are now working—the relief of brother heroes in Whitby Hospital.

JUDGES APPOINTED TO ACT AT PETERBOROUGH'S FALL FAIR

The directors of the Peterborough Agricultural Exhibition met last night in the City Council chamber and discussed plans for the show which opens here on the 12th of September.

It is the intention to have a far greater and more elaborate fireworks display this year than ever before, besides many added features to make the horse races more attractive than ever.

A new feature that will be generally favored will be the selling of ground admission tickets which will be sold at the rate of six for a dollar, and these may be secured just as soon as they arrive from the printers.

Numerous attractions which will tend to make this year's show an especially interesting one were also dealt with.

The following were appointed as the judges in charge of the different classes:

Heavy Horses — Joseph White, Myrtle.

Light Horses — William Maher, Cobourg.

Horse Races — Dr. Sinclair, Cannington.

Beef Cattle—Joseph Johnston, Ashburn.

Dairy Cattle—F. R. Mallory, Belleville.

Poultry—To be appointed by the Agricultural Department.

A number of judges were selected for other departments, but their appointment was laid over until it is ascertained whether they will be able to serve.

OUTING FOR VETERANS.

They Will Be Guests of City on a River Trip.

It was the decision of the members of the City Council last night that the Great War Veterans be given an outing. The details of chartering a baot for a day was left in the hands of Acting Mayor Duncan to arrange. The idea is that the Veterans and their families enjoy a trip down the river and that the city give them the use of a boat for the occasion. Some of the aldermen thought that the date of the anniversary of the declaration of war would be a good one.

BRITISH CONTINUE

on the military situation and replied to questions. The Temps gives a summary of his talk.

Mr. Lloyd George said that Great Britain now had between 5,000,000 and 5,500,000 soldiers enrolled, without counting between 400,000 to 500,000 belonging to the navy, or nearly a million men from the Dominions and colonies. Great Britain [illegible] at the disposal of her allies, he added, from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 tons of merchant ships. Next year's building programme for merchant ships, which already has begun, amounts to 4,000,000 tons, or twice as much as in a good year during peace time. Alluding to the campaign against submarines, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"The diminution in shipping-losses is incontestable. It is impossible to abandon this subject without paying homage to the aid given by the American navy, both regarding the organization of convoys and by torpedo-boat destroyers, which have given invaluable service.

Col. Sam Sharpe is Reported Missing

Toronto, July 28. — A Toronto Star Uxbridge despatch says that a rumor has reached there that Lieut. Col. Sharpe, M.P. for North Ontario, is missing in France. The rumor is also in circulation in Ottawa, but so far as can be learned it is not from any official source.

Col. Sam Sharpe took the 116th Battalion to Europe last year having recruited it in his own riding. At least two Peterborough men, working in Oshawa at the time, were among those who enlisted. When the battalion reached England it had the signal distinction of being sent to the front as a unit with Col. Sharpe in command.

VICIOUS BULL KILLS FARMER

Chief Thompson left for London today to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Mr. David H. Carroll, a farmer, one mile east of that city, who was gored to death by a bull yesterday. Mr. Carroll, who managed the farm owned by Dr. C. A. Cline, on the 1st Concession of Westminster township, had gone into the stall of the Holstein, which was a particularly vicious one, to put an extra ring in his nose. The animal attacked him and pierced his right lung with its horn. A six-year-old daughter witnessed the tragedy and called for help, but before assistance could be rendered the unfortunate man was dead.

The deceased leaves a wife and four daughters, the eldest of whom is 19 years old.

GREECE BREAKS WITH GERMANY

GERMANS PREPARE TO LEAVE LENS, FORCED OUT BY HEAVY FIRE AND SUFFOCATING GAS

French Correspondents Say That That Foe Will Desert Entire Mining Region and Fall Back on New Defences---Fierce Assaults Made in Vain Against French Positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, June 29.—Correspondents of Paris newspapers on the British front think the Germans have decided to evacuate Lens and the whole mining basin. The Journal correspondent says the town is swept by an infernal bombardment and shrouded in clouds of asphyxiating gas which have overwhelmed the enemy who is quitting the town, leaving his wrecked defences, to slip away to fresh quarters in the Drocourt Queant line.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, June 29.—The enemy showed very great activity on the Aisne front during the night. Violent bombardments were followed by severe attacks in the region of Cerny, southeast of Corbeny and northwest of Rheims. All his efforts were broken up by our fire or nullified by counter attacks, and our positions were maintained. Fighting was particularly heavy in the region of Cerny, where the enemy made several attacks at two points on our front. Northeast of the Village of Cerny enemy detachments succeeded in gaining a footing in our first line. They were driven out by energetic counter attack by our troops, leaving numerous bodies on the ground. We took prisoners.

On the left bank of the Meuse, the Verdun front, artillery fighting yesterday was extremely intense in the region of Avocourt wood and Hill 304. Violent bombardment with guns of large calibre was directed against our positions and was followed at 6:30 in the evening by a powerful attack delivered by special German assaulting troops on a front of two kilometres west of Hill 304.

Our effectively directed fire disorganised the attack, which enabled the Germans to gain a footing at some points in our first line. A new attack at 3.45 this morning on our positions west of Hill 304 was repulsed completely.

FRENCH VESSELS LOST.

PARIS, June 29.—Two French merchantmen over sixteen hundred tons and three under that tonnage were sunk during the week ending last Sunday.

The above society desires to state that it has no responsibility or connection with the musical recitals being given tonight and tomorrow evening in the Conservatory Hall. The Peter Robinson Chapter have received fifty dollars of the proceeds.

CAPT. BURNHAM SENDS $50 TO REVIEW FOR BAND FUND

Wants Money Divided Between Two Bands so That Park Concerts May be Continued ---57th Regiment Band Quits.

Capt. Burnham, M.P., sent to The Review this morning a cheque for $50 to be added to the $600 set aside by Council and divided equally between the two bands of the city. Capt. Burnham is desirous that his contribution be divided on the same basis and that $25 be given to each band as an inducement to them to continue their weekly concerts in the park. The cheque sent by Capt. Burnham has been disposed of by The Review in accordance with the wishes of the donor.

Capt. Burnham says that while other organizations in the city appear to be able to get anything they ask for in the way of financial assistance, while the rich are deprived of no luxuries, it would be too bad to deny the masses the pleasure they have always taken in the weekly musical programs in the park. Hence his contribution.

The Review has received the following communication, which explains itself:

PARK CONCERTS DISCONTINUED

Editor Review: As the City Council has practically signified by its recent action in reducing our annual grant to a sum which is utterly inadequate for our requirements, that they do not desire a continuance of our Friday night concerts, we bow with the best grace we can command to their verdict.

It is not without feelings of deepest regret that we announce the discontinuance of these concerts, which have provided such a source of pleasure to thousands of our citizens, and can assure our friends and the public generally that nothing short of the direct necessity has compelled this action.

The new year may probably give us aldermen with broader viewpoints and less susceptibility to cheap and petty ward politics. When this time arrives we hope to resume our concerts, and in the meantime will retain our organization to the best of our ability.

A CONFEDERATION STAMP.

It has been decided to issue a special stamp to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Confederation. There will not likely be a series, but only a three cent stamp. The exact design has not yet been settled so that the stamp will not be ready for Dominion Day. It will be issued sometime in July.

FOUGHT THEIR WAY INCH BY INCH THROUGH AVION

Canadians Made Fresh Attack on Village Last Night.

THE SECOND IN 24 HOURS

Terrific Artillery Action Veils Scene With a Dense Cloud of Smoke.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, June 29. — Fighting their way forward amid a labyrinth of ruined houses over which the smoke of battle hung densely, the Canadians at sundown last night were more than half way through Avion. The attack, which was the second in 24 hours, was made in conjunction with the British troops, all of whom reached their objectives. On the north our hold upon Reservoir Hill was made absolute by the gallant advance of the British soldiers, who went forward without check, despite heavy enemy shelling.

The German trenches on the eastern side were occupied within half an hour after the attack began. Throughout the day there had been incessant artillery activity. The Germans kept Conrotte and Lens-Arras road under shrapnel fire throughout the afternoon, evidently to make difficult the assemblage of troops for a further advance into Avion. Their former front line on the outskirts of Avion, was also hammered with high explosives, and considerably damaged. Our guns did much counter-battery work to the east of Lens, where most of the enemy's guns are now located.

There was comparative calm for a short time before seven o'clock. When the appointed time came, on a front of many miles from the Scarpe to a point well to the north of the Souchez River, hundreds of guns opened in a terrific cannonade. Soon Reservoir Hill, Lens itself, Avion and the region to the south were hidden behind almost on impenetrable veil of smoke from bursting shells. Amid this the infantry, who had remained inactive throughout the day, amid the grueling fire, went forward.

GREECE IS NOW ON ALLIES' SIDE

NO DECLARATION OF WAR, BUT DIPLOMATS WILL BE RECALLED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ATHENS, JUNE 29. — Though war is not yet declared, the Greek Government considers a state of war exists since its advent to power yesterday. The recall of the Greek diplomatic representatives accredited to the Central Powers and their Allies is imminent.

MR. HANNA URGES ECONOMY IN USE OF FOODSTUFFS

Controller Issues a Word of Warning to Canadian People.

SAVING IS MOST ESSENTIAL

Allied Nations Look to America For a Supply of Necessaries.

OTTAWA, June 29.—In a statement just issued Hon. W. J. Hanna, the newly-appointed food controller, reviews the food situation in Canada, emphasizes the need of the allies, urges economy and the prevention of waste in food and bespeaks whole-hearted public co-operation.

"Food conservation is essential to win the war," the controller concludes.

Mr. Hanna's statement in part reads:

"The outstanding fact of the food situation, which it is imperative that every citizen of Canada should realize at once is that Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and their European allies are wholly unable to supply the allied armies at the front and on the way. For nearly three years their man-power has been engaged in the direct work of war and in some cases large areas of their most productive lands have been over run by the enemy. Their food shortage and the food to supply the armies of Canada and the United States must be wholly provided from this side of the Atlantic. The supply must also be sufficient to cover losses at sea. Australia, New Zealand, the Argentine Republic, and other countries are not now available to relieve the situation because of their remoteness and the shortage of tonnage.

"The crop of storeable foods grown in Canada and the United States suitable for shipment overseas threatens to be entirely inadequate to meet the demand unless the whole people determine by every means in their power to make up the shortage. Every individual is under a direct obligation to assist in rationing the allied forces. There must be national co-operation to provide the necessary supplies.

"Time and investigation will be required to determine the best means of assuring adequate rations for the Canadian divisions and the allied nations and armies. But these are some measures that are so obviously right that we ask that they be adopted at once and that the men and women of the Dominion pledge themselves to their observance.

PLACES FOR VETERANS.

OTTAWA, June 29.—According to a return tabled in the Commons, 3,693 returned soldiers have been placed either permanently or temporarily in the Federal service.

BRITISH TROOPS CAPTURE FRONT POSITION AND ARE IN POSSESSION OF AVION

LABOR MEMBER WARNS PREMIER OF NEW DANGER

Union Men Will Call Universal Strike if Conscription Is Enforced.

DEMAND A REFERENDUM.

More Liberals Break With Their Leader and Support the Bill.

OTTAWA, June 29. — Alphonse Verville, Liberal-Labor member for Maisonneuve, purporting to speak for organized labor warned the government that the passage of the conscription bill would be the signal for a universal strike in Canada. He said the working men of the country insisted upon a referendum. He considered the production of food and supplies more important than the sending of more soldiers to the front, and declared that the reserves of man power for military purposes had been exhausted. In the United States and Great Britain alike, he said, organized labor had been consulted, but in Canada it had been ignored by the government. Mederic Martin, Mayor of Montreal, and Liberal member for St. Mary's division, went further, and told the government that when they passed the conscription bill they would enter the realm of civil war.

Neely Leaves Laurier

On the other hand, David Neely, Liberal member for Humboldt, who has several thousand Germans in the constituency, made a vigorous speech in favor of conscription and against the referendum.

He described himself as still being an admired of Sir Wilfrid Laurier but in the same breath expressed his surprise that any man would stand up in the house of commons and oppose, or delay, sending reinforcements to the front.

Only less notable was the excellent speech delivered by William G. Welchel, Conservative member for North Waterloo, who came out strongly for conscription and opposed the referendum. He said he was the only member of the house of German parentage, but he was none the less devoted to the cause of the allies, and so was the German-Canadian constituency which he represented.

Dr. J. L. Chabot, the French Canadian Conservative member for the city of Ottawa, supported the policy of the government, while Dr. Eugene Pacquet, for many years Conservative member for L'Islet, announced that he would vote for the referendum.

Prisoners and Machine Guns Captured and Progress Made Toward Lens---Hostile Raiding Parties Repulsed and More Trenches Taken --- What is Planned in Germany.

(By Associated Press.)

British Headquarters in France, June 29. — Fighting is more intense in the vicinity of Lens. The British made a brilliant attack last night during a blinding rain and thunderstorm on a number of southwesterly suburbs, including Avion. All first objectives were gained, and the indications are that the British are still pushing forward today. Nearly two hundred prisoners have already been collected in cages, and more are reported on the way back from the front; also a number of machine guns are reported taken. Fighting took place in and out among fragments of ruined buildings, Collierie Pit, derricks, and the usual litter of a mining settlement. The bombardment which preceded the attack was carried out on Friday on a wide front and was of but slightly less intensity than those which preceded some of the great actions on the British front.

BRITISH HOLD AVION.

LONDON, June 29.—Early last night we attacked and captured the enemy's forward position on a front of about two thousand yards south and west of Oppy. The whole of our objectives were gained and a number of prisoners and machine guns taken. Our troops continue to gain ground on a wide front south of the Souchese River and have entered Avion. A further number of prisoners and six machine guns have been captured in this area. A hostile raiding party was repulsed during the night north of Cherisy. We successfully raided enemy trenches southeast of Loos.

GAS ATTACK FAILS.

PETROGRAD, June 29.—A war office statement issued last night says: In the direction of Kovel the enemy emitted gas waves which the wind dissipated before they reached our trenches. South of Brzezany the enemy attacked our advanced trenches the defenders who retired after taking some prisoners. In the region of Kuropataiki and Chibain the enemy directed intense artillery bombardment on our trenches.

GERMAN PRESS GAGGED.

LONDON, June 29. — Dispatches from Rotterdam says it is inferred there in view of the gagging of the German press that something dramatic has happened or is about to happen in Germany. The press is declared to be completely muzzled. Belief is expressed in Holland that next week's meeting of the Reichstag may produce startling developments.

A WORD FROM BERLIN.

BERLIN, June 29.—German forces yesterday captured French positions on the Malancourt road, on the west bank of the Meuse in the Verdun sector, over a width of 2,000 yards and to a depth of 500 yards, says an official statement issued today.

Today Germans stormed 300-yard-wide French positions in Avocourt Wood. More than 550 prisoners fell into German hands at both points.

ALL SHOULD CELEBRATE CANADA'S JUBILEE

Editor Review: Kindly permit me to use your columns to ask the citizens to heartily co-operate to make the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Confederation a great success on Monday next.

The Great War Veterans, the Veterans of '66, the military units and members of all the public bodies, including the City Council, the Board of Education, the Separate School Board, the City Trust, the Utilities Commission, the Board of Health, the Central Charity Board, and also the Trades Unions and the Greater Peterborough Association, which includes all citizens, are asked to meet at the Armories at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. A procession will be formed and proceed through the principal streets, and return to Central Park, where addresses will be delivered on Confederation, its history and benefits. This part of the day's proceedings will especially emphasize the subject of Confederation, and all Canadians, native or by adoption, should take a keen interest in them.

In the afternoon the special reception to the Great War Veterans will be held at the Exhibition Grounds. The motor car parade will take place at 1 o'clock, and the Motor League, which has charge of the feature, wishes all motor car owners to have their cars at the Market Square at that hour, when the procession will be formed, which will take the Great War Veterans to the grounds. I hope that all car owners will assist in this feature of the day's program, and unite in the parade with flags on their cars. The reception to the Veterans will take place upon the arrival of the procession at the grounds, and it is urged that the citizens be present in large numbers to honor the Veterans, to whom too much honor cannot be given. Following the reception the program of sports prepared by the Public Holidays Committee of the Greater Peterborough Association will be carried out.

All citizens should unite in the celebration of this day, to honor the veterans, to celebrate the half century of Confederation, and to make the day a successful one for Peterborough. Unity will do it, and unity is asked for — hearty, public-spirited co-operation.

Yours very truly,
JOS. J. DUFFUS,
Mayor.

"Y" CAMPAIGNERS REPORT ANOTHER GOOD DAY'S WORK

Total Contributions Last Night Amounted to $8466 and Canvass Continued Today to Reach the Objective of $10,000.

The results for the day shows a total of $1425 with no large individual subscription reported.

Previously reported	$7041
Thursday's report	1425
Total to date	8466

The results of the Y.M.C.A. campaign to date is most encouraging. Although the objective of $10,000 is not entirely in hand, the team workers are so confident of ultimate success that they are to give another day's time to calling on those who have not already subscribed. In fact a number of the teams agreed to underwrite a certain proportion of the balance needed. It was found that a number of large prospective gifts had not yet been reported on and that quite a few of the regular subscribers were out of town and could not be solicited until their return. Everyone is optimistic as to the final result being a complete victory. It now remains for the friends who are willing to assist and who may not yet have subscribed to co-operate by sending in their gifts by mail or phone, so that Friday may see the objective fully reached.

Do Not Want To Be Overlooked.

Yesterday's experience was quite similar to the preceding days in that many persons called at the Y.M.C.A. personally or phoned their subscription. One physician called to leave $10 because he was too busy to see the solicitors when they called at his office. A phone message from a good lady who was out of town the day before was to the effect that she did not want to be overlooked as she had $50 to give the "Y". Another lady called to leave a subscription for her husband who was away and whom she knew would want to be on the list. This is the kind of spirit to insure success and speaks well for the place the association has in the hearts of our citizens.

If you have not yet subscribed fill out this pledge and send to the Y.M.C.A. or The Review:

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1917

FUEL RELIEF IN SIGHT.

WHEN THE CONSUMERS in the United States demanded an investigation into the high price of coal, they got it, the federal commission taking the matter up with the mine operators. The investigation has already had result, and the price of coal at the mouth of the mines is to be reduced in price from $1 to $1.50 a ton, according to quality. That means a corresponding reduction in price to the householder, and other reductions, especially in the cost of transportation, are in prospect. Altogether the change means a saving of millions of dollars to the people of the United States, and the householders in Canada will share in the benefits.

The American Government will probably take over the control of the coal output for the duration of the war. At least there will be a closer official espionage over the operation of the mines and the transportation of fuel than there has ever been, if not actual state ownership.

In the meantime the idea of using electricity for heating purposes is being developed in the United States, and the scientific journals over there are devoting columns of space to the subject. One of the greatest obstacles to the successful operation of electric heating is that during the winter months the tax on the capacity of a public heating plant would be heavy, while in the summer months there would not be enough used to pay to keep the plant in operation. How to overcome this difficulty is the problem.

In some parts of the United States where irrigation is required as an aid to agriculture, on account of the lack of rain in the summer, electric plants have been established in towns large enough to warrant the outlay. These plants are used for heating during the winter months and for operating the irrigating works in the summer.

In a town in Dakota another experiment along these lines is under way. An electric heating plant is being put in. There is no irrigation required in that part of the state, but the plant is to be used for the manufacture of fertilizer during the summer, a commodity that will be sold at cost to the farmers, and which it is expected will increase production by at least fifty per cent.

What the basic substance contained in the fertilizer is appears to be a secret, but the vitalising element is nitrogen, which is extracted from the air by electricity. There is at Niagara Falls, on this side of the river, a plant engaged in the manufacture of fertilizer by electricity for the American market exclusively.

The Electric World, in its latest issue, has a long article by an electric expert showing the advantages that would follow the general use of electricity as a fuel. It would not only save millions of dollars yearly to the country if once got in proper working order, but would release an army of men now engaged in the mining and transportation of coal for other lines of industry. The World takes the stand that the scarcity of labor is the most serious problem before the country today, and that it is likely to hold that place for years to come.

WHAT WAS THE MOTIVE?

A WORTHY CITIZEN, whiling away an idle hour in a local poolroom, and smoking as he loitered, espied what he regarded as a youth of tender years, solacing himself with a cigarette. Acting on impulse, the self-appointed guardian of the morals of youth struck the cigarette from the mouth of the young man and proceeded to read him a lecture on the folly of his conduct. This naturally was resented, when the policeman for the moment dragged the young fellow to the station and delivered him up to justice.

It was the citizen's little mistake, a case of premature explosion. The young fellow, so far as years were concerned, was entitled to do himself all the harm he chose by driving coffin nails into his system. Subsequently, away from the shadow of the station, the argument was renewed, and the result was that the officious gentleman was himself landed before the magistrate and fined for assault.

The victim of his own zeal will have difficulty in convincing the general public that he acted in this matter from the highest motives and that his only object was to save the young man from a lingering death. The impression will not down that it was simply another case of jealousy and that, like so many of his kind, he is averse to seeing the rising generation assume the functions and privileges of grown-up men. It was an example of precept without practice, something that is militating against the inculcation of morality into the make-up of growing children.

The officious citizen has had his lesson at an outlay of $2 and costs. Whatever his object may have been, he is now in a position to sympathise with the benevolent citizen who, in the interests of harmony, interferes with a strenuous dog fight on the street corner.

SUCH FAITH AS CHILDREN HAVE.

THE CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN appears to have blind and childlike faith in humanity. It says, as will be shown by a perusal of an extract from an editorial published in another column, that if the Government decides to conscript wealth, everything will be easy. Citizens will gladly and of their own accord surrender their gold and their silver, their houses and their lands, to create a fund for carrying on the war.

It seems almost cruel to say anything that would shatter such confidence in the devoted and unselfish patriotism of mankind. But any man of the world knows that The Guardian is off in its reckoning. When wealth is conscripted, there will be infinitely more difficulty in enforcing the law than will be met with in putting into successful operation the Act conscripting manhood itself. Some men may volunteer to avoid the draft, but the majority will probably hang back until they are forced to go. The tax dodger will be always with us, no matter what form the conscription of wealth may take, for, after all, the law which enforces the payment of taxes is only a modified form of the legislation that is now being forced upon the attention of Parliament. Actual experience in this country and elsewhere has demonstrated that of all taxes, that placed on incomes and on wealth in the abstract, if business profits can be so regarded, is the most difficult of all to collect. Even our judges have fought the provincial income tax to the last ditch that courts have dug for their protection.

The Guardian should be guided in its conclusions in this matter by an illustrious example of the selfishness of the rich that has been before the world for two thousand years. When a certain young ruler, he of the open countenance and high ideals, asked the Master what he should do to inherit eternal life, the outward observance of a law was an easy matter for him. When, however, another conditon was imposed and he was told to sell all that he had and give the money to the poor, he went away sorrowing, for he had great possessions.

Human nature has not changed so much in twenty centuries. This country is full of men today who will urge a strict compliance with and a rigid enforcement of the conscription law, and yet will try to dodge the tax collector when a levy is made on their own money or lands.

FIGHTING CONSCRIPTION.

MR. TANCREDE MARSIL, the Quebec anti-conscription agitator, speaking at an anti-conscription meeting in Hochelaga Ward, Montreal, on Friday, the 16th instant, said:

> "We only have one country, and that country is not France, it is not England, it is Canada. Before ruining our country we will take the means to defend it. You who fell on the battlefield of 1837-38! You Chenier! Let your great soul inspire us and show us the path of honor and love for our country!".

Mr. Tancrete Marsil has founded the "League of the Sons of Liberty," with the object of fighting conscription. In an article announcing this foundation, on Saturday last, the 15th, he says:

> "'The League of the Sons of Liberty' is a necessity of the present hour. What we now lack in Quebec is the union of all energies and thoughts in order to direct them towards a common object. I apply first to the young men because they will be first to go under the Borden iniquitous law. Let us be united. Let us feel that we are fighting for one and the same idea. Let us show the exploiters that we are a dangerous power to them. The object of this league is not only to fight conscription but all ministerial measures which lead to it, either directly or indirectly."

"La Liberte," Mr. Marsil's paper, states that Armand Lavergne was one of the first to join this league.

Mr. Athanase David, K.C., M.L.A., is a son of Senator David, who is well known as Sir Wilfrid Laurier's bosom friend. On Thursday, the 14th instant, he held a meeting at Terrebonne, the shire town of the county of the same name, which he represents in the Quebec Legislature. Speaking against conscription, he said:

> "We cannot blame the English-born Canadians who have always placed the interests of their country above those of Canada if, in order to save England, they wish to have a bankrupt Canada, for their greatest dream will then be realized; they will go back home to spend the remaining years of their lives. As to us, for whom no country is waiting, we have at most nothing but sentiments of admiration, of sincere admiration, for France. We do not admit any duty except the obligation to devote our whole energy and power to the greatness and glory of Canada, and much as we are loyal to the British Crown and respect her flag, this will only be the case as long as our country has not grown wings large enough to take its flight and occupy the rank which its destiny has reserved for it. . .
> "It is high time that we in the Province of Quebec cease being the scapegoats and the Turk's heads of English Canada."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ALAS, FOR POLITICS, what bunk is worked off in your more or less sacred name!

• • • •

THE WOMEN of the West appear to vote as their husbands and fathers did before them.

• • • •

WHY NOT CONSCRIPT wealth when war prices have done as much for the children's bread?

• • • •

MUCH WOULD BE forgiven if the bolters in Parliament would voice their change of faith in fewer words.

• • • •

EVEN IN THE MATTER of athletes the Canadian soldiers are able to produce the best to be found at the front.

• • • •

FOOD CONTROLLER HANNA asks the public to cooperate in economizing food. Let the rich answer in the affirmative and it will be unanimous.

• • • •

CNOSCRIPTION may yet become a national obsession. There are those in Peterborough who would even conscript the cigarette of the poolroom habitue.

• • • •

IN OPEN FIGHTING, whether in the air, on land or on sea, the German is outclassed. All his so-called victories now are confined to his murderous subs.

• • • •

THE PARTISAN may desert his party in a pinch, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in a position to realize, but no hen has yet been induced to lay a cold storage egg.

• • • •

THE NEWSPAPER that attempts to divert public attention from the main duty of the hour by harping on the conscription of wealth, already assured, is simply playing at the old political game.

• • • •

A TORONTO PAPER says that Ontario is not a hater of the tongue or creed of Quebec. Then some of the papers in the Queen City have been grossly misunderstood, but perhaps they have been agitating all these years merely as a diversion.

CONSCRIPTION OF WEALTH AS A CHURCH PAPER SEES IT

(Christian Guardian)

The plea is made that along with the conscription of manhood there should go conscription of wealth, and it is urged that in all justice the first should not take place without some guarantee of the second. So far as this plea is simply a subterfuge to delay or avoid conscription of manhood we have no sympathy with it, but so far as it is based upon justice and equity it demands consideration.

But what does it mean? To some it is a very indefinite thing, which may mean little or nothing; but to others it has a very clear and distinct meaning. It means, in the first place, the conscription of war profits. Men argue that while these war years may be profitable to them, yet we must consider that they are only helping to wipe out the deficits of proceeding years. But this argument cannot be accepted as valid. It does not seem just, nor right, nor patriotic, that these terrible war years should be used to turn an unprofitable business into a profitable one, and we have a right to urge that excess war profits be taken over entirely for the country's needs.

To us it is a sad and lamentable fact to note the increase during these years of pleasure, automobiles and such like things. Surely this is not the way to win the war, or to prepare for the stern days which lie ahead. The man who in these days increases luxurious living and rolls up a large bank account belongs to a type of citizen of whom patriotism is ashamed. Better far the lad who left a $3,000 position to fight at $1.10 a day, and who now sleeps his long last sleep on Vimy Ridge, or he who wrote home the other day that his chum at home had had an increase in salary which should have been his own; but he added, "After all, I would sooner be here in France than in his place."

When we face these facts we find it hard to agree with Col. Thomas Cantley, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, when he told the members of that organization last week, in Winnipeg, that the manufacturer who had made money in munitions had "earned" it. To us it seems that today no true patriot in Canada can righteously "earn" more than a decent living. All else belongs to our country in its hour of need.

And conscription of wealth means even more than this. We cannot get away from the fact that if the country has a right to bid its sons give up their business, sunder their dearestest home ties, and face mutilation, disablement and death upon the battle-field, it has an infinitely greater right to take from any man 25 per cent., or 50 per cent., or even 100 per cent., of his accumulated wealth. So far we have touched only excess war profits, we have not even touched income, and, above all, we have not touched capital; but there is no escaping from the reasoning that the country which claims the right to order its sons to the battle-field has a very much greater right, if need be, to take over a portion of the wealth of its citizens. This means much. It means the right to take over part, or all, of the capital of our banks, our railways, and our great manufacturing corporations, as well as the capital of our wealthy individual citizens. Such a thing has never been done, but the logic is inescapable, and capital is surely a much less sacred thing than life.

This is what conscription of wealth means. Are we prepared for it? There is a general impression abroad that while our poor men freely give themselves or their sons, our rich men would never consent to surrender their property. We cannot agree with this view. We believe that patriotism runs through all ranks alike, and we believe that if tomorrow the Canadian Government found it necessary to conscript the wealth of our people, with few exceptions we should find men willing to surrender houses and lands, stocks and bonds, and all the treasures which constitute our wealth, and to surrender them just as freely and gladly as our brave boys have surrendered their noble young lives.

Wit and Wisdom

Percy—Poets are born, not made.
Pearl—I know, poor dear! I wasn't blaming you.

Billington—I understand his wife has money.
Stillington—He understands it, also.

"He's the meanest man living!"
"How so?"
"I told him that I bossed my wife, and he went and told her!"

"Is it necessary to enclose stamps?" asked the poet.
"More necessary even than to enclose poetry," responded the experienced author.

Mrs. Eager—Did Jane ever say anything to you about me?"
Mrs. Stinger—No, never. If Jane can't say anything good of a person, she never says anything.

"Did your husband use to write you poetry before you were married?"
"No; but he used to write me what we both thought was poetry."

"My dear, I wish you wouldn't be so very positive about everything. Remember, there are always two sides to every question."
"Well," answered her affectionate husband, "that's no reason why you should always be on the wrong side!"

Aunt—Won't you have another piece of cake, Tommy?
Tommy—No, thank you.
Aunt—You seem to be suffering from loss of appetite.
Tommy—It isn't loss of appetite. What I'm suffering from is politeness.

Mrs. Smith—Who is that woman you just bowed to?
Mrs. Jones—Oh, she's my next-door neighbor.
Mrs. Smith—But she didn't return your bow.
Mrs. Jones—No; she never returns anything.

He was of a benevolent disposition, and when, on his way home from business the other day, he met the young son of one of his neighbours bearing every indication of having been in a recent battle he said:

"Tommy, I'm very sorry to see you with a black eye."

But Tommy answered: "You go home and be sorry for your own little boy: he's got two!"

A carpenter, sent to make some repairs to a house, entered the apartment of the mistress of the house with his mate, and as he did so he heard her call to her servant:

"Jane, see that my new jewel-case is locked at once!"

Thereupon the carpenter removed his watch and chain and, handing them to his assistant, said, quite audibly:

"Bill, take these back to the shop! It seems this house isn't safe."

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition.

There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams:—

She says:—"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women." — Mrs. NELLIE WILLIAMS, 81 West 3d Street, New Albany, Ind.

Making the Kitchen Comfortable

Efficient housekeeping: Roomy kitchens, with big sunny windows filled with blooming plants and opening toward all out doors and comfortable rocking chairs, are nearly obsolete. Kitchen comfort nowadays means something very different from what it did when the kitchen was a living room and dining room as well as cook shop.

When we hear lectures or read about home interests much is said about "lost motion" or "economy of effort" which, after all is said and written, is merely up-to-date convenience.

No doubt active, nervous people with a quantity of condensed energy have a hard time running the engines of their home affairs without some one to direct them. They run out of fuel and their steam or motive power is gone. An architect must come in to say, "No wonder you are all run down and your house out of gear. Things are too old fashioned here. Everybody has their house remodeled in these days and their kitchens made smaller." As soon as somebody mentions "everybody," everyone wants to be in the procession and modern convenience gives place to old-fashioned comfort. Let 'em whisper a word—all these reformatory, scientific, hygenic, water cure, sanitation kitchen doctors do not always practice what they preach nor always take their own medicine.

The size of a kitchen has little to do with the comfort of the room. The number of steps one takes depends on the arrangement of the furniture and the utensils most often needed. Concentration of resources give an advantage of position. For instance: all the baking articles may be kept together, for they are used together and putting them away together is merely a habit.

It makes no difference if the most capable efficiency expert in the country plans your house with reference to saving you and your help steps, if you do not use your own brains to save your strength.

"Lost motion" is a phrase that looks well and sounds impressive when used to tell how perplexity and trouble result from not having things in their places. Tom Sawyer's aunt expressed it quite as neatly as any twentieth century writer when she said: "Tom, what you don't have in your head you must have in your heels." If you must go to the basement for anything consider if there is something to be carried down or something to be attended to other than the special duty you are bent on. If you must go upstairs accomplish as much as you can on that trip. A little program, in your mind, of things to be done, gets you through the day with half the fatigue you would feel if you did everything at random, just as it occurred.

This is the most practical way to systematize your household duties and is the right method to teach your children when they put their belongings away or "help mother" at the household tasks. It is better to use common sense ways with what you have than to improve to reach new standards and be like the man who introduced so much system into his business that he had to shut up shop in order to look after his card indexes and accounts.

Mrs. Malaprop Tells About It

Oh, yes, Miss Missem, we had a most hinjoyous time at Mrs. Matem's Garden Party. The Matems' back yard onjoins the river; there is only one row of houses between and you can smell the mud quite plain and the singing of the muskeeters is lovely; and the hatmosphere is most embracing. So we all had very consuming apetites, specially that Bill Jones. He had six helpings of boiled ham; really I was most ashamed to take another helping myself, although I only had four. But that ham was good. Mrs. Matem got it at Paskins Store, and she only paid 20c a pound for it. And those sweet mustard pickles was magnificent, only Bill Jones eat in the dish and so there wasn't enough to go round, and he got the biggest share 'cause nobody else would eat 'em after he had picked 'em off his pants.

After supper, Mr. Matem got the fellows what wasn't too full to help him Paris Green his pertaters, and we ladies went and give 'em good advice. And you ought to 'eve seen those bugs curl up. That is awful good Paris Green Paskins sells. Why, those bugs started to sing "Now I lay me down to die" as soon as they saw the package. Well, I felt so empty-like after workin' so hard that I had to go and get a snack, so I got a dish of cream custard with apricots, and it was so delepshus that I felt like more, only I didn't like to be greedy, seein' as I had 'ad five helpins. Mrs. Matem says Paskins only charges 15c a tin for the custard and 15c a pound for the apricot. Well, everybody had a most endurable time, time. But Bill Jones made hisself sick eatin' chocolates, and I ain't surprised, 'cause they had a new kind with a sort of soft crisp fillin' with nuts, and Mrs. Matem says Paskins only asks 35c a pound for them.

Eh! Where is Paskins?

Lawks! I thought everybody knew. It's that store on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer with the nice plants and ferns outside.

Eh! Oh, yes; they are on the Phone. It's 217.

A PEACE WOULD MEAN DISASTER

IF WAR ENDED BEFORE OBJECT OF THE ALLIES WAS ATTAINED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

GLASGOW, June 29. — Discussing the question of peace today, Premier Lloyd George said if the war should be concluded a single hour before the Allied Powers reached the end which they set out to attain at the beginning of hostilities, it would be the greatest disaster that ever befell mankind.

The Premier said Russia would regain her strength at a bound and become mightier than ever. The distractions postponed complete victory, but made victory more sure and more complete than ever and of a higher quality.

CAPES AND BICYCLES

Curiously enough, the cape is one of the articles which came in with the bicycling pastime, and has needed very little alteration in pattern since. Many have tried various novel forms of weather protection awheel, but most have at last returned to the primitive cape as the simplest and best. It is by no manner of means an ideal garment, for to undertake a lengthy journey swathed in a macintosh cape is not to encourage one's temper to a cheerful mood; but we have nothing to beat it, nor is there known any method to improve the design. True, there are too many of the "skimp" kind about.

Removing Dirt From Autos

Grease or oil is a hard thing to get off an automobile body, particularly if it has had a chance to dry. If necessary either gasoline or kerosene may be used to remove such deposits, but gasoline is the most advisable as it evaporates quickly, and therefore will not collect dust. Road tar that has not been allowed to dry can be removed by local applications of a mixture of lards or butter with a small quantity of salt. Take a small amount of it on the finger and rub it on the tar spot lightly so that there will be no scratching. This should loosen the tar and allow it to be washed off immediately.

Female Emigrants

As a result of the restrictions on the emigration of males of military age from the United-Kingdom, the emigrant parties which now leave Dublin twice a week are largely composed of young women and children. They are setting out from that port at the rate of about one hundred a week, the majority bound for the United States. Many who hoped to settle down in the States are returning, denied admission for a variety of reasons.

MRS. MULOCK TO GET ALIMONY

COURT ORDERS HUSBAND TO PAY HER $3000 A MONTH.

TORONTO, June 29.—Master-in-Ordinary Mr. George Alcorn, to whom was relegated the duty of fixing the amount of alimony to be paid by Cawthra Mulock to his wife, Mrs. Adele Baldwin Mulock, following a judgment in the courts in the wife's favor on April 30th, yesterday issued his report at Osgoode Hall. The Master-in-Ordinary finds that the defendant should pay plaintiff $3,000 per month and that the latter give credit to her husband as against this amount all the income she might receive from her marriage settlement, which is to be credited against the next payments due. Mrs. Mulock is also asked to give credit in like manner for any income which she may receive as dividends or otherwise upon 1.160 shares of stock in the Eastern Construction Company, now held by her, or any moneys or securities substituted therefor.

FACTIONS ARE EVEN IN SENATE

THE NEW APPOINTMENTS GIVE THE PARTIES 39 MEMBERS EACH.

OTTAWA, June 29.—Lieut.-Col. Geo. W. Fowler, M.P. for King's and Albert, New Brunswick, who is now overseas with a battalion which he raised in his own Province, has been appointed to the Senate, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Senator Baird. His appointment creates another vacancy in the Commons membership, bringing the total number of vacancies up to 21. The Senate standing is now 39 Liberals and 39 Conservatives, with nine vacancies still to fill. The remaining vacancies, it is expected, will be filled within the next few days.

The Government has also appointed Gilbert W. Ganong, ex-M.P. for Charlotte, N.B., to succeed Hon. Josiah Wood as Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick. Mr. Ganong was a member of the Commons from 1907 to 1908. He is a member of the confectionery firm of Ganong Bros., St. Stephen, N.B.

Save the Food and Serve the Empire!

The Average Canadian Family Wastes Enough to Feed a Soldier

"The Kitchen must help as well as the Workshop and the Trenches"
Lloyd George.

INTELLIGENT economy in the kitchen can do much to prevent the threatened world famine—can counteract the effect of high prices—and can replace growing debt with systematic saving.

Careful investigations show that before the war the average British family wasted 25% of their food—and we Canadians were even more extravagant.

This waste is not in a few big things, but in many little ones, each, we used to think, too small to bother about—such as careless peeling of vegetables and fruit—failure to make good use of dripping and "left-overs"—and such others as will occur to every thrifty housekeeper.

For the Empire's sake as well as your own, hunt up and cut out these leaks! You'll be helping to relieve the food shortage—saving your own money—and putting yourself in a position to buy Canadian War Savings Certificates and help win the war.

War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, to be repaid in three years at full face value. They cost $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, at all Money Order Post-Offices and Banks, thus yielding over 5% Interest. Should you need it, you can get your money back at any time. 19

A REAL HOLD-UP

The quietude of Lindsay has been disturbed by a report of an alleged hold-up on one of its main thoroughfares, and so far the police have only a suspicion as to who the guilty parties are.

Two young men with their lady friends were, it is said, stopped by two soldiers at a late hour on Tuesday night and a demand made for money.

The parties so accosted have given Chief Short no particulars, but constable Parks, it is said, was notified of the affair at once, and made investigation.

Two members of the Arsenal Guard who are in the County Jail for remaining off duty are mentioned in connection with the affair.

Light and Power will be shut off on Sunday morning, July 1st from 6 to 8 a.m., for repairs.

Good flannels and good soldiers do not shrink.

ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Edgar Alcombrack Held for Hearing on $500 Bail.

Edgar Alcombrack was charged before Acting Police Magistrate H. Rush with having on Wednesday committed an indecent assault on a young girl in Nicholls Park, and at the request of Crown Attorney Hatton the case was enlarged until next Thursday.

On Wednesday evening last the caretaker of the park reported to the police that he had frightened a fellow away who had tried to abuse a young girl at the park, and after getting a good description of the fellow and later on obtaining a statement from the intended victim, the police went on a chase which resulted in the arrest.

At the police court the defendant refused to plead or elect through his counsel, G. N. Gordon. The prisoner was admitted to bail of $500.

No Daylight Saving Until Next Year

BILL PROPOSED BY SIR GEORGE FOSTER TO BE HELD UP.

OTTAWA, June 29. — The daylight saving scheme which Sir George Foster has introduced into Parliament will not likely be effective this year. It is still in the embryonic stage. The bill has been presented and given a formal first reading, but it has never been discussed on the merits or advanced further. Like other measures it must give place to conscription. As it is a summer time proposition, and very uncertain as to the date of being adopted, there seems little chance of it being put in operation this year, assuming that the bill does get the approval of the House and Senate.

In the United States the daylight saving bill, amended to take effect next year, passed the Senate without discussion, and was sent to the house. Under the bill all timepieces will be turned forward one hour, beginning the last Sunday in April, and continuing until the last Sunday in September.

CAMERON WILL ALL GOES TO SON; WIDOW OBJECTS

CASE NOW BEING HEARD IN LINDSAY PROBATE COURT.

The Cameron will case came up before his Honor Judge McMillian in Lindsay yesterday, the principal witness heard being Mr. Jno. Cunnings, of Oakwood, who had drawn up two or more wills for the late Archibald Cameron, of Oakwood.

It appears that the major part of the estate was left to the one son, Mr. John Cameron, of Oakwood, and the widow of the deceased and grandchildren have entered suit to have the will annulled or upset.

Amongst the prominent witnesses and counsels in court were: Dr. Jukes Johnston, Chief Coroner, Toronto; Dr. Clarke, head of the Toronto General Hospital; Mr. Hartley Dewart, K.C., Toronto, who is acting as counsel for Miss Clare Brett Martin, who is interested in the case. The latter lady is one of the few lady lawyers in Ontario, and it might be stated that she graduated the same years as Mr. L. V. O'Connor, Lindsay. Mr. O'Connor is solicitor with the executors, and will give evidence. Mr. A. M. Fulton acting as his counsel.

Mr. T. Stewart represents the widow and grandchildren, and had drawn up a will for the deceased also. A daughter of the deceased, who resides in British Columbia, had a will made by her father, which will also play an important part in the case.

The estate is valued at from $30,000 to $40,000.

PLIGHT OF THE OFFICERS WHO ARE NOW IN ENGLAND

Why so Many Commanders of Broken up Battalions Find it Necessary to Return to Canada.

(Douglas S. Robertson in Toronto Telegram).

LONDON, June 12.—England contains many dissatisfied Canadian officers to-day, and no doubt many have arrived in Canada with grievances. These are the senior officers, who, there being no vacancies for them, have under the now more stringently enforced regulations, either to revert to lieutenancies or go home.

It does seem hard, and it is hard, that captains, majors and lieutenant-colonels who have recruited enthusiastically in Canada, and rallied thousands of men to the colors should on arrival find themselves in such plight. Many a colonel has told me his story. After gathering what he deemed with proper pride "one of the finest battalions in Canada" about him, spent much of his own hard cash on it, learned to know his men personally, and generally put his whole soul into the work, he is told that his battalion must be broken up for drafts, and stands broken-heartedly by as company after company is sent off to reinforce other regiments.

"—And No Place To Go."

As for himself, failing some job at the base, there is only one finale. After a brief sojourn in England, perhaps a two weeks' tour of the front, if he be lucky, and a taste of the real thing in the trenches, he must go home. A lieutenant-colonel cannot become a subaltern.

With the majors it is scarcely less hard. A lieutenancy is no small step down in pay, and for married men with families a positive financial barrier forbids the reversion. Majors, too, are generally on the elderly side for lieutenants' work. So they, too, unless one of the rare base jobs comes their way, must, after an interval, take ship back to Canada.

For captains there is less excuse. Most of them are youthful enough for subaltern duties, though in the case of captains with families the consequent reduction in pay is also a serious matter.

Would Revert To Fight

"They put it up to me," declared a Toronto captain not long over with a battalion which had been broken up. "They told me I would have to revert to lieutenant or go home. Well, I told them that I would revert if they could assure me that I would be sent to France at once, but they couldn't. Now, scores of lieutenants are waiting to go over, and some have been waiting months. I guess I will go home. I can't afford the long reduction in pay." This captain is a young married man with a wife and two children.

Hard To Go Back Home

"Just picture me going back to Canada, back to the town where I recruited a battalion, and facing the mothers whose sons they thought would be under me at the front! What am I to tell these people? What will they think of me for not going to France?" Such was the lament of one lieutenant-colonel I talked to. A major with a family, a school teacher who works hard for his living is another example. Financial reasons make it impossible for this man to revert. And yet he hates to return to his home town and be upbraided as a slacker. These are examples. Many of these officers deserve sympathy. And yet surely at this late day they must have known what was likely to be their fate. For long past almost every new battalion has been broken up and its senior officers perforce stranded.

Be Considerate

Canadians should be considerate, at least, of these older officers, who are returning. Don't be critical until you know the exact circumstances. To tell of colonels and even majors going to the front as privates is absurd, and people who argue thus don't know how nonsensical their contentions sound to those in the trenches.

Finally, remember that spry young fellows are what they want out in France as lieutenants. And who are better suited for the job than the scores of Canadian boys in France rising from the ranks every week to don Sam Brownes?

THEIR ANNUAL OUTING.

St. John's Choir Held Picnic At Burleigh.

The annual outing of St. John's choir was to Burleigh Falls yesterday when about a hundred choiraters and friends boarded the "Stony Lake" at 8.30 a.m. and enjoyed a trip to Burleigh. The committee in charge, Warden W. F. Johnson, Mr. H. W. Morphet, and Mr. R. J. Devey had made excellent arrangements for the comfort of the party, assisted by the weather man who contributed a beautiful day.

Mine host and Mrs. Darcy provided a dainty luncheon, excellently served, and Coleman Bros. did equally well with the supper served on board on the return trip.

Mr. Harry Long sprung a surprise on the party by handing round baskets of Northern Spy apples, a gift greatly enjoyed.

After exploring the beautiful scenes around Burleigh, fishing and snapshotting, the choir gathered on the verandah of the hotel and sang "The Marvellous Work" from Haydn's "Creation." The races were held at Young's Point, most of the contestants winning prizes, which included a canoe, a frying pan, and a coal scuttle, (all glass).

The large number present of the "Greek Slave" company furnished many numbers of that delightful opera, and with other singing and dancing there was not a dull moment in the holiday. Hearty thanks and cheers were given for the committee, the caterers, and to Captain Scollard and crew, a delightful day ending with the singing of the National Anthem.

A special car will be attached to the C.P.R. train, due to arrive Monday a.m. at 11.30 and will be met by a delegation of Peterborough cyclists. St. Onge, the Montreal rider, and former trick cyclist is already here, having arrived last night. Harry Richard, C.W.A. official, will arrive Monday a.m. to act as referee. Bicycle Bill Grachal, the big bicycle booster is coming from Ottawa. Mr. George Brayden, of Weston, Ont., the noted touring cyclist will act as one of the officials. Peterborough fans are to be treated to regular bicycle races. Ever since the London, Ont., races on Empire Day, where bicycle racing certainly had a come-back and the Peterborough racers were first announced, riders have been training, and now it is up to the public to encourage this wonderful sport. The Health Society have been presented with [illegible] fine prizes for the races and it is hoped we will be favoured with good weather. The Swift Cycle Club, of Toronto, have entered four of their crack riders; the Salem Club three riders, and the Classic Club, of Toronto fame, two entries. Together with the Toronto riders the boys from Peterborough and vicinity will make up a fine field of riders. There has been a two-mile race for Peterborough boys of 18 years and under added to the list of events, making three bicycle races on the card. Fred St. Onge, the former trick cyclist, now a traveller from the house of A. E. Bregent, of Montreal, who presented the $50.00 bicycle will do his tramp bicycle act on the track in front of the Grand Stand.

The following Toronto riders will positively start in the big five-mile open race and two-mile handicap:

Doc Morton, Fred McCarthy, R. E. Coupland, L. Leeson, J. Pidgeon, H. Hoskins, S. Wicks, Wm. Taylor, H. Lewis, E. Nichols, W. Bulger, E. Saitz, Fred Terry, George Watkin, H. [illegible] of Herb Macdonald's bicycle club.

Swift Cycle Club — Jas. Martin, Neal Russell, Tom Ford, Roy Hunter.

Salem Cycle Club — L. Scarlatto, Geo. Wright, Ray Goldsmith, Harry Martin.

Classic Cycle Club — Norman Webster, Mark Hannam.

Entries for the races, which are held under C.W.A. sanction, positively close Saturday evening. Entries can be made at C. R. Bank's Garage.

Another big bicycle race, a "Tour around Peterborough," headed by Fred St. Onge, of Montreal, will start from Bank's Garage Saturday evening at 7 p.m.—slow race, just a social ride—all riders of bicycles invited. At the recent Montreal race 417 riders turned out. Lady cyclists are cordially invited to join in the ring. Ride a bicycle.

With the addition of a gold watch which has been donated as First Prize in the two-mile handicap open race, it has necessitated the re-arranging of the prize list as follows:

Five-mile open—First: Pope bicycle, valued at $50.00, presented by A. E. Bregent, Montreal; second, scarf pin; third, pair of Dunlop bicycle tires.

Two-mile handicap, open — First prize, gold watch; second prize, scarf pin; third prize, bag of flour.

The arrival in Brazilian waters of an American Pacific fleet squadron, comanded by Rear-Admiral William Caperton, reveals that the American navy has taken over the responsibility for the patrol of that region against German raiders.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2— By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

IS NOW PROPRIETOR AND EDITOR OF PEMBROKE STANDARD.

Mr. Thomas W. Whalley, formerly managing director of The Review, recently purchased the Pembroke Standard, a live weekly, and the paper was issued for the first time last Wednesday under his management. The Standard was founded in 1867, so that it celebrates its fiftieth anniversary the same year as the nation itself. It is a Conservative organ, and this week's issue takes up the cudgels vigorously in favor of conscription. Mr. J. F. C. Whalley, formerly editorial writer on The Review, has an excellent historical sketch of the confederation of the Canadian Provinces in 1867.

Morning Sittings Urged

Sir Robert Borden moved that after next Tuesday there be morning sittings of the house. Sir Wilfrid Laurier suggested that the date be postponed until after the close of the conscription debate. Sir Robert said the government were very anxious to facilitate business, and for this reason he was introducing the proposal. He asked if the Liberal would give any idea when the debate might finish. Sir Wilfrd promised to let him know to-morrow, and on that understanding the motion was dropped.

You Are Paying For It Anyway

YOU have a hard day. Weary, nerves frazzled, you reach home.

Nothing would suit you better than to stay right home.

But you go out.

You go to the cabaret. You eat when you don't want to eat. You are away from home when you want to be at home.

You try to satisfy your music hunger with a hand-out around the corner. That helps a little. What you really want, though, is a music feast in your own home.

In shirt sleeves, downright comfort, your own piano or player piano or talking machine and the world of music from which to choose the music to fit your mood.

And don't think you can't have a piano or player piano or talking machine in your home. You're entitled to one. You're paying for it anyway. Yes, paying for it—but not getting it.

That once or twice each week that you go music-hunting costs as much, maybe more, than it would cost to own an instrument.

A really good piano or player piano or talking machine can be purchased at a very reasonable price and the payments can be so divided that your music-hunting money will more than take care of them.

CANADIANS IN SUBURBS OF LENS

CANADIAN TROOPS NOW IN DU MULIN, SUBURB OF LENS

Position Won This Morning With Slight Losses Owing to Careful Scouting---Huns Were Outwitted.

(By Stwart Lyons)

Canadian Headquarters in France, July 30.—By minor operations last night the Canadian front was advanced in the region to the east of Reservoir Hill into Du Moulin, the only suburb lying between Reservoir Hill and Lens. The losses of the Canadians were inconsiderable, and the advance gives them possession of a stretch of difficult country extending about 1,000 yards north and south, with a depth easterly from our former front of over 400 yards.

The gain this morning was made as a result of careful scouting. By close observation it was learned that to lessen the heavy losses from our artillery, which has been pounding Cite du Moulin steadily for the past two weeks, the enemy withdrew the men holding the line amongst its ruined houses during the day, and manned the positions only at night, when he believed, from former experience of Canadian methods, that an attack in force was likely to be made.

That was good tactics, but the obvious method of catching the enemy napping was to send an attacking party in daylight while our bombardment was still in progress. This was done. The range of our guns was increased as the men went over, and so cut the enemy's outposts off from their supports.

With ample equipment of machine guns, our men occupied the western part of Cite du Moulin and reconstructed the enemy positions so that they will afford a fairly good shelter. There has been as yet no serious counter-attack on the northern sector of our line.

Early this morning a large quantity of gas was projected into the enemy's trenches between Hill 70 and Cite St. Laurent. Heavy thunderstorms have interfered with the progress of trench destruction by our artillery.

Cavalry Captures German Submarine

Boat Was Stranded and Went Ashore Near Calais.

Paris, July 30. — The German submarine that ran ashore on the French coast west of Calais Thursday was not destroyed when its crew set fire to the gasoline tank, but was captured by a troop of Belgian cavalry. The unusual feat recalls the exploit of the French Hussars, who, in 1794, captured an icebound Dutch fleet, according to a despatch from Calais.

The stranded submarine was first sighted by a customs officer. He called upon some Belgian horsemen who were exercising nearby to come to his help. They rode down the beach, the message reports, surrounded the U-boat, and made prisoners of the crew, while the atonished conntryside watched the acomplishment of the feat.

BRITISH CRUISER IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED TORPEDOED BY HUNS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 30. — The British cruiser Ariadne, eleven thousand tons, has been torpedoed and sunk, it is officially announced.

Thirty-eight members of the Ariadnes crew were killed by the explosion. All the other sailors were saved.

LAWYER SAYS PACKING HOUSE COMMISSION IS PREJUDICED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, July 30. — Chairman Henderson and Accountants Brodie, of Montreal, and Clarkson, Toronto, composing the Government's commission to investigate the profits of the packing houses, met at the city hall this morning, but adjourned without taking evidence, probably for two weeks, when the examination of the packing companies' books may be expected to be completed.

Louis Heyd, barrister, announced that he represented the public, but when he learned that Mr. Clarkson's father had audited the books of the Davies Company ten years ago he announced his withdrawal from the case, refusing to be associated with a commission even so remotely connected with the Davies Company.

THE SPEED LAW MUCH VIOLATED ON THE STREETS

A great number of complaints were received by the police yesterday of breaches of the law governing the speed of autos. Even some of the complainants complained to Police Magistrate Dumble.

There was hardly a section of the city that did not register a complaint in this regard, and some have sent in the numbers to the police.

On Charlotte Street West, a young lad who looked too small to be in charge of a car had a smaller child sitting on his knee holding the steering apparatus. The zig-zag course that was pursued caused thrills in many a mother's heart. If the owner of the car wants evidence there is plenty of it to be had.

Another offence that is causing a lot of trouble is against the new traffic regulation. Auto owners forget that the new law requires them to protect the man on their right—in other words, the auto to your right has the right of way. Don't forget this, as you may be the first one to get fined for not obeying. The police think that a few fines will soon cause a little attention to the clause.

Many of the car owners parked their autos on the market square on Saturday night, and the plan will work out splendidly and be a great convenience to those who desire to do lot of shopping or whose business requires spending any very great time in the business section.

Ontario Man Bags 36 Hun Airships

He Has Already Won the Military Cross and the D. S. O.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France, July 30.—During the past two days the artillery action on the front has increased in volume, until at times it has reached the dimensions of drumfire. The enemy's retaliation to our bombardment has on several accasions been extremely prompt and heavy. The object of his artillery has been to divert the attention of our guns. Efforts of enemy working parties to restore their defences have been prevented by a steady trnch mortar bombardmnt. In this, as in other branches of the artillery, there has been a remarkable development. Some of the trench mortar projectiles now in use have almost as much high explosive in them as an ordinary fifteen-inch howitzer shell. The destruction wrought by them in the trenches is very great.

Gas Attack West of Lens.

There was another heavy projection of gas into the German trenches west of Lens yesterday, with but little retaliation.

The spurt of the enemy's aerial activity on this part of the front has ceased, and only a few of his planes have tried to cross our lines. This result has been brought about by hard fighting on the part of the splendid young fellows of the aerial service. One of the most successful aviators in this area is an Ontario man who has a record of thirty-six German machines brought down, most of them from such a height as to insure their destruction. He has already won the Military Cross and the D.S.O.

MAY NOW ENLIST MEN NOT UP TO HIGHSTANDARD

FOR FORESTRY AND RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION UNITS.

It has been published in orders from Ottawa that in cases where men already enlisted for the infantry or other branches of the services requiring the highest medical standard are found not to be up to the standard, but equal to the standard required by the Forestry and Railway Construction Drafts, transfers may be made direct to these units, instead of first transferring such men to Special Service Companies.

Entring the States

Requests have been received at the Militia headquarters at Ottawa for officers and other ranks of the Canadian forces to enter the United States in uniform. The regulations in this respect already issued are in no way affected by the events which have transpired in the United States, and the entry of the U. S. in the war does not alter the situation. Instructions are being again issued that unless specially permitted, no Canadian troops are to be allowed to go to the States.

KAISER'S PLOT TO START WAR

LONDON TIMES HAS FINAL PROOF THAT HE IS RESPONSIBLE.

London, July 30.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—The Times' revelation of German inspiration of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia which brought about the present world war has created a profound impression. The Times commenting editorially on the revelation, says:

"It would be hard to exaggerate its gravity. The enemy, for three years has been posing as the innocent and guiltless victim of entente perfidy. The new chancellor, Dr. Michaelis, still points to the events of July, 1914 to prove the righteousness of their cause and to whitewash his predecessor. But if the meaning of the meeting of July 5, 1914, was what we are told it was, the chief military and civilian powers gathered together in a time of profound peace tranquility, under the presidency of the kaiser, against the peace of Europe. In the face of this allegation, what becomes of the German case which pacifist fanatics and pacifist intriguers and pacifist-paid emissaries plead in her behalf? What becomes of the pretence that Germany was ignorant of the Austrian note to Serbia, and what

KING INSPECTS U.S. SOLDIERS

DELIGHTED WITH SHOWING MADE BY AMERICAN TROOPS.

London, July 30.—King George, accompanied by Queen Mary and Princess Mary, went by motor to the Borden Camp and inspected the American troops quartered at the outlying camps. His Majesty was delighted with the soldiery appearance of the men. A court circular issued last night from the royal pavilion at Aldershot says:

"The King, accompanied by the Queen, Princess Mary and Field Marshal the Duke of Connaught, drove to the American camp at Borden this morning and inspected the regiment of engineers of the United States army command of Col. Charles H. McKinstry."

The King's visit to the American troops was made the occasion of an interesting ceremony. The British officers in command of the district met the King's party and presented the American officers. The American engineers were under arms and were drawn up on three sides of a square. After introductions the King briefly addressed the men, welcoming them to England. The Americans then marched past carrying the Stars and Stripes and their regimental flag, the King saluting as they passed.

BRITISH USING GAS ON GERMANS

ARE NOW ABLE TO GIVE FOE A TASTE OF HIS OWN MEDICINE.

London, July 30.—The representative of Reuter's at the headquarters of the British army in France, telegraphing on Saturday, says:—

The week has been one of intense heat, furious gunfire, incessant reconnaissance work and much sharp local fighting. There has been tremendous artillery firing north of Armentieres and near Lens, causing the Huns great anxiety and heavy casualties. The wind has been generally favorable for the use of gas, and we profited by this condition to repay the German devilment to the fullest exent. Even during the nigh artillery activity diminished but slightly, increasing to its most intense fury at dawn.

The enemy shelled our rear communications at intervals with high velocity guns, but his firing on our battery was rather promiscuous, being chiefly carried out during the darkness. Our counter-battery work was most successful, direct hits being obtained on dozens of gun pits, while numerous amunition dumps were exploded.

The infantry of both armies were unusually active in raiding, and the fact that the Germans are thus indulging in a species of warfare which they dislike shows the anxiety of the enemy to learn what is happening opposite to him.

ONLY PATROL ENCOUNTERS ON BATTLE LINE IN FRANCE

THERMOMETER AT 95 MARKS THE HOTTEST DAY SO FAR THIS YEAR

After a few days of comparatively cool conditions the heat is again here. Today the thermometer was up to 95. This is the highest point this summer. Last night was a particularly warm night, the lowest figure reached being 74 degrees. This date last year (which came on a Sunday) was also a scorcher, having 96 as the highest and 76 the lowest during the 24 hours. Sunday was also a very warm day, having 90 degrees as the highest figure, and with an excessive amount of humidity in the air. Rain, .18 of an inch.—W.P.

Everyone who owned an auto was out in it yesterday and the river was filled with bathers. The heat during the forenoon was suffocating when the sky was overcast and the air damp. When the sun came out the temperature became more tolerable. Church attendance morning and evening showed a marked falling off and in nearly all the places of worship the services were made brief out of consideration for the audiences.

There is no relief in sight. Tomorrow may be even hotter than today.

BIBLE BANNED FROM U.S. SCHOOLS

CHURCH AND STATE ARE SEPARATE IN THAT COUNTRY.

Brantford, July 30.—H. W. Foght of the bureau of education, Washington, D.C., who has been giving a series of lectures at the School for Rural Leadership in session at the Ontario Agricultural College during the week, gave his last lecture yesterday.

In answer to the inquiry as to whether the Bible was taught in the public schools of the United States, the speaker said that at the national convention in 1798 it was decided that church and state should be separated. This has saved the United States from much embarrassment, but at the same time it has not always been beneficial. He was of the opinion that the Bible and the Lord's Prayer should be used in the public schools. Morality has been taught from books, but this has been a failure. Where the teacher has been of high quality the spirit of morality and religion has not been absent.

Asked about the system of examinations in his country, Mr. Foght stated that they were away ahead of Canada in this regard. The teacher was given much room for initiative. He said he was not enamored of examinations, as they frequently defeated their own end. There are excellencies in the educational systms of each country, and if the United States and Canada could profit from one another it would be good for both.

During the course of his addresses the speaker remarked, incidentally, that his government was loaning him to the government of Saskatchewan for four months in order that he might look over the educational system of that province and make any changes it might seem wise to adopt.

NO UNIFORMS FOR TOY SOLDIERS

IRISH ORDER AFFECTS COMPANIES RAISED TO MAKE TROUBLE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, July 30.—General Mahon, Commander-in-Chief in Ireland, has issued an order forbidding the wearing of uniforms of military character except by the State forces and the carrying of weapons except for lawful employment or pastime. The order will immediately affect volunteer bodies formed in recent years.

POLES REFUSE TO TAKE OATH

TROUBLE IN WARSAW OVER ARREST OF MILITARY LEADERS.

London, July 30.—Big street demonstrations have occurred at Warsaw as a result of the arrest of Gen. Pilsudski, of the Polish Legion, and other leaders in the movement against imposing an oath of fidelity to the Austro-German sovereigns upon the Polish army. Many of the legionaries have refused to take such an oath.

The Polish Council of State has protested to the Governor-General against the arrests as unjustifiable, and has declared that only the speediest possible establishment of a genuine Polish Government and army will quiet public opinion.

Gen. von Beseler, the German Governor-General, replied, refusing the release of the Poles, and declaring that the German authorities had proof that Gen. Pilsudski was organizing an armed movement against Germany. Vienna despatches indicate that Gen. Pilsudski's following is far greater than the German reports give any impression of, and include a large part of the political Left.

Trainman Killed When Trains Collide

Two Others Are Injured on the Canadian Northern Road.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, July 30.—Three trainmen were injured, one fatally in a collision on the Canadian Northern, near St. Prosper, Champlain county, today. The passenger train from Shawinigan collided with a freight.

MANY LIVES ARE LOST IN FIRE IN WESTERN LOGGING CAMPS

Eight Known to Have Perished and Many Are Missing---Men and Teams Caught in Valley and Unable to Escape Over Mountain

Fernie, B.C., July 30.—Eight men are known to have perished and a number are missing in a fire that swept the Spruce River valley fifteen miles north of here on Saturday afternoon. Sixty-odd men and some twenty teams were trapped in Camp Fourteen of the Elk Lumber Company, which is situated in a blind valley, and their flight over the uneven mountain side was most difficult.

Eight bodies have been picked up in the rear of the fire. Nick Ruscovich, a Russian, was found alive, his eyes burnt sightless and suffering inconceivable agony. His body was badly burned, but he bravely urged the rescuers to leave him and help men he knew to be beyond him. Without assistance he walked to the emergency hospital and was later brought to Fernie, where his death is hourly expected.

Many, on reaching points of safety, were found to be temporarily demented from the shock.

Millions of feet of logs, the logging railway, and the bush camp building, together with equipment, horses and supplies are a total loss. Ten fatalities is the lowest estimate. The fire is now considerably checked by the heavy showers that fell last night, but if the wind rises the blaze will be revived.

Nothing of Importance on British Front --- Artillery Battle Continues Between French and Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 30.—There was nothing of special importance last night on the British front. There were small encounters between our own and enemy's patrols in the neighborhood of Bullecourt and Acheville.

Roumanians Victorious.

London, July 30.—A statement issued by the Roumanian war office says, on Friday between the valleys of Casin and Putna we again advanced some kilometres and occupied the villages of Seveia, Dragoslav, Negrilesti, Toposti, Valeasres and Colacul. We took more prisoners and some motor batteries and war material.

The Traitor's Fate.

The Times correspondent on the southwest Russian front says General Kerniloff is executing deserters by wholesale.

Some Artillery Fire.

Paris, July 30.—The night was marked by rather violent artillery action notably in the sectors of Braye-En-Laonnais and Epine de Chevregny in the region of the monument at Hurtebise and on both banks of the river Meuse. Surprise attavks by the enemy at various points at front were repulsed by our fire.

BLAMES FRENCH FOR CONFLICT

GERMAN CHANCELLOR DECLARES ALLIES ARE SET ON CONQUEST.

Berlin, July 30. — Dr. George Michaelis, the German Imperial Chancellor, on Saturday summoned a number of newspaper men, to whom he declared:

"The speech of David Lloyd George, the British Premier, at Queen's Hall, London, and the recent debate in the British House of Commons, again have proved with indisputable clearness that Great Britain does not desire peace by agreement and understanding, but only a continuation of the war which means the enslavement of Germany to the arbitrary violence of our enemies.

"Proof of this may be seen in the fact that Sir Edward Carson (member of the British war cabinet) recently declared in Dublin that negotiations with Germany could begin only after the retirement of German troops beyond the Rhine. In response to a question put by Commoner Joseph King, A Bonar Law, the spokesman of the British Government in the House of Commons, modified this declaration by fixing the standpoint of the British Government as being that if Germany wanted peace she first of all must declare herself willing to evacuate the occupied territories."

ALLEGED GERMAN SPY DISAPPEARS FROM HAUNTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, July 30.—Nikolai Lenine peace agitator and alleged German spy, has disappeared from his usual haunts in Petrograd and his whereabouts are not known to the police authorities. Reports previously circulated as to his movements are declared to be untrue.

DUTCH VESSELS.

Amsterdam, July 30.—A German submarine sank five Dutch fishing vessels eighteen miles from the Dutch coast between Scheveningen and Ymuiden.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH MONDAY, JULY 30, 1917

ONTARIO'S DUTY.

"Where's Ontario going to line up? There's a terrible responsibility in this election. You've got to stand straight for the flag. You know what it means to the world. You know how your men flocked to it three years ago in all its pristine freshness. Are you going to desert it now that it's a blood-stained flag — stained with the life-blood of thirty thousand of your men? Far better that you should all go to those trenches and gather the shots of the enemy to your bosoms if by so doing your bodies make a path over which the democracies of the world shall travel to a greater and a grander freedom than the world has ever known. I'll put my faith in the testing time in the grand old Province of Ontario. 'I know in whom I have believed,' and in you I'll put my trust until the ultimate triumph is attained."—Dr. Michael Clark (Liberal), at Hamilton.

THE CALL FOR HELP.

LIEUT. McRUER, who is home from the front on sick leave, was asked by a Toronto newspaper man if he had any message from the boys in the trenches.

"Yes," was the answer. "They are wondering when reinforcements are coming over to help them out. They are in need of all the men they can get."

There you have it. The Canadian soldiers are not concerning themselves over such matters as are occupying the minds of the statesmen at Ottawa who hold in their hands the temporal destiny of the nation's fighting forces. They are not insisting on a holiday, even those who have been nearly three years on active service. They do not ask for more pay. The men in the hospitals have no word of complaint of the treatment they receive. They find no fault with the army rations, with their equipment or with their clothing, as some self-seeking politicians at home wish us to believe. Their hearts are united in one purpose, the winning of the war.

But they need men to help them. Day by day the Canadian ranks are growing thinner, and there are none to take the vacant places. Recruiting in Canada has practically stopped. Unless there is a change for the better, it is only a question of time when the Canadian divisions will be eliminated and this country will cease to be a factor in the war.

"Send us help" is the call from the trenches. "Do not see us stuck" was the message Capt. Burnham brought back after a personal visit to the Canadians at the front. There are two parties in this country today, one set on answering the call of the soldiers, the other intent upon withholding all further aid. Which of these parties is to be tolerated by the people on whose behalf the soldiers, now calling for assistance, have made the sacrifice?

NO EXCUSE FOR QUITTING.

THERE ARE Liberals in Peterborough who carefully and in private express the opinion that Canada has done enough in the war and should now slacken her efforts to give the American soldiers a chance.

A citizen who is assailed on the street by a gang of hoodlums does the best that is in him for his own protection. When his neighbors gather for his rescue, he does not, as a rule, retire to a distance to watch the progress of the fray.

These Liberals also believe, or profess to do so, that the voluntary system can yet be made a success. Probably they base their contention on the hope that the organs of their party may yet be induced to cease from discouraging enlistments by assailing, falsely and maliciously, the party in power.

THE WAGES OF THE EDUCATED.

EVERY POSSIBLE inducement is held out to the young people of the present generation to acquire an education, and the facilities for the purpose are unexcelled. The children of the rich and the poor have an almost equal chance. In this electoral division Capt. Burnham has added a new incentive to scholastic enthusiasm by offering a valuable prize every year to the public school pupil in the various townships who takes the highest stand at the Entrance examinations.

When existing conditions are carefully considered, the conclusion may be justified that the game is hardly worth the candle. The educated are, as a rule, paid less than those who work with their hands alone. A convincing illustration is at our very doors. Men who dig or perform other purely manual labor, are today earning from 35 to 40 cents an hour. The post office employes, the men who carry mail throughout the city, are required to pass an examination before their services are accepted. They are paid 25 cents an hour when they start, and even at that figure their work is not steady. If they receive a permanent appointment and work for three years they cannot earn more under the present scale than $2.75 a day when deductions are made for the superannuation fund and that rate of pay is the maximum.

It is the same in every other branch of the civil service. The chiefs of the departments, the men who were appointed under the somewhat flexible patronage system, whose qualifications are political rather than academic, are alone paid anything like an adequate salary.

How is a letter carrier or any other man in the civil service to live now on what was barely sufficient several years ago, when the dollar was still a dollar and had not shrunk in purchasing power to something like fifty cents? How can any servants, civil or otherwise, be contented so long as their positions imply semi-starvation? And it is the contented employe, as a rule, who gives the best service of which he is capable.

The civil servants in Toronto met the other night to protest against their scale of pay. It transpired that men were engaged in the hopeless task of attempting to raise a family on $56 a month, to earn which they were obliged to work seven days a week. Their wives are compelled to take in washing to help out the family finances. That means a serfdom such as the effete monarchies of Europe can hardly surpass.

School teachers are paid less than mechanics, although the work of the former, molding as they do the national character, exceeds in importance and responsibility that of any other profession or calling on earth.

In these modern days a man's social standard is generally fixed by his earning capacity. That being the case, the inducements for the young to fit themselves for anything short of the three so-called learned professions grow infinitely less when calm comparisons are made.

WASTED EFFORTS.

THE LIBERAL EDITORS at Toronto decided to support no candidate unless he is in favor of conscription. So far so good. But if the Liberal party was returned to power, it could only be by the all but solid support of Quebec, and the attitude of that province on the paramount issue is well known. All the Liberals elected from the other sections in the Dominion would be powerless against the phalanx led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

ORILLIA'S ALL RIGHT.

AT A REPRESENTATIVE meeting of citizens in Orillia held recently regarding the win-the-war movement now before the people, a resolution was unanimously adopted recommending that a joint convention of all political parties be held and that a candidate be selected whose platform would be the winning of the war, thus removing the necessity of holding an election in East Simcoe. Among the speakers we notice the name of Hale, which suggests the Orillia Packet, and it is just what we would look for from the editor of that journal, noted as it is for its fearlessness in the cause of right.

Such action as that suggested by Orillians would not only spare the people the trouble and expense of an election, but its moral effect would be the convincing proof that the voters are united, just as are the soldiers themselves, whose welfare should be the paramount issue with every Canadian today.

THE FATE OF THE SLINKER.

THE RUSSIAN soldiers who refused to fight against the Germans in Galicia did not secure immunity from attack by adopting such a course. They were shot in the back as they fell away before the advancing Teutons. Not only that, but their own comrades in arms, those who remained faithful to their trust, turned Russian guns upon them.

The Russian slinker is animated by the same sentiments as those which inspire the people of Quebec in their opposition to the Empire cause. They adopt the same line of reasoning. They believe in attending solely to their own national affairs. They say that they do not wish to be made the tools of France and Britain, mere cats'-paws to help pull the chestnuts of those powers out of the fire. The care of their own homes is their chief aim. Their own land is all they are ready to fight for.

A narrow and provincial view, just as that taken by the Nationalists of Quebec. No home in any country, no nation on earth is safe, while the German hordes are devastating the world. Refusing to fight the Huns has not brought safety to the misguided Russian quitters. Their lives have been taken, not in honorable combat, but in inglorious flight. Their homes and native land are in danger, through their treachery, as they have never been before.

Let the Nationalists in this country learn their lesson from the fate of the Russian shirkers, the men who refused to recognize their danger. If the Kaiser's legions should overrun Canada, no consideration would be shown Quebec or its people any more than that extended to the fleeing Russians in Galicia.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AFTER ALL, money is the cheapest thing that can be devoted to the winning of the war.

"ORNATE ORATORY is the thief of time," should be posted on the walls of the big debating society's room at Ottawa.

"CARRY ON," says The Globe. That's the idea, but it will not be done if Laurier and his Nationalist supporters carry the country.

EVERYONE is curious to know whom the Liberal editors would choose for a leader, seeing that they ignore Laurier and denounce Borden.

AFTER breaking the spirit of the Russian nation, it seems only more of the law of retribution that the Czar should break something belonging to himself

PETERBOROUGH beyond all doubt has one of the best summer resorts in the world, and the city should not hesitate to advertise the fact to the world.

DO NOT heartlessly attempt to undeceive the men with the white Palm Beach suit, but let him enjoy the hot weather comfort of imagining that he is going Appolo one better.

UNFORTUNATELY for the nation the sectarian cry is likely to be raised in the coming election. There are still men who mistake spiritual exclusiveness for the Christian religion.

AT ALL EVENTS, Justice Galt never said meaner things about Mr. Rogers than the Liberal newspapers are uttering against the commissioners that exonerated the Minister of Public Works.

BORROWING a phrase from an American exchange, which has noticed something of the same kind in its own country, let us say that Quebec is suffering from national paranoia, and let it go at that.

A COMMISSION is a body of men appointed by the Government to undo the work and smooth out the mischief raised by some other commission that made itself troublesome by possessing a mind of its own and using it.

IF OUR CONTEMPORARY will only denounce the action taken by its Liberal confreres in Toronto, everyone will be ready to congratulate it upon having no part in the deliberations.

WHY CANNOT some of the other churches in the city follow the Christian example set by St. John's and give the orphans in the Children's Shelter an occasional outing on the river? "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these" should be sufficient as an inspiration for such acts of kindness.

THE LITTLE ANGEL OF MERCY

This little Sister of Mercy had such tendernes in her ministrations to the wounded that everybody in an hospital "somewhere in France" adored her. It was not merely her implicit obedience to the surgeon's commands which made her a favorite, nor the beauty of her pale face —which was, perhaps, only beautiful in the eyes of piety; it was the quality of tenderness which she infused into all her duties. Other nurses were just as attentive, just as devoted, just as courageous, but this little nurse was tender in all the did to a degree which made people say of her, "She is like an angel."

Well, one day a shell brought death and new wounds to the hospital, and among the wounded was this little Sister of Mercy who was like an angel. She was smashed about the legs so that she could not move, and lay among the wreckage of the hospital with her blood streaming away from her.

When she had been rescued, you may imagine with what care she was carried to a bed, and with what haste the best surgeon was sent for, and with what love and devotion everybody stood round her, helping her to bear her pain with words of sympathy.

The surgeon made a long and patient examination.

The First Loss

At last he spoke to the little Sister of Mercy, who lay back as white as her pillows, watching his face.

"You are going to get well,' said he.

Her eyes smiled and brightened.

"Quite well and strong," he said, with assurance; "but I am afraid"—here he looked aside for a moment—"that we shall have to find a crutch for you."

She seemed puzzled.

Then the surgeon stooped nearer to her, and explained very gently that to save her life he must needs amputate one of her poor, shattered legs.

She made a little movement of the head, as though she were bowing to fate, and whispered, "Well, the will of God be done."

Some days afterwards the surgeon and the nurses came once more to her bedside, and were very loving and tender to this little one-legged Sister of Mercy. It seemed as if everybody in the hospital wanted to pay their respects to her. At last the truth came out.

"To make you quite well again," said the surgeon, "it is also necessary that I should take off your other leg."

The little Sister of Mercy smiled into his face for a moment, showing neither fear nor sorrow. Then she closed her eyes. "Prevent me, O Lord," she whispered, "from being proud of my wounds."

Colonel Peyron told this story to Harold Begbie as an example of a religious heroism which, in his opinion, is bringing a new spirit into the life of France. The colonel is a scholarly man of a very gentle spirit, and does not express himself in any headlong language of enthusiasm."

"Something," he says, "is happening in France." And there he is inclined to leave it. What it is that is happening he does not know. It is spiritual, that is clear. It is touching personality rather than mind. It is deep, silent, invisible, changing the soul of men. But what it is—who can say?

TRICKS OF FATE IN THE WAR

The fact has been amply demonstrated in the experience of official circles at Ottawa, where the question of war economy has received most serious consideration of late, that the people generally are in a receptive mood for such appeals as have been issued from time to time. The spirit of economy is abroad in Canada.

It is not true that more wasteful expenditures are being made in the cities than ever before. The people who formerly spent lavishly are more saving today, while the people who are spending today are substantially those who formerly spent little. Now, these latter are buying what they have needed for a long time.

The war has brought about many strange freaks of fate. Not long ago the editor of the largest technical journal in America, on a tour of inspection to the munitions factories, came upon a man earning $20 per day who, up to the time the call came for munitions, was a barber. He had quickly developed an aptitude for a certain essential kind of work in the munitions factories and was in great demand.

Thus, there has been much changing of place since war came, accompanied by a rather freakish redistribution of wealth, not only in Russia after the revolution but in Canada as well. Thousands of people are coming into sufficient money to live comfortably for the first time, and they are doing much buying. They are not necessarily extravagant, but the high cost of living is forcing masses of the people to exercise strict economy, and the impulse for economy is strengthened by uncertainty as to the length of the war.

On the Farm

"Yes, plants have their ailments."

"To be sure," said the sweet summer boarder, "I have heard of hay fever, and I am not surprised the hay gets feverish out in that hot field.

Memory Lessons

"Do you believe in memory lessons?"

"Yes. Biggins forgot to register and he is getting one of the best lessons he ever had in his life.

A Fan

"Is your wife fond of the movies?"

"I should say she is. She got so that she can't sleep nights unless she's first been over to the neighborhood theatre and seen two or more die in a four-poster bed."

"Only a few can be rich."

"Yep, and that's one of the times when I'd rather be in the minority than the majority."

YOUR MONEY AT HOME

When the American postoffice authorities got together the other day and begun to question the stock selling methods of a certain company, a meeting of stockholders was called by its president.

According to his own testimony, this man has sold $600,000 worth of stock in the concern. He was to make the fortune of every investor by conducting a mail order business. Hadn't the Sears-Robuck and other mail order firms made millions? Therefore——

With such old bait he had fished, and suckers had bit freely. So freely that he thought he could make them "come across" again even under the shadow of government prosecution.

Into the meeting he came—a pompous, loud talking man—and mounted a flag draped little rostrom to make one of the stirring appeals for the salvation of the company from persecution. (Every promoter who falls foul of the government misreads the word "prosecution" so.)

It was starting off as a fine appeal, when a man down below rose up to shout:

"Where is my money? I came here for a financial statement, not oratory!"

"Sit down! Sit down!"

"I won't sit down—I intend to find out what has become of my money!"

So it went, with the police called in at length so that the promoter could end his speech.

What a nerve.

Rear-Admiral Washington Capps has been appointed manager of the U. S. Shipping Board's emergency fleet corporation, while E. H. Hurley is appointed chairman of the board, and Bainbridge Colby a member of the board.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Win-The War Critics.

Editor Review: The profusion of criticism hurled at the different governments who are now, and have been in a position that requires action of the most statesmanlike manner, seems to be very inconsistent in a great many instances.

The Premier, Sir Robert Borden, and his Cabinet, also Sir Sam Hughes, have been subjected to many harsh references. The opposition have also been attacked, and, at the same time, what are a number of those fault-finders doing?

In the City of Peterborough you might safely say there are almost 700 automobiles that have been purchased, which means an outlay of some $500,000.00, and probably $400,000.0 of such money went to the United States. Of the number of autos referred to at least 500 are for pleasure purposes, meaning almost $400,000.00 of an outlay for an article that deteriorates in value very rapidly as well as involving considerable more outlay during operation. I do not want to discount the auto, for after the war is over it certainly should have its well deserved place; but I would like to draw the attention of the people to the solemn fact that in using the auto for pleasure you are using gasoline that appears to be getting exhausted whilst war experts tell us the war will be won from the air.

I suggest to those same people the advisability of investing the $400,000.00 in Dominion War Bonds, together with gasoline money and licenses' money, which would mean considerable added, and your suggestion would be considered dictaterial, and at the same time those same American people are loaning Canada money for war purposes. Not only is there a lot of money spent for auto pleasure, but the association is urging the government to apply the auto license money, together with other monies from the consolidated revenue of the province to construction and maintenance of main or county roads throughout the province, at the same time placing the burden of such roads to the extent of 60 per cent. on the rural ratepayer for a very small per centage of the totalled travelled highways used by the farmer for agricultural purposes. If the agriculturalist, who has been so prosperous up to the present, could thrive with the provision by way of roads up to the present, why encourage road destroyers by way of pleasure autos with greatly taxation, but rather desist pleasure autoing, and invest the money in securities for war purposes, saving fuel for air warfare, and taxes of all for something most urgent at the present time?

Patriotic and other channels now take from four to six mills on the dollar for city and county, and if government critics would apply half of the money spent for pleasure and for gasoline to continue the same the half that remained in their hands would not deteriorate like the auto and fuel necessary for air and other weapons of war would be available for the great object in view.

This may be interpreted by some as retrogressive, yet, would it not be better and more in accordance with unity of purpose to refrain from using necessities of war before conscription of such takes place, and drives pleasure autos to the barn by prohibiting the use of a necessity for war purposes such as gasoline, oil, etc. Much better to begin at home to act like a Win-theWar people, and assist the powers that be, than put barriers in their way.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of July 30, 1900:

Mr. George S. Fair of South Monaghan, brother of Mr. Robert Fair of town, bled to death when he accidentally severed an artery in his leg.

Liberals held a caucus but were unable to agree upon a candidate for parliament.

EARTH IS SLOWING DOWN.

British astronomers declare that the earth is gradually slowing down in the time of its revolution around its axis. That the rate is gradual is shown by their calculation that it now takes exactly three seconds longer for the world to turn on its axis than it took a hundred years ago. A writer in "St. Nicholas," comments: "At this rate Shakespeare had nearly ten seconds less in his twenty-four hours than has a modern dramatist. William the Conqueror was handicapped by a half minute in keeping up with his descendants. Julius Caesar was a whole minute to the bad."

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

You've got to begin to try and sell your debentures now."

"Why?"

"The deposit has proved to be only a surface one," he told her. "We—we've had a representative there, and his report is discouraging—fatal, in fact."

"When did you hear?"

"We had a wire last night, followed by a letter this morning. I—I hope you won't be disappointed, but the fact is, I'm afraid you'll have some difficulty in getting those debentures off your hands. You see, they're either worthless paper, or they're such good securities that people would be surprised at your trying to get rid of them, and they'll naturally be suspicious of them."

"What representative have you sent there?"

"That I am afraid I cannot tell you."

"You needn't. I know. It's Mr. Averil. I don't believe a word of it. He's trying to let down the price of shares, so that he can buy."

Annoyed as Dwyer was, he yet could scarcely keep from laughing in her face. "The idea!" he said. "But it's no use keeping in the fact, Miss Stewart. The advice does come from Laurence, and if you're wise, you'll get rid of your debentures as soon as possible—and be grateful to him. If it weren't for him, you wouldn't have got a penny—and even at the worst, you've made sixteen hundred pounds."

"Yes—for which he offered me two hundred," she said angrily. "He's tried to cheat me all along. I know. I shall not sell."

"Very well. Not that it matters much, I'm afraid. You'll find it difficult to get rid of debentures in any case, as I've told you already. And now, good-morning."

But Marion sat still. "Won't—won't you show me his letter?" she asked.

Pat considered.

"I don't know that there's any reason why I shouldn't," he said, and handed her a sheet of notepaper and a telegram. The letter was dated from Leith the evening before, and was short. "Sell letter follows," it said, and she turned to the letter.

"Dear Pat," it ran—"Here I am again, bad-penny like. I've been to Langholt as fast as a trawler could take me, and beaten anybody M. & R. could possibly have sent by a week at least."

"What does this mean?" she asked, reading the passage aloud.

"I don't know—can't imagine. He might have had some idea Mortimer & Reingold would send an agent to inquire."

"When their man gets there, he'll find I've done him a good turn. The ground is nicely laid open for his inspection. I stuck half a dozen dynamite cartridges under Uthild rock, and blew that interesting relic of the ages to Glory, and there's scarcely enough of it left for him to write [illegible] the malachite—well, it's gone to Glory, with the rest. The explosion blew a hole in the ground as big as the pit of a small theatre, and it's all nicely lined with shale—shale—shale and lava everywhere. Not a speck of anything else—so that game's up. We made speedy tracks, bagged a native boat—there was a bit of a sea running, and our own was smashed to splinters in landing—chucked an unwilling native into it, and got off to the trawler. Then I recompensed the simple islander with gold, up anchor, and home again, and here I am. Leith, to Langholt, a day ashore, and Langholt to Leith, all in eight days, is middling smart moving. Net results: a strained boiler tube or two, a pair of burned sea-boots and a guernsey to my account, and a smashed dinghy, and no malachite. Now go to Miss Stewart and tell her to sell. M. & R. will probably stand to their offer of five hundred pounds, and she must consider herself lucky if she gets that. My shares you can chuck in the fire."

"What shares?" she demanded, looking up from the letter at Dwyer.

"Eh?" He looked over her shoulders. "Oh, these." He took them from his desk, and showed her. "I bought these four for him."

"What were you going to do with them if the discovery had proved a good one?"

"Laurence left word that they were to be offered to you at par—their face value."

"Did he?" Her face showed her wonderment. "But why?"

"That I must leave to you to guess. He gave me no reason," Dwyer said. He was still nettled at her suspicions.

She looked at him blankly, then turned to the letter again.

"Have you seen anything of her, Pat? If so, you might drop me a line and tell me how she's looking, and whether she's chanced to mention my name. You may remember our first meeting. She came to your office in a cab with me, seeking the address of Tyrrell's pal, Webster. I saw more of her after that, and if you'll believe me, she asked my advice as to whether she was to accept my offer for those shares. I never knew she was the holder till then, of course. Do you remember once when you were going to tell me her name, and I said I didn't want to know it? 'Easier to rob an abstract nonentity than an individual woman,' I said. And 'she's not the only single woman in the world.' But she is, worse luck. Heigh-ho! I'm not suited for the rôle of love-lorn swain, I fear me.

"Enough of this. Tell her to sell those shares—get a good price for her, old man, and when you've time send me a line to tell me how you've got on and what price they fetched—Thine, as of yore,

"LAURENCE.

"P.S.—Don't forget to tell me how she looks. I rely on you not to let her get hold of my name."

She sat silently, turning the letter over and over in her hands. "Why did he want his name kept quiet?" she asked at length, her eyes on the floor.

"That, again, I must leave to you to guess. Perhaps he has some idea of buying the shares," he reminded her maliciously.

"The—the expenses of the trip I must make good to you," she said, disregarding the taunt behind his last words.

"They're no expenses of mine. Laurence did the thing off his own bat."

"But I thought you said he had no money?"

"I suppose a hundred pounds is enough to take him to Iceland and back, twice over. If he's been chartering trawlers, overheating boiler tubes, and smashing dinghys, he'll find he's made a hole in his capital, though."

"Why—why should he—" she began. But she knew the truth before her sentence was framed, and sat quietly—very quietly—never speaking. Dwyer rose and went to the window, stifling an obtrusively artificial yawn, and she blessed him for it as she fumbled for a pocket handkerchief that seemed terribly hard to come at.

She was on her feet winking suspiciously when he turned to the room again, but the handkerchief had returned to the mysterious recess in which womankind stores such belongings.

She held out her hand. "Goo—good-bye, Mr. Dwyer," she said, with her best attempt at composure. "I'm very much obliged for all you've done for me," and glided away silently.

Pat rubbed his nose in deep thought. "I've done my best for you, Laurie, my friend," he said at length, and returned to his correspondence. The tune he whistled softly would have provoked an open rupture if Laurence had been there. It was a dismal rendering of the Wedding March.

CHAPTER XXII.

Marion went back to West Kensington as one in a trance, wide-eyed, seeing nothing. The roar of traffic in her ears sunk to the sound of breakers on a beach—such breakers as beat boats into floating pieces of wreckage—and the thunder of the train as it plunged into the underground ways was the thunder rending dynamite echoing in unknown vast solitudes. All the time Laurence's face was before her. Their first meeting—how she had hated him then! At the memory of his kiss the shamed blood ran warmly in her veins and her face flushed—but not as it had flushed before. How strong he was—how masterful. How firmly he had held her—how he had laughed, wickedly and recklessly, when she struck him on the mouth. She remembered his grip of her body, and how she, weakened by the brief struggle, had been drawn to his breast. It was with an entirely new feeling—a feeling she refused to analyze—that the memory came to her now.

And he had left, not to escape her wrath—oh, fool! to think that he could ever fear her puny rage—but to do her service. And she had deemed him afraid!—What fools women were! She remembered the hatred with which he had spoken of his former life—and now he had gone back to it of his own free will, for her sake. Between the lines on his letter she had read what Dwyer could not read—the weary toil, the accidents of wind and sea, all borne for her.

On arriving home she went straight to her room and threw herself down, her face on the pillow, in silent self-reproach at the injustice she had done him. For an hour she lay there, never stirring, hiding her face from the day, but never hiding from herself for a moment the happy, shameful truth that she loved him—loved him—loved him. And, thank God! he was poor—and she need not go to him with empty hands.

Wondering at her absence, Mrs. Jardine sought her, and at her knock Marion sat upright upon her bed. Her eyes were bright and wet for all the new-found happiness in them, and her pillow was stained with tears. The old woman came in and stood before her.

"Ye've been crying," she said accusingly.

"I haven't," Marion declared stoutly. "But—but I'm going to," and she broke down again in real good earnest, sobbing joyously against the older woman's shoulder.

"Dearie—dear," Mrs. Jardine said, smoothing her hair lightly. "What is it, child? What is it?"

"I c-can't tell you," Marion answered, choking. "It's too long to tell. Let me cry."

The old woman held her gently until her passion of tears was over and she had sniffed herself back to composure, dabbing at her eyes with a wet and crumpled handkerchief the while.

"Now I'm all right," she announced, with a watery smile. "It's no good your asking me anything, you dear old thing, because I shan't tell you. I've been a fool—and now I'm a wise woman. And very soon I—I'm going to be a happy one, I do believe. And that's all." And the landlady, knowing, as a woman, that tears were not incompatible with happiness, asked no more. Also because she was a woman she announced her immediate intention of having tea brought up for the pair of them. But as she went to the door she could not restrain one question.

"Is it marriage, dearie?" she asked softly. But Marion, with an April face, rushed at her, drove her from the room, and shut the door ungratefully behind her.

"I'm going away to-morrow," she announced, when the tea was produced.

"And where, dearie?"

"To Leith."

"I know. I knew." The old woman laughed triumphantly. "It's Mr. Averil. Now, isn't it?"

Marion fished out a tea leaf from her cup and placed it upon the back of one hand, smacking it with the other, after the approved method of divination, until it stuck to her pink palm.

"Yes—No. Yes—No. Yes—No. Yes—No," she said. "There, it's No. Silly thing." She flicked the tea leaf [illegible] "Yes

WING POWER OF BIRDS

Stormy Petrel's Great Power of Flight —The Swift Swallow

There is nothing more wonderful in Nature than the power of flight possessed by birds, and no subject which yields more startling facts upon investigation. "The way of an eagle in the air" is one of those things of which Solomon expressed himself ignorant; and there is something truly marvellous in the mechanism which controls the scythe-like sweep of wings peculiar to most birds of prey. Yet even naturalists of the first order have had little or nothing to say about the power of flight in birds, while some of them speak on very insufficient evidence. Witness Michelet's statement that the swallow flies at the rate of 240 miles an hour. Roughly, this gives us 1,000 miles in four hours, but naturally, even in its swiftest dashes, the swallow does not attain to anything like this speed. But the Duke of Argyll is rather under than over the mark when he computes the speed at more than 100 miles per hour.

The mechanism of flight in the swallow is carried through an ascending scale, until in the swift it reaches its highest degree, both in endurance and facility of evolution. Although there are birds which may, and probably do, attain to the speed of 150 miles per hour, this remarkable rate is not to be looked for in any of the birds of the swallow kind. In their migrations swallows stick close to land, and never leave it unless compelled. They cross straits at the narrowest part, and are the most easily fatigued of all birds. Apparently, though they possess considerable speed, they have no powers of sustained flight. These attribute belong in the most remarkable degree to certain ocean birds.

Anyone who has crossed the Atlantic must have noticed that gulls accompany the ship over the whole distance—or, at least, are never absent. The snowy "sea swallows," as the terns are called, seem quite tireless; though the petrel and the albatross alone deserve the name of oceanic birds. No sea deserts seem to bound the range of the petrels, and they are found at every distance from land. Different species haunt different seas—from the fulmar in the far north to the giant petrel, which extends its flight to the ice banks of the south. Here the Antarctic and snowy petrels appear, often floating upon the drift ice, and never leaving those dreary seas.

Another bird of immense wing power is the tiny stormy petrel, the smallest web-footed bird known.

HAMMOCK SLEEPING TENT

No Poles Required and Delightfully Yielding Couch Assured

Compactness in transportation and general serviceableness are features of the hammock tent shown in the illustration. It is made by sewing a piece of canvas to the sides of an ordinary "dog" or shelter tent and may be made of a piece of canvas or tarpaulin. The tent is suspended by the ridge from a heavy rope supported on trees or posts. It is kept taut on the sides by tent ropes attached to stakes driven in the ground. This form of tent is particularly convenient in providing a good sleeping place in very, very small space. It is free from dampness, and the camper is provided with a comfortable rest free from prowling animals, without the use of a cot.—Popular Mechanics.

BOWEL TROUBLE IN FOWL

Several Remedies For Chicks—Need Not Use Drugs Always

Slight bowel disorders of young chicks can often be remedied by the use for a few days of a teaspoonful of lime water in each quart of drinking water. The use of boiled whole milk in place of water as a drink for the chicks has also been found effective in light cases. Paregoric is a very effective remedy. It should be placed in the milk or water at the rate of two to four drops to a quart, allowing the chicks no other drink for a few days.

These remedies will not be effective unless the cause of the trouble is corrected. The chicks that are most affected should be killed and buried, the house thoroughly cleaned and sprayed frequently with a good coal tar disinfectant. After a flock is removed from the brooder house it is a good plan to mop up the floors with a strong creolin solution and then heat the house so the whole interior will become steamed with the disinfectant. These precautionary measures, coupled with frequent cleaning of the house and careful feeding, will often overcome the trouble without recourse to drugs.

Fowls Object to Barley

Fowls do not like barley as well as they do wheat. Its feeding value, as determined by analysis, is about equal to that of wheat. It, however, contains a little more fibre, and is, therefore, less palatable. The objectionable feature to the fowls seems to be the hulls, for they greedily eat barley when it is hulled.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SEBOLD, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

Backache and bearing down pains are danger signals which every woman should heed. Remove the cause of these aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that good old root and herb medicine. Thousands of women have testified to its virtues.

For forty years it has been making women strong, curing backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pain.

MAINTENANCE IS VITAL

Absolutely Permanent Pavements Do Not Exist—Be "Pound Wise"

While many articles have been printed, many papers read and much discussion devoted to the problems incidental to highway construction, it is rather interesting to note that but a very small portion of space is devoted to the subject of highway maintenance. In Canada, as elsewhere, there is a disposition to give just a little less attention to this side of the problem than is actually demanded. Roads, whether in the city, the town or the country, no matter how well they may have been laid, will not last unless those responsible for their upkeep exercise vigilance and see to it that incipient holes, cracks and cuts are promptly and thoroughly attended to.

It is poor business to spend good money laying a modern pavement and then, as the result of the penny wise and pound foolish policy, negative the investment by indifference to the proper degree of maintenance for which the pavement calls. A pavement, like most other things, is put there to render a service to the community. If, as a result of careless maintenance organization, it gets into disrepair and fails to give the service for which it was designed, it is to that extent as uneconomical as a pump or any other piece of machinery in a similar condition.

Delays in repairing small defects in pavements are always expensive and sometimes dangerous. Sooner or later they have to be attended to and will in most cases cost as much or more to attend to them when they are old as when they are new. What are spoken of as permanent pavements will deteriorate, and cannot in the very nature of things have as long life if, after being laid down, they are not properly maintained.

STORING WEST'S GRAIN

Method in Storage Tanks at Head of Lakes

The disposal of grain in one elevator at Port Arthur is described as follows: If a car is not for direct delivery to vessel or not to be cleaned, dried or scoured, it is dropped on one of the ten receiving belt conveyors, which each unloading unit has connected with the storage tanks, each carrying approximately 12,000 bushels per hour, and sent to the storage tanks, of which there are 240 each, 21 feet in width by 85 feet in depth, besides an almost equal number of "interstice" tanks, which are formed by the joining together of the large circular tanks. A movable machine which runs on a track on top and alongside a series of tanks, and through which the belt forming the conveyor passes, takes the grain of the belt and shoots it into the spout leading to the tank the grain is intended for. There it lies, until a quantity of the same grade is required for shipment.

When this requirement arises a valve is opened at the bottom of the tank and the grain is dropped on one of ten similar shipping conveyors and is conveyed back to the shipping house where it is re-elevated, weighed, and placed in one of the ten shipping bins which are in the first row of bins in the building and on which telescopic steel spouts are connected which can be extended or drawn in on vessels to suit their requirements.

Burning Rubbish

Do not allow combustible rubbish to accumulate in or about the house, but do not burn quantities of paper, or other rubbish in a fireplace or in the firebox of a stove or furnace. The ashes clog the flue passages, and the long flames are liable to overheat flues or start soot fires. Burn such material in the ash box below the firebox, where it can do no harm.

Rather Inconvenient

A little slum child was enjoying his first glimpse of country life. He sat by the farmer's wife just as the sun was setting, watching her pluck a chicken.

He was gravely silent for a long time, then asked:

"Do you take off their clothes every night, lady?"

FOR CAMPING PLACES

Portable Tent Made from an Umbrella and Paper Muslin

Picnickers desiring to go in bathing are often handicapped by the lack of a convenient place to change clothes. An umbrella and some paper muslin provides a light portable tent, that is practical and inexpensive for such uses. Cut the dark paper muslin into as many 9-foot lengths as there are sections of the umbrella. Sew these strips together. At each seam tie a string about a yard long and a stout cord 15 feet long to the handle to hold up the tent. For use, open the umbrella, invert it, and to each rib tie one of the strings. Then tie one end of the cord to the handle of the umbrella and suspend it from a tree or other support, as shown, weighing or tying down the other end.—Popular Mechanics.

Care of Blankets

The most satisfactory way of washing blankets: Slice half a cake of washing soap into two quarts of water. Set on the stove and stir until dissolved, add cold water in a large tub. In this soapy water add four tablespoons of powdered borax. Soak the blankets in this overnight. Then wash them in this water, rinse them twice in cold water, wring, and hang on the line. This recipe will wash four blankets. Be sure and use only cold water and they will come out as soft and beautiful as new. A teaspoonful of glycerine, added to the rinsing water, will improve them.

White Cookies

Cream together one cupful shortening and two cupsful sugar. Add two well-beaten eggs. Mix together one teaspoonful baking soda and one-half cupful thick sour milk. Stir the soda and sour milk until it nearly fills the cup. Add to other mixture. Then add one teaspoonful salt and two teaspoonsful extract (vanilla, almond, lemon or orange) and about five cupsful flour. Mix well, roll very thin, cut with cookie cutter and bake in a moderate oven for about five minutes. This recipe makes about nine dozen cookies.

American Red Cross Mission To Russia

American Red Cross Mission on the "Empress of Asia" en route to Russia. Dr. Frank Billings on left.

A DISTINGUISHED party of physicians, surgeons bacteriologists, professors of food chemistry, sanitation experts and dentists, making up the first unit of the United States Red Cross mission to Russia numbering twenty-nine in all, left Vancouver the other day on the "Empress of Asia," en route to the eastern front.

Lieut.-Col. Frank Billings, professor of medicine in the University of Chicago, is in charge of the party and is taking to Russia over $100,000 worth of medical supplies, surgical instruments, dressings, water sterilizers and other necessary articles, including vaccine for the prevention of typhoid, smallpox, cholera, diphtheria, bubonic plague, meningitis and other diseases. A heavy task lies before them in Russia, and they are going abundantly prepared to go immediately to work.

The mission is being sent out by the United States Government, and the United States Red Cross Society will see that they are kept fully supplied in order to meet all demands for alleviating the suffering among the Russian soldiers and people. The move has been gratefully welcomed by the present Russian Government as an expression of the friendship of the people of the United States for Russia.

During the past month the United States Red Cross has raised over $125,000, and, while the work has been already begun in France, Italy, Serbia and Belgium, the present is but the first of similar units to be sent to Russia. The present party will investigate and report on Russia's needs and upon this report the United States Red Cross headquarters will decide the equipment and numbers of subsequent units. Steps are now being taken to get together complete equipment even to motor ambulances.

Col. Billings and the other members of the mission are a sturdy and affable lot of men and are fitted out in uniforms very similar to those worn by the British. The colonel is exceedingly proud of his organization and the promptitude with which it was effected.

"Every man who was approached to go on this mission, Winslow of Yale and Whipple of Harvard and all the others, at once offered their services," said Col. Billings. "They dropped their work right there and got ready in four days, leaving their families behind them, to undertake this work, which is going to be of such tremendous importance to the Russian nation and to the military in particular.

"These men are leaders in their professions and are the heads of the largest universities in the United States, but they did not hesitate a moment when the call reached them."

Several of the party have already seen active service in the present war. Major M. Grow spent twenty months on the Russian Mazurian front, and he has received the Military Order of Saint George for services in the Russian campaign, as well as being honored in other ways. Major (Dr.) H. McCarthy has been in France making a survey of the prison camps in that country before the break between Germany and the United States; while Colonel Billings has been in Russia several times.

Some of the members of the party took occasion to obtain several motion pictures of various points of interest, and, as they have already a large supply of film, they will be able to produce before the Russian people graphic pictures of interesting events and things on this continent.

Mr. G. M. Bosworth, Vice-President of the C. P. R., has received a letter of appreciation for the very many courtesies the delegation received en route to the Pacific Coast. It was sent at the instigation of Lt.-Col. Billings. The names of the mission are as follows:

Lieut.-Col. Frank Billings (chairman), professor medicine in the University of Chicago; Lieut.-Col. W. B. Thompson, director of the Federal Reserve Bank, New York; Major B. Thacher, lawyer, New York; Capt. J. W. Andrews, auditor, St. Louis, Mo.; Major W. S. Thayer, professor clinical medicine, John Hopkins University, Baltimore; Major D. J. McCarthy, fellow of Phipps Institute, Philadelphia; Major H. C. Sherman, professor of food chemistry, Columbia University; Major H. H. Swift, of the Swift Company; Major G. C. Whipple, professor sanitary engineering, Harvard University; Major C. E. A. Winslow, professor bacteriology and hygiene, Yale Medical College; Major W. Post, assistant professor of medicine, Rush College, Chicago; Major Robins, Chicago; H. J. Horn, transportation expert, Brookline; Major S. Wightman, professor clinical medicine New York Polyclinic Hospital; Capt. H. Brown, publicity; Capt. R. L. Barr, vice-president Chase Securities Company, New York; Capt. W. Cochran, Capt. A. Wardell, lawyer of New York; Capt. Grow, of the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps, Washington; Capt. Pirnie, civil engineer, New York; Lieut. C. Kelleher, attache; Lieut. H. B. Redfield, law secretary of Brooklyn, attache; Lieut. W. C. Nicholson, of the Swift Company, Chicago; and Lieuts. H. D. Hardy, H. M. Wyckoff and N. C. Travis.

COMING ELECTION POINT OF INTEREST AT OTTAWA

Vote Will Probably be Taken in October as Election Machinery Cannot be Prepared Sooner — Railway Situation Discussed in Caucus.

Ottawa, Ont., July 30.— There is talk now of adjournment of the House by August 21. With the Military Service Bill, extension, and the income tax measure either disposed or introduced, there seems no reason why with assiduous attention and no obstruction, Parliament should not be ready to prorogue by that date.

Any attempt at re-organization will follow immediately upon prorogation and dissolution of Parliament will likely follow soon afterwards. Elections are generally looked for in Ottawa early in October. It would be difficult to get the election machinery in operation for a much earlier date.

The most important legislation yet to come is that dealing with the railway problem. There was a long Conservative Government caucus, when the whole situation was discussed. The general feeling of the members was obtained, and the details of the policy were left to the Cabinet to work out. It is possible that there may be another caucus before the legislation is finally introduced.

Reach Two Conclusions.

After listening to the responsible Cabinet Ministers explain the situation, the caucus apparently came to two conclusions:

1—That under present industrial conditions it would not do to have the Canadian Northern, and the Grand Trunk Pacific go into the hands of a receiver.

2—That under existing war and financial conditions in Canada, the United States and Great Britain, it would be impossible and unwise for the Government to undertake a complete scheme of railway nationalization as recommended by the Drayton-Acworth report.

Having reached those two conclusions, the caucus discussed at length what should be done to protect at the same time the railway properties and the public. It is understood that the meeting generally favored a proposal that a Government board of directors should be placed in charge of the lines which are in financial difficulties, for the remainder of the war.

SUNDAY STORY OF WAR

Saturday night's official statement from London says Friday was a great day for British airmen who caused fifteen German machines to crash to earth, and drove sixteen others down out of control. British airmen also bombed many enemy centres, descending close to earth sometimes forty miles behind the enemy's lines. They also took an enormous number of photographs and gave great and important assistance to the artillery. Forty seven prisoners were taken in a patrol encounter near Ypres.

Petrograd's Saturday official statement says the Roumanian troops continue the pursuit of the enemy and have occupied a succession of heights capturing a battery and some prisoners.

Making his first speech as first Lord of the Admiralty in Cambridge Saturday night, Sir Eric Geddes said: "The destruction of the German military power is progressing more rapidly since last spring than people imagine and the morale of the German army is surely going fast.

German troops at dawn Sunday made a violent attack on French positions near Hurtebise Farm on the Aisne front which was repulsed, and later a French attack between Hurtebise and La Bovelle gained ground at all points on this sector, particularly in the region of the monument.

Sunday afternoon's British statement reports a number of successful attacks on German trenches at various points in Northern France, many casualties inflicted on the enemy and a number of prisoners and machine guns captured.

FORTY OFFER TO HELP.

Civil Servants Are Volunteering to Assist Farmers.

Toronto, July 30.—So far, forty employes of the Parliament Buildings have agreed to put in three weeks extra vacation on the farms helping to garner the harvest, in response to the appeal of Premier Hearst and his cabinet for the civil servants to lend the farmers aid. The employes receive two weeks holidays. They are promised three weeks extra if they will put the three weeks in at farm work. It is expected that many other employes of the Government will follow their example. There are close to 700 employes at the Parliament Buildings.

About fifteen employes of the Highways Department are to be sent to help with farm work. Mr. W. A. McLean, deputy minister, is taking stock of his employes to see how many are physically fit. There are about forty employes, male and female in the department. Mr. McLean will let all go he possibly can.

Mr. Bowser's Bombs

He Decides Not to Avoid Them

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Bowser had to go over to the family drug store after dinner, and when he came back half an hour later he was laboring under great excitement.

"Has any one tried to hold you up?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

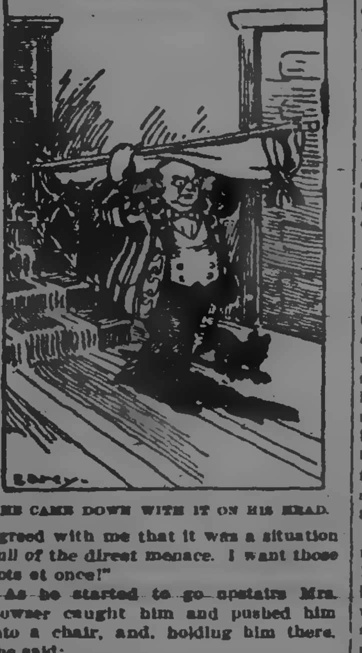
"Worse than that," he replied. "Mrs. Bowser, have we got a couple of cots in the house?"

"Cots, cots?" she repeated. "What on earth do you want with a couple of cots? I think there may be a couple in the storeroom."

"Mrs. Bowser," answered Mr. Bowser in impressive tones as he held up a warning finger, "we are in direct peril, and we must dodge it if we can. I want those cots to put down cellar. We shall sleep down there tonight and probably for many nights to come!"

"What is this?" she demanded, as she turned on him. "Did the druggist spin you a yarn that has got you half scared to death?"

"Mrs. Bowser, it is not the time for such talk. The druggist has spun me no yarn. He is not the man to spin yarns in the face of peril. There were eight men in the store, and they were agreed with me that it was a situation full of the direst menace. I want those cots at once!"



HE CAME DOWN WITH IT ON HIS HEAD.

As he started to go upstairs Mrs. Bowser caught him and pushed him into a chair, and, holding him there, she said:

"You have evidently heard something that threatens me as well as you. I want to know what it is before you go any further. You talk about cots and sleeping down cellar, and I want to know what such bosh means."

Mr. Bowser gulped three or four times and then explained:

"Mrs. Bowser, you know what a Zeppelin is, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"And you know what a bomb is?"

"I do, and what of it?"

"This of it!" he exclaimed in irritation. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city within the last hour. Thousands of people have been alarmed, and there are great crowds in the streets."

"I don't see what there is to be scared about," said Mrs. Bowser. "If a Zeppelin is hovering over the city let her hover the same as we would let a crow hover."

"Zounds, woman! Can't you understand that a Zeppelin is probably here to drop bombs down on us? And that is the peril I referred to!"

"Nobody knows that that is her object. And suppose it was. Suppose she dropped a hundred bombs as she flew over the city. At least ninety of those bombs would fall into the streets and do no damage. Nine more would fall into the back yards and, like enough, destroy the clotheslines, and the other one might fall on a barn and demolish a horse. I don't see why you should get excited about that. I'm sure I shan't."

Mr. Bowser said no more. He was so mad he couldn't talk. He rushed up to the storeroom and there found an old cot with a broken leg. He came downstairs with it on his head and disappeared down cellar. When he came up again, puffing and blowing, he found Mrs. Bowser calmly reading the evening papers, and she looked up to ask:

"If you fear the house will be struck with a bomb during the night why don't you go to a brewery vault somewhere? They are so deep underground that no missile can reach you."

It was amazing that Mr. Bowser did not jump up and down and wave his arms about, but he didn't. He brushed a cobweb out of his hair and sat down and quietly said:

"Mrs. Bowser, let me explain the situation, for I see that you don't understand it. A bomb from a Zeppelin will penetrate the roof of a house and go through to the first floor. There it stops to explode and to make the awfulest racket you ever heard. One in the cellar is safe, but nowhere else in the house. Therefore I propose to sleep down cellar."

"And I don't," she replied.

"Then you can get busted into so many fragments that it would take a police force a week to pick them all up! Woman, I can't understand you, police force a week to pick them all up! Woman, I can't understand you, and I won't try to understand you. From this time on I sleep down cellar. You can sleep up here or sit on the front steps all night long."

"It is because I have a better plan than you have, Mr. Bowser," she explained after a minute's silence. "I have thought of this Zeppelin matter for the last fortnight and planned out what to do or what to have you do in case things come to a climax. Your coming home from the store the way you did, with your hair standing up and your eyes bulging out, was no surprise to me."

"Mrs. Bowser, this is no time for insults!" he warned her.

"And no one is using them," she answered. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city. No one knows what she wants, but all suspect that she is going to drop bombs. She may drop one on this house, but if she does it will be by mistake. Mr. Bowser, you are a well known character. You have won your way up the ladder of fame. You have never said or done anything that Mrs. Zeppelin could take umbrage at. I don't think she would willingly harm a hair of your head."

"Woman, what does this talk mean?" was demanded.

"Don't be impatient, Mr. Bowser. You are to go out on the streets and watch with the rest of the crowds. If that Zeppelin every one is talking of has got tired of hovering she will fly around for a change. You will see her flying this way and that and dropping those terrible bombs as she does so. By and by, as you watch with mouth agape, you will see her head in the direction of our house. She has one bomb left, and that may be for us. When she comes near enough you will hold up your hand and shout:

"Ho, there, Mrs. Zeppelin, starboard your helm! You're headed for Bowser's house. Sheer off to the left a rod or two more and drop your old bombs on the butcher shop."

"They will hear you aboard that craft," continued Mrs. Bowser," and it will swerve from its course, and when the bomb drops it will strike plumb on the butcher shop, and the butcher will never send us any more bones. I will help you on with your overcoat and muffle you up, and you go right out and be ready for the crisis."

"Woman, I am tempted to say that you ought to be blown up," said Mr. Bowser as he walked to and fro. "You would be sarcastic with your foot on the edge of your grave. As I cannot convince you of this great peril, I shall leave you to suffer for your obstinacy. I did intend to pass the night in the cellar, but I have changed my mind. I do not want to be awakened by your screams and shrieks as a bomb strikes the roof. I shall therefore pass the night in some other place and come around early in the morning to view the awful wreck."

"If I am alive your breakfast will be ready at the usual hour," remarked Mrs. Bowser as he rose up. "If I have been blown into a thousand fragments you will have to get your breakfast somewhere else. They say that new place two blocks down is going to be a success. Its specialty is fried pork sausages, and you know how dearly you love them."

Mr. Bowser glared at her—just glared.

"I wish you would take the cat with you," Mrs. Bowser pleaded. "You know he has been one of the family for eight long years, and he does not want to be blown to atoms any more than you do. He loves you dearly, and he looks to you for protection in this emergency."

Mr. Bowser walked three steps toward the hall tree, and then over his shoulder gave her another glare.

"And you have some of your speeches in manuscript. They should not be lost to future generations. Hold on a minute, and I will get them for you."

But Mr. Bowser did not hold on. He put on his hat and overcoat and muffler and passed out, and if he uttered any swear words as he did so Mrs. Bowser did not hear them.

It was a cold evening, and the streets were deserted. Mr. Bowser walked about until his ears were red as paint and his nose was as cold as a chunk of ice and then returned to the house.

"You will need two quilts and a pillow down there," quietly observed Mrs. Bowser, "and you had better provide yourself with a rope to tie on something in place of that missing leg. You will sleep in peace in spite of the rats and spiders and cockroaches. Good night, Mr. Bowser!"

But Mr. Bowser warmed himself, read his evening paper and smoked his usual cigar, and when the time came he headed for his usual bed, and though the Zeppelin continued to hover and hover, he was soon snoring as though one did not exist.

Real Strategy.

"Mother, if a poor, hungry little boy was to come to the back door and ask for something to eat would you give him that piece of pie that was left over from dinner?"

"Yes, Willie, I think I would."

"Well, just wait a minute till I run around to the back door."

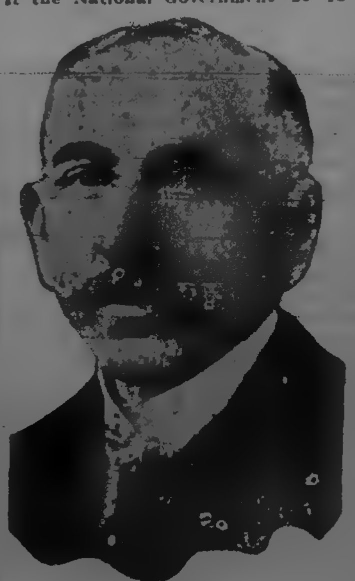
Strong War Manifesto of Australian Premier Says "Fight to Finish"

NOW that the Australian elections have been decided in favor of Mr. Hughes and the National Party, it is particularly interesting to have access to the full text of the manifesto which the Australian Premier addressed, just prior to the polling, to the Australian soldiers in the various war theaters. Mr. Hughes is a past master in the art of presenting a case, and in this manifesto he sums up the position of the National Party with all his accustomed lucidity. He has a good case, and undoubtably makes the most of it. To the man in the trenches, for instance, it may be taken that few things would come as more welcome than Mr. Hughes' insistence that the party which he led placed the war first and everything else after. He leaves no doubt on the matter. "We believe," he says, "that it is not only the duty of Australia to stand by the Empire 'to the last man and the last shilling,' if need be, but that, in no other way is it possible for Australia to be saved. As part of the British Empire triumphant in this war, Australia's future is assured. Let Great Britain be defeated, and we are undone."

Then when he comes to the great question of the future of labor, he is no less emphatic. He will not tolerate, for a moment, the charge that his party is in any way faithless to the great fundamental ideas of labor. If the National Government be returned to power, he says, not one stone in the temple of labor legislation will be displaced. And then he goes on to show what his party has accomplished during the time that it has been in power, marshaling his facts so as to cover briefly but forcibly all the main issues, and concludes with an emphatic declaration against premature peace, and an appeal to "every soldier, irrespective of party, to support this policy at the polls."



SIR WILLIAM HUGHES

Without, for a moment, attempting to reopen the issues existing between the two parties, it is possible to recognize the weak spot in the armor of the Official Labor Party, a defect which unquestionably contributed to its defeat. Whatever the members of that party might say, and, however clearly they might state their case, it has always been abundantly plain that practically every question was being considered by the party caucus from one standpoint and one standpoint only, namely, its influence upon the political prospects of Mr. Hughes. Whatever would help to bring about the downfall of the advocate of conscription was acceptable and entitled to a first claim on their attention; all other considerations were really secondary. In fact, the personal element entered into the question, as far as the Official Labor Party was concerned, far too much to hold out any prospect of success, in these times when the personal element is being inexorably excluded, to an ever greater degree, from all questions of any real moment. Mr. Hughes may not, in the opinion of some people, be entirely free from the "demagogic twist"; but, at any rate, his invitation is ever to wide views and whole-hearted thoroughness, both of which are, today especially, as welcome as they are necessary.

Easily Deceived.

The discussion on the identity of pictures, recently evoked by a great picture case in London, has called forth many anecdotes, amongst them a story of the Duke of Wellington, which, although not new, is perhaps worth repeating: There was, in the early part of the last century, a certain Academician named Jones, who was thought to resemble the Duke, and was rather inclined to dress for the part. One day a man approached Wellington, with the remark: "Mr. Jones, I believe." "Well," was the Duke's reply, "if you believe that, you'll believe anything."

Literary Art.

Literary art is the subject of a letter written by Mr. George Moore to the Westminster Gazette. The fact that Mr. Gladstone is said to have sat up the greater part of the night to finish "Treasure Island," and "this too after a hard day's work in the House of Commons," is not regarded by Mr. Moore as at all a proof of fine literary merit. If this were so, he remarks, "Lewis Seymour and Some Women" would be a better narrative than Balzac's or Turgeney's.

To Canada.

To our neighbors beyond our northern border we send felicitations upon the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the Dominion of Canada. July 1 was Dominion Day in Canada, and the Dominion could congratulate itself without immodesty upon its great growth and development during the fifty years of its existence. There was a Canada, of course, before the formation of the present consolidated Government, and there was once a union of Upper and Lower Canada, but this union, we believe, did not include the Maritime Provinces, or British Columbia, or the vast plains and wilderness intervening.

We have had some trivial disputes with Canada since the Dominion was formed, but she has been on the whole an excellent neighbor, and her prosperity and her well-being are matters of friendly interest on the part of the people of the United States. We wish her all the good things in life that are worth while striving for and possessing.—Hartford Daily Courant.

CHILDREN IN WAR ZONE.

Nerves of Little Ones Shattered by the Noise.

The French children found in the villages of northern France evacuated by the Germans under the pressure of the British and French offensives present a picture of the savagery of modern warfare, as characteristic as the Somme forest, shattered and broken by months of shell fire.

Many of these children are orphans without home or relatives. Many have been grievously wounded. Most of them suffer from a peculiar species of shell shock, which afflicts them generally with a sort of tremor not unlike St. Vitus' dance. They have had life and death, horrors human and inhuman, revealed to them in guises so terrible that they will never be quite normal again. All are under-fed and frail from confinement in cellars. Cut off suddenly from relatives and friends perhaps two years ago, they have continued to live within a few hundred yards of the front lines, listening always to the thud of shells and the crash of explosives, until their idea of heaven is "a place that is very quiet."

The condition of peasant men and women who have been living under the shadow of the invader through these long months and years has been bad enough, but the condition of the half-starved, wounded, and mentally-deranged little children has been far worse. All the children were collected and shepherded by the first entente troops into the newly occupied areas.

Everything that can be done to cure and care for them is now being done, constituting one of the most important immediate tasks of the French committees on reconstruction. Those who were orphans were taken far away from the sight and sound of shells, many of them to the south of France. The mildest cases were there put under the care of farm mothers. The more serious cases must, of course, be kept under close medical supervision in special institutions.

Children who were not orphans were not usually taken away from the district. Mothers or grandmothers could not bear to part with them altogether, so they were placed on farms nearby.

One of the patients, a five-year-old boy, who had been rendered dumb from shell shock, showed no improvement until after he had been in the hospital seven weeks. Then one day he opened his eyes after a long sleep and said with a twisted smile to the nurse: "It is—very—quiet here—I like—it."

Origin of "Gringo."

It has been said that the word "gringo," used in Mexico as nickname for the people of the United States, was an imitation of the first words of a song popular at the time of the Mexican war, commencing "Green grow the willows." The word "gringo" is a Spanish epithet applied to all foreigners, and in Mexico especially to the people of the United States. It has nothing to do with the words of the popular song mentioned, but is a corruption of the Spanish word "Griego," "Greek," which was applied by the uneducated classes in Spain to all persons of foreign speech.

PEANUT SOUP IS HERE

War Substitute For Meat Is Offered

The University of California offers something new in combating the high cost of living, and, incidentally, it is something new as a substitute for meat. The substitute is "peanut soup." Professor Meyer E. Jaffa, food nutrition expert, discovered the nutritive value of the peanut—and that a five cent bag contains as much protein and calories as a pound of beefsteak.

Here is how "peanut soup" is made:

To each serving use threequarters cup of milk and two tablespoonfuls peanut butter. Heat milk in double boiler. Then pour very slowly over peanut butter in a bowl, creaming the mixture to remove all lumps. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened. Season with salt and dash of nutmeg. Serve with popcorn or croutons—lightly buttered slices of bread, cut in cubes and browned in the oven.

This is a brand new recipe for the housewife, and it is being taught daily in the course of dietetics at the University of California summer school.

The teaching staff of the public schools of Orillia will have eight new members at the beginning of the fall term.

WHY DID GOD PERMIT, WHY DOES HE NOT STOP THE WAR?

Question Dealt With by Rev. Amos J. Thomas in His Sermon at George Street Church Last Night—Man Still a Free Moral Agent—Good to Come Out of Evil.

"Surely the wrath of man shall praise Thee." Psalm 76:10.

Why does God permit the war and why does He not stop it, were two questions dealt with by Rev. Amos J. Thomas, at the George Street Church last night, his discourse being based on the above passage of Scripture.

"Human freedom," said Mr. Thomas, "is the only present moral evil. As one has said, there is nothing new today except in the vastness of the trouble."

The only way by which God could have prevented the war was by taking away from man the gift of moral initiative. This he could not do without dethroning himself as the moral governor of the universe.

The same proof is adaptable to the question as to why God does not stop the war. This has been the cry of thousands as they have thought of the sacrifices on land and sea, of the helpless victims of barbarity and brutality, of the millions in want and famine.

Man a Free Agent.

The answer to all these questions is that man is a free moral agent and God lets him exercise his power. It would be presumptuous to say that the God who holds in His keeping the resources and forces of the world could not so use them as to hasten the day of peace.

Reference was here made by Mr. Thomas to the fate of Sennacherib's Assyrian army of 185,000 men which were miraculously destroyed one night at the gates of Jerusalem.

It is not unreasonable to believe, the speaker continued, that God could use such forces to bring about the same result. What He did then He could do today. But as it was left to the Assyrian King and his leaders to decide on the cessation of the struggle so that whatever God might do to hasten the end He will leave to those who brought it to pass responsibility for its conclusion.

Expecting Too Much.

But to expect God to do for us such things is to assume that we are altogether deserving of this intervention. While we have no doubt of the underlying justice of our cause yet are we quite sure that we do not share in wrong doing that has made this war possible? Is it not true that there is godlessness throughout the Empire? We have forgotten God. We have desecrated His day, blasphemed His name and ridiculed His revelation. We have been atheistic, materialistic, licentious, pleasure seeking. We have fostered and cuddled the iniquitous liquor traffic and kindred evils. What right, then, have we to look for wonderful deliverance through God's help? Our claim is small.

Plea For Divine Aid.

It is significant that it has been announced that an appeal is to be made to the people of the Empire to observe August 4 by calling upon their Creator. This is a move in the right direction, an attitude that has not been sufficiently emphasized. Stress has been laid on men, money and munitions, too great a disregard to the nation's relation to Almighty God. We should pay heed to that call in our land. We have talked much about material things. Now let us seriously consider the moral aspects of the world struggle.

If the people of the Empire were in the right attitude towards God it would not only give that added strength and courage which comes from the thought of moral rectitude but it would also bring help from the Almighty which we have no right to expect while indifferent to his will. Not that He would disregard human freedom but by cooperation with man would bring about conditions which would hasten the end. It is not God who stands in the way of peace. It is the human heart. It is not only the will of our foe but also our own.

The speaker here asked a question as to whether human freedom implied that God is powerless. Is He compelled to abdicate His throne in favor of man whom he has created? Is His purpose to be defeated by man's will? Reference was made to events in history to show that God brings His will to fulfilment by using not only the goodness but the evil of man. He makes the wrath of man to praise Him."

Good Out of Evil.

War with all its horrors has been accompanied and followed by blessings. It is a startling fact that the brightest period of literature, art and philosophy in Greece is contemporary with that nation's life and death struggle with Persia. England entered upon her greatest age of literature when fighting against Spain. One hundred years ago the French Revolution broke over Europe. In the midst of it came the modern missionary crusade—the modern Sunday School movement and the organization of the Bible Societies. These were not sent by chance but God's hand was evident in the blessings that came out of the darkness.

War Not All Calamity.

The present struggle is not altogether a calamity. It has cost the nations a tremendous toll. It has demanded the sacrifice of millions. It has wrung the hearts of mankind with anguish. It has devastated earth's fairest fields and man's finest handiwork but upon these sacrifices a noble structure is being built. Out of this darkness a better day is dawning unselfishness, unity, brotherliness, temperance, democracy, these are the things which are emerging from the mist of smoke infernos and bloodshed. God is no lover of bloodshed. He longs for the happiness of mankind, but there are things of more concern to Him, He is bringing about the righteousness of the earth even though it be by the blood of the thousands and the anguish of the nations. He is making the wrath of man to praise Him.

Mr. Thomas closed his discourse with an appeal for faith in the working out of God's purposes and the harmonising of the human with the Divine will. God, he said, will win out in the struggle. It may be the final victory will come not in spite of but by our aid.

Mr. Thomas will be out of the city next Sunday and it was for this reason that he preached last night the discourse which would be so appropriate for the anniversary of the breaking out of the war.

In spite of the intense heat there was a large congregation present, a number of members of other denominations being among the audience.

WILL PUT STOP TO JOY RIDING

FUEL CONTROLLER MAGRATH SAYS GASOLINE WILL BE SAVED.

Ottawa, July 30.—Drastic action may be taken to prevent automobile joy riding in order to conserve the gasoline supply for the needs of England and France, and necessary industries in Canada, particularly Western agriculture, which is beginning to absorb vast quantities of gasoline for power purposes. The matter is now being considered by Mr. C. A. Magrath, Fuel Controller, and if his investibation of the situation proves the need of economy, he will not hesitate to take action to curb the use of gasoline for needless automobile riding.

Gasoline, as a fuel, comes under the authority of the Fuel Controller. His operations are not confined, as is the general impression, to dealing with supplies of coal, wood, etc., for the coming winter.

In England, the authorities rigidly control the supply of all gasoline, and the use of automobiles for pleasure purposes is almost entirely forbidden. No one can buy a gallon of gasoline in Great Britain without stating for what it is to be used.

Mr. Magrath at present is making an investigation with a view to formulating action looking to the conservation of the supply of gasoline which is urgently needed for more useful purposes that mere automobile pleasure riding.

The Nottawasaga River, overflowing its banks near Angus, left several pools well stocked with fish which the Angus people have been taking, pickerel, pike, suckers and shad being among the different kinds.

OUT OF BELGIUM

Wife of the Minister to Brussels In Relief Work.

WAS ON THE BATTLE FRONT.

After Months of Heartrending Experiences Near the Carnage Mrs. Whitlock and Her Husband Now Rest in France.

Together with her husband, the American minister accredited to Belgium, Mrs. Brand Whitlock recently visited the section of the battle front held by the Belgian soldiers. The minister and his wife, with King Albert of the Belgians, were in the danger zone most of the time during their visit.

Through all the strife and bitterness of desolation Mrs. Whitlock has been with her husband, aiding and counseling. It is not a life of ease and luxury, if the stories that are coming from there are true. Correspondents say that Mr. and Mrs. Whitlock have been forced to live on black bread and the other coarse and meager fare of the natives of the country.

MRS. BRAND WHITLOCK.

As mayor of Toledo Mr. Whitlock established an enviable reputation, and his writings have intrenched him in literary favor. Mrs. Whitlock also is well known in literary circles, having contributed to leading magazines.

In every Belgian town you will find some kind of witness to the people's regard of this pair. The shops sell varieties of cheap little colored postcards, poorly drawn, some of them, but all bearing Mr. Whitlock's likeness and a few words of devotion and gratitude. Medals bearing his profile have been struck. Engravings of him are on sale in many cities. Almost everything he says or does goes by word of mouth from one to another all over Belgium. When Mr. and Mrs. Whitlock walked down a Brussels street all the men doffed their hats, and all the women, and even the children, bowed to them.

Mrs. Whitlock has done relief work for these stricken folks through months of devotion.

HANGING THE FLAG.

Points About the Display of Your Patriotism Worth Knowing.

Since our people have been stirred up to the point of asserting again their respect and regard for their national emblem by displaying it more frequently than usual certain little points of propriety should be remembered.

Every one knows that the flags on public buildings and ships in the army stations are raised in the morning and lowered at sundown just as regularly as the days come and go.

But a noted military authority recently gave out a code of etiquette in regard to the use and treatment of a flag which every householder should know.

The proper time for raising or putting out a flag is at sunrise or after, never before. The flag must be lowered at sunset. It is an actual mark of disrespect to allow the flag to fly throughout the night.

This is rather disconcerting to the average citizen, who thought he was performing a patriotic duty in flying his flag during some special celebration lasting for several days or a week. Naturally it is more or less trouble to raise it and lower it, so it was just allowed to stay during the entire period. The idea of offering disrespect to the flag was furthest from his thoughts.

The same authority also states that in draping a flag against a building the proper position for the blue field is toward the north or toward the east.

These are little things, but there is a right way as well as a wrong way for everything, and surely every one wants to treat the flag properly.

Cork For Filling.

Get from your grocer a quantity of ground cork in which grapes are packed. With it fill pillows for the porch and hammock. They are light and comfortable and not injured by storm. They will not mat and draw dampness as so many fillings do.

HOW COL. MACKLEM SAVED MILLIONS FOR BRITISH

Famous Inventor Perfected Plan for Making of Munitions—Receives $100,000 for His Work and is Honored by King.

There is today in Toronto a soldier of fortune whose deeds, exploits, and accomplishments would easily take rank above the most gripping tales of fiction. He is Col. Macklem, D.C.M., inventor, killer of two barbaric Huns, saviour of his officer's life, late mechanic of London, Ont., native of Tilbury, Ont., and late private of the 33rd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

One of his shell inventions has saved Britain over $500,000 a day in the cost of manufacture.

He has received an honorarium of $100,000 from the British Government, been dined and wined by royalty, lords, knights, and millionaires, and received all over England and in his private's uniform at that.

Loses Use of Left Eye.

After being twice wounded in the trenches of France, latterly at the third battle of Ypres, the then Pte. Macklem was sent to a hospital in England, where he remained five months. He had been shot through the left side of the temple by an explosive bullet, which burst, as it left the top of the nose severely disfiguring his face. Pte. Macklem, though had the satisfaction of knowing that he had just despatched several Huns with his own hands. He was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal, which, with the exception of the Victoria Cross, is the highest honor which can be shown to a private. "I got it for killing three Huns and taking one of our wounded officers away from them," is the way the young veteran soldier told of the affair.

He lost the use of the left eye, and his nose was severely damaged.

Col. Macklem's Great Invention.

How he came to improve the hand grenade which is now being used by all the British forces is told by Col. Macklem himself. "I was convalescing at the hospital and how the idea first came I really don't know. But I knew then that hundreds of our boys at the front had lost their lives with the time grenades. They had a lever and pin. The pin had to be pulled and then the thing was ready to go in about five seconds. Premature explosion or delay in throwing it meant certain death to our own boys. I know that several Toronto boys were killed in that way." The new invention is cheaper, carries more explosive, and is far less dangerous in handling. Col. J. D. Courtney, a British C.O., wrote: "This bomb has been proved in tests and if born out in actual use, means the saving of thousands and thousands of lives in the British service." It has since been universally adopted for use.

In January, 1916, he was discharged from the C.E.F., "being no longer physically fit for war service." On his discharge he was immediately taken on the staff of the Imperial Munitions Staff at London, with the rank of captain, in recognition of his service. Six weeks later his services merited the rank of major, for he had meanwhile invented a shell "detonater" which is said to make artillery shells equally effective without the brass caps and fittings which are very costly. This latest invention has been inspected and approved of by the British Government, and by its use the Munitions Board has figured a saving of approximately $515,000 per day on the total output in the British Isles. Since its acceptance by the Government the inventor has been raised to the rank of colonel.

LINDSAY LUBIN A SOCIAL LION NO TRACE FOUND

OF THE ELUSIVE FRENCH-CANADIAN—SEEN IN BROCKVILLE.

Chief Short of Lindsay has received no information concerning the whereabouts of G. A. Lubin, the young French-Canadian who is wanted in that city for theft, and fraud. There is a report going around that Lubin was seen in Brockville recently, and this rumor may have some foundation, as he operated his cheque scheme in Kingston.

Chief Short has covered the country with descriptions of the sharper, and it is strange that he is not in the toils ere this.

One of his freak stunts while in Lindsay was the proposed organization of a social club among the young set. He nearly persuaded a local launch owner to fit up his craft which had been lying idle, as he wished to rent it for the season.

Lubin was a social lion all right in the circle in which he scintillated, but he had not sufficient greenbacks to keep up the pace.

CHIEF'S AUTO SAVED HORSES ONE LONG DRIVE

TRANSFORMER ON FIRE AT LANSDOWNE STREET LAST NIGHT.

The Fire Department received an alarm last night by telephone, and the news was also given that a transformer was on fire near Lock and Landsdowne streets. Here again the "Little Red Devil" saved the fire horses a hard run on a hot night. Away went the car with two chemicals, and after squelching the flames remedied the trouble until Superintendent Beatty of the Utilities Commision arrived.

This is also added reason why there should be more truck apparatus at the fire hall.

A blowing adder, three feet and a half long by six inches round, was killed by C. Visau at Port Burwell. The snake was about to make away with a hen, the mother of a brood of ducklings, when her cries for help were noticed by Mr. Visau.

AVOID THE RUSH

Call Early At City Hall And Pay Your Taxes

Wednesday is the last day on which you can pay your taxes and save the discount. Tax Collector Green and his staff of assistants have been very busy during the days that marked the closing of the week. A few little items need adjusting, particularly where the property has changed hands, or where a division of interests has occurred.

Tax Collector Green has therefore stated, "It is nice to get up in the morning and pay your taxes between 8 and 9 o'clock. Avoid the rush and the hot weather."

PRIZE OPEN TO CANADIANS

New York Man Widens Offer For Bombing Berlin

One thousand dollars awaits the first Canadian aviator who will drop bombs on Berlin. Mr. Sigmond Saxe, of New York City, who has recently announced that he will present a Liberty Bond, of $1,000 denomination, to the first "American" aviator to bombard the German capital from the aid has agreed to extend his offer to include Canadians in the Royal Flying Corps.

Upon publication of Mr. Saxe's letter in the United States newspapers, The Toronto News telegraphed him asking whether his offer was open to Canadian aviators in the Royal Flying Corps. The reply reads:

"Only to happy to include in my thousand dollar Liberty bond offer aviators of the Royal Flying Corps.

ADVANCE STYLES.

Tips About What to Order and Wear This Summer.

A fashion expert writes:

"Of course you are always interested in the new things not only for the pleasure such knowledge affords, but because having a good, broad, general knowledge of fashions past, present and future makes us better shoppers and enables us to be better dressed for less money than if we have no real understanding of fashions and purchase promiscuously without reason, except that a certain garment or accessory tickles our fancy at the moment.

"As summer advances look for more short sleeves, three-quarter and elbow in length, especially on dresses and fancy blouses.

"Long skirts are on their way, though frankly I feel it will be autumn before we see skirts to any extent longer than are now worn. And I believe then the longer skirt will not be popular for the street clothes that business and professional women wear.

"Separate coats, it is said, will be cut without any ripple—that is, they will have closer fitting, straight sections.

"Bodices darted and fitted to wear outside the skirt have lately been introduced by one of the French designers, but here again is a fashion that has been slightly in evidence for a long while. You shouldn't worry about being forced to wear them if you don't want to. One never has to wear what one really dislikes in order to be in fashion these days. There are always more than one and frequently many designs from which to make a choice.

"Midseason should bring silk suits with perky little bolero jackets, many of them having seven-eighths or three-quarter sleeves, and nothing could be cooler or more attractive for warm weather wear than suits of this character.

"French designers are sponsoring hats trimmed profusely with flowers—a welcome change this after our long acceptance of severely trimmed or untrimmed millinery.

"Evening capes are in line now and come at a most opportune time, for if one ever needs an easily slipped on wrap it is in the summer."

Boiled Raisin Cake.

Let one and one-half cupfuls seeded raisins simmer in water to cover for twenty minutes. Cream three-quarters cupful sugar, one-quarter cupful butter and one egg beaten light, one and one-half cupfuls flour, one-half cupful raisin water, one teaspoonful each soda, cinnamon and nutmeg sifted with the flour. Add the raisins, well dredged with flour. Bake in a moderate oven forty-five minutes. This cake has a flavor all its own.

Just a Cue.

If you are ambitious enough to attempt the chiffon or georgette crape blouse buy three-quarters of a yard of half inch metallic ribbon to harmonize with the color of the blouse. Finish each end with a metal ball or silk tassel and tack the ribbon down at the back of the neck and at the shoulder seams, letting the ends hang loose at the front.

FOR "FLAPPERS."

Charming Gown For the In Between Age of Girls.

White linen is here cut one piece, box plaits falling from the shoulder seams and perfectly pressed into a skirt. Coral colored linen is used for collar cuffs and belt, the disks on the skirt being hand embroidered in coral floss. A few white pearl buttons do the rest.

SIMPLE BEAUTY.

ECONOMY POINTS.

Simple Ways of Doing Common Things Best.

A satisfactory way of fixing hangers to light weight dresses or blouses is to crochet them on. Insert the crochet hook into the cloth on the inner seam of the sleeve and make a chain stitch of the desired length, then fasten like a loop.

Children's sleeves often have to be lengthened, and the best way to provide for this is in the cuffs. Cut the cuffs about one-third wider than wanted, then stitch one side to the sleeve and sew sleeve and cuff seam together before sewing the other side of cuff to sleeve. Turn sleeve wrong side out and turn the extra width of the cuff in and whip to sleeve. When the sleeve is to be lengthened it is an easy matter to take out the whipping stitches, let down the cuff and whip it into place again.

When sewing on hooks and eyes pin a tape measure where the hooks are to go and sew the hooks an inch apart. Then pin the tape measure on the opposite side and sew on the eyes. You will find that in this manner you can do the work much quicker and it is less wearisome than measuring each one.

Gathering or shirring by hand is tedious, and the work can be done with more ease on the sewing machine. Simply lengthen the stitch and hold the top thread between thumb and forefinger and sew as usual. The tightness of the top thread will gauge the fullness of your gathers.

From your old blankets you may be able to cut enough to make a baby blanket. Bind the edges with white satin feather stitched in place and if the blanket warrants it embroider a dainty wreath with baby's initial in the center.

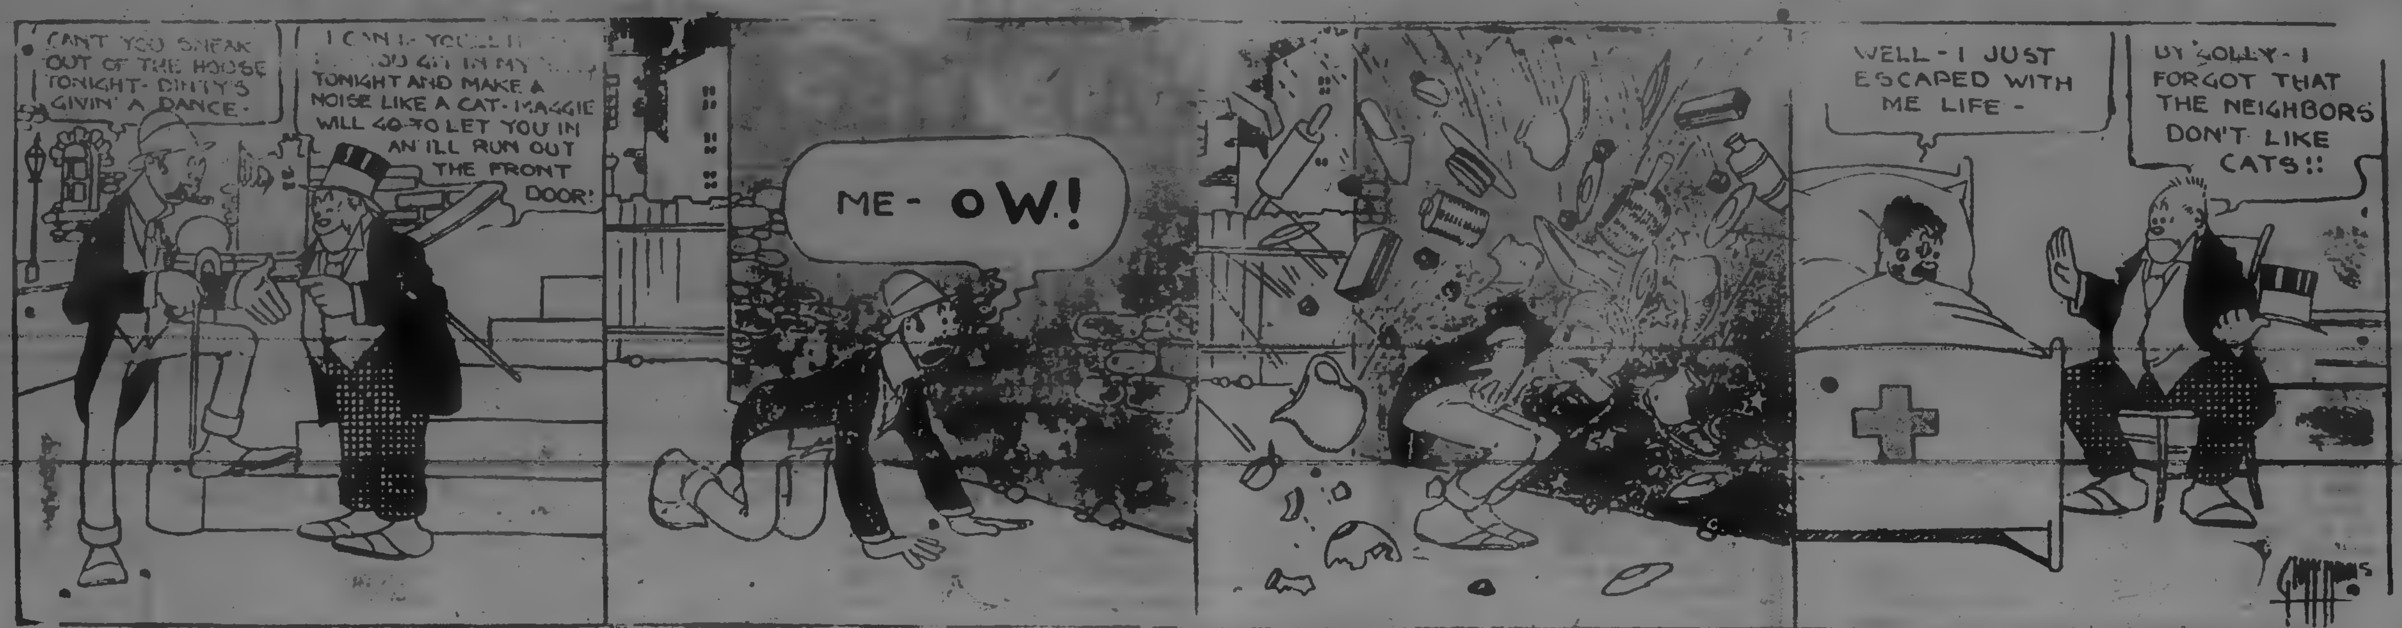
BRINGING UP FATHER

By GEORGE McMANUS



CAN'T YOU SNEAK OUT OF THE HOUSE TONIGHT- DINTY'S GIVIN' A DANCE-
I CAN- YOU'LL [illegible] GIT IN MY [illegible] TONIGHT AND MAKE A NOISE LIKE A CAT- MAGGIE WILL GO TO LET YOU IN AN I'LL RUN OUT THE FRONT DOOR!
ME- OW!
WELL- I JUST ESCAPED WITH ME LIFE-
BY GOLLY- I FORGOT THAT THE NEIGHBORS DON'T LIKE CATS!!

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

ON THE OTHER HAND.

An inshoot is a little thing
That gets the batter mad;
He swings in vain, with might and main,
Which makes the pitcher glad.
But if he happens to connect
And make a three-base hit,
It is the batter's turn to grin
While the hurler has a fit.

Ray Caldwell so far has kept his promise not to go to the bat against John Barleycorn. It's good-bye, John, old boy, this time, says Ray, and no more lovers' squabble. Well, J. B. can't say that Caldwell neglected him very much in the past.

You cannot always sometimes tell. Here's Mollwitz playing first base for Kansas City in phenomenal fashion, while the major league pilots are rubbing their eyes and wondering why in the world they ever permitted him to drop out of the big time show. Sometimes people don't know a good thing when they see it, and then, again, sometimes the jolt that accompanies the notification "Back to the minors" is just the tonic necessary to bring out the stuff that's in a player.

Sometimes in the stilly night you can hear John McGraw chuckle. Don't think he's having a nightmare, for he's not; he's just thinking of his wise move in passing over Lee Magee, whom he had a chance to get if he wanted to pay $22,500 for him and pay him a big salary besides. But John steered clear of the deal. At the time the Yankees bought him, handing over the above-mentioned sum and singing him at a salary of $8000. Funny, how we always feel so good when the other fellow gets stung!

The long, strong pitching arms of Tyler and Rudolph are hanging on to the scruff of the neck of the Braves and keeping them from falling into the deep, dark cellar. And that's some load to hold, too.

Do you see that animated group over there? It's the Athletics standing around Joe Dugan, the Holy Cross boy, and pinning a rose on him. Joe is turning out to be a crackerjack shortstop, and is winning the distinguished approval of the fans.

Grouchy Gus says: "Early to bed and early to rise make a man healthy and adds to his size." This sentiment is agreed to unanimously. The only variation occurs in people's understanding of what is meant by "early."

Little drops of liquor
Going down your throat
Makes your eyes look bleary
And gets your liver's goat.

The Cincinnati Reds have the distinction of having on the club's roster four men who made themselves famous as football players before their entrance into professional baseball. They are: Christy Mathewson, Jim Thorpe, Earl Neale and Bill Kopf. While a student at Bucknell, Matty was better known as a gridiron warrior than as a pitcher. He was noted for his great line plunging, and his drop kick was a marvel to behold. He once enabled his team to triumph over the Navy with a field goal in the last few minutes of play. Thorpe has been considered by many competent judges to have been the greatest football player ever known. Neale was a gridiron star with a mid-western college three or four years ago, and earned for himself the nickname of "Greasy" by his ability to thread his way down the field. Kopf played on the Fordham eleven a few years ago, and made quite a name for himself.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

TROOPS DEPART FOR OVERSEAS

LOADING OF TRANSPORTS WILL BE FEATURE AT TORONTO FAIR.

A National Spectacle will be the Grand Stand production at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, planned on a scale calculated to write a new page in the history of patriotic pageantry. The Heights of Quebec are to be reproduced on a mammoth scale, with the St. Lawrence and its burden of battleships and fighting craft in the foreground. The story will deal with the half century from Confederation to the present day, and patriotism and infectious faith in Canada will dominate the giant-sized panorama, which will achieve a climax when file after file of Canadian overseas troops embark on hugh transports and proceed down the river behind a convoy of destroyers on their way across the submarine-infested seas to the battle fronts "Over there."

NO DECISION IN WAR THROUGH SUBMARINES

View Expressed By The Commander Of Austrian Fleet

Amsterdam, July 30. — Vice-Admiral Maximillian Njegovan, commander of the Austrian fleet, in an interview given to the Nieue Frais Presse, declared he did not believe that submarines would bring about a decision in the war. He said:

"At present the U-boats are much spoken of as making England, Austria's principal enemy, uncomfortable, but they merely are a means towards victory. It would be a mistake to believe from the experiences of this war that big ships are useless, but for us the essential type is that of the light cruisers.

"If we had a great fleet the war with Italy would have been finished long ago. Indeed, the war would never have been possible."

Ottawa, July 30.—Hon. R. Rogers, Minister of Public Works, was asked in Parliament what had become of the statute of D'Arcy McGee. Before the statue could be shipped to Canada, the country was over-run by Germans and the work of art was destroyed. The sculptor had been so discouraged he had not heard from him since. He said the question of securing a new statue would be taken up later.

Senator W. H. Sharpe, a brother, said that he was confident the report was erroneous, and he thought the Sam Sharpe referred to was a nephew. Senator Sharpe, however, has cabled to Sir Geo. Perley to make certain.

of her oft-repeated contention that to the last she did her utmost to avoid war? She has fastened the blame now upon Austria and now upon England. Here she appears as the centre and director of a cold-blooded plot in which she and her accomplices consider weeks before hand, how they will make it impossible for Serbia to accept their demands and impossible for Russia to tolerate them.

AMEXES MAY BE NAME GIVEN TO TROOPS OF U.S.

Paris, July 30.—The American troops in France have chosen their own soubriquet, according to the Matin today, adopting the name "Amexes."

This was formed by piecing together the first two letters of the words "American Expedition," in a manner similar to that adopted in forming the word "Anzac," by which the Australian and New Zealand soldiers in the British forces are known.

A "mile of pennies" campaign in St. Thomas has resulted in something over 50,000 pennies, which are now on deposit in one of the local banks, and which will be used by the Daughters of the Empire to buy yarn for soldiers' socks.

The residential streets in Strathroy will be laid out with a road allowance of 26 feet, allowing twenty feet on either side for boulevard.

The officials of the Machinists Union will start an active campaign in a few days for the purpose of organizing the auto industry of the province. CHARGED WITH THEFT OF MONEY

HENRY FRECHETTE, FINDS HIMSELF IN TROUBLE WITH POLICE.

Shortly after noon to-day Henry Fretchette, one of the tribe of wandering French-Canadians, who never hold one job for any length of time, was locked up at the police station, and the chances are that before he is allowed to wander again he will have to answer several charges of pilfering.

The immediate cause of his arrest was of stealthily entering the grocery store of Bert Heard, Beorge and Sherbrooke sts., and when the proprietor's back was turned, making a dash at the money drawer and succeeding in grabbing a little over $7.00. Mr. Heard made after the thief, and word was sent to the police and P. C. Pratt was soon on the heels of the pursued and pursuing. The climax occurred at the C.P.R., where Mr. Heard got a hold on his man. Ninety-seven cents in coppers and $6.10 in silver was disgorged by the wily Frenchman.

P. C. Pratt took him to the police station.

It now appears that Frechett tried to work with the Leonard Construction Company, and has been hanging round the bunk houses, and it is now suspected that he is responsible for a number of thefts that have occurred there. Some of the men have missed razors and other articles besides some money.

CENTRAL CHARITY BOARD

The Central Charity Board will meet this evening at 7.45.

Blade spent the week end fishing, or trying to fish, at Jack's Lake. The party did not spend much time fishing, according to reports, but confined their efforts to warding off the onrushes of deer flies, black flies and mosquitos. The party report that the fish were not plentiful.

ALLIES BEGIN A NEW OFFENSIVE

TWO MILLION RUSS TROOPS FALLING BACK

Officers Are Making Desperate Efforts to Stop the Retreat.

DESERTERS SHOT DOWN.

Four Hundred Are Killed and Thousand Injured in Petrograd Riots.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 31.—A despatch to the Post from Petrograd says it is conservatively estimated that more than two million Russian troops are steadily marching rearwards.

A despatch to the Times from the headquarters of the Russian seventh army says the situation is rather more hopeful. Panics among retreating troops are ruthlessly suppressed. Deserters are shot and attempts to spread a panic are suppressed by prompt executions. Deserters, spies, and agitators who enjoyed complete immunity under the committee system, lie dead on the highways. Papers pinned on the corpses reads, Here lies a traitor to his country."

A man who has just arrived at Stockholm from Petrograd says the street fighting there a week ago was more serious than the published reports admited. Government reports he declared showed four hundred killed and one thousand taken to hospitals.

HOSTILE CROWD CHASE SEVIGNY

MINISTER'S STAND ON CONSCRIPTION MAKES HIM ENEMIES IN QUEBEC.

Montreal, July 31.—"Le Canada" published a story to the effect that Hon. Mr. Sevigny was scared from Valleyfield by a hostile crowd who apparently did not approve of his stand on the conscription issue.

Le Canada says in substance that Hon. Mr. Sevigny went to Valleyfield for the purpose of ascertaining the feelings of the people towards the conscription bill, that he entered the Chateau de Salaberry, and that shortly afterwards, when it became known that he was there, a crowd gathered in front of the hotel and called for the Minister to come out and address them. Cries of "traitor" and "renegade" are said to have been raised, and the aspect of the crowd was so threatening that it is declared the Minister escaped from the building via the back door, and was whirled away in a motor car to the Beauharnois River, where he boarded a yacht and sailed for parts unknown.

CADET PEARSON KILLED AT CAMP

HIS COMPANION'S LEG IS BROKEN WHEN HIS AIRPLANE GOES WRONG.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Camp Borden, July 31.—An aeroplane containing Cadets Pearson of Comber, and Archibald of Victoria, B.C., fell west of the camp this morning. Pearson was killed, but Archibald escaped with a broken leg. Archibald could not explain what caused the accident.

Col. Sam Sharpe Is Not Among Missing

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, July 31. — Col. Sam Sharpe, M.P., is not missing, but is safe and well in France. The rumor placing him among the casualties was founded on confusion.

FRENCH CAPTURE 167 PRISONERS IN RAID

Three Hun Regiments Yield Toll of Officers and Men---Britain's Ally Will Remain Resolute to End of War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, July 31.—French forces last night made a successful attack against German positions along a fifteen hundred yard front at Laroyere and west of Epine de Chevregny, on the Aisne front, says the French official statement issued this afternoon. The German counter-attack was crushed. The French took one hundred and sixty-seven prisoners, including two officers and fifteen non-commissioned officers belonging to three regiments. The artillery and infantry, the statement adds, were active in the Cerny-Hurtebise sector.

FRENCH RESOLUTE AS EVER.

London, July 31.—Addressing the press representatives in the gallery of the House of Commons, Premier Lloyd George referred to the buoyancy of the French nation after three years of war, and said:

"I found during my visit to Paris that the spirit of the French people was better than I had ever known it. There was a sense of discouragement at the collapse of the Russian armies, but in spite of all, the French were as resolute as ever.

"It depends very largely on the French whether we shall get through to the end. If the French and ourselves hang together, we shall get through despite our Russian troubles. The Russians are an incalculable quantity; they fought when we least expected them, and they hung back at times when it seemed they ought to go on. My latest information is that Russia will recover and become as formidable as she ever has been."

LEO FLOOD IS PRESENTED WITH BURNHAM WATCH

Large Gathering at Ennismore Town Hall Last Night---Patrick Perdue Wins Lynch Prize and Mr. Gillespie Makes a Special Award

The pupils in the schools of Ennismore township and parish have a chance to compete for two prizes every year, the Burnham gold watch offered by Capt. Burnham, M.P., for the one taking the highest stand at the entrance examination, and the other a $5 gold piece awarded by Mr. James Lynch of this city to the second on the list. This year the watch was won by Leo Flood, a pupil of the school in the village, who made a high percentage at the recent examination at which five pupils from that school were successful. His teacher is Miss V Galvin, a native of the township, who has held her present position for the past nine years, during which she has brought the school up to a high state of efficiency and has done her full share in developing the educational standard for which Ennismore is so justly famous.

There were two claimants for the Lynch prize this year, Patrick Perdue, another of Miss Galvin's pupils, and Miss Velma Lowes, of No. 7 Emily, not in the township but still in the parish. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., will give a $5 gold piece to the latter.

Presentation Last Night.

The Burnham watch was presented to the successful candidate by Mr. Burnham himself, at a large gathering of Ennismore people in the township hall. Two auto loads went out from the city, among the visitors from here being Capt. Burnham, Mr. Gillespie, Judge Huycke, Ald. A. H. Stratton, W. A. Pratten, James Lynch and George A. Helson.

Reeve Young made an excellent chairman and on the platform with him were the visitors from the city and his daughter, who is principal of the Continuation School at Ennismore. After presenting the watch and complimenting the winner, Capt. Burnham gave one of his timely and instructive addresses. He praised the work for education that had been done by the former parish priest, Father Fitzpatrick, and that has been continued by his successor Father McGuire.

Mr. Burnham told the young people before him that one of the best means of acquiring knowledge was to learn from those who know, just as a traveller new to the road enquires his way of some one, who has gone before. One of the most important of all problems to decide is what to read and what not to read. Better read a useful work one hour a day than spend ten hours over the other kind.

He congratulated pupil and teacher upon their joint success. Leo Flood may go up higher and be first at other examinations in Collegiate Institute or University. But even if nothing brilliant is achieved so long as failures are avoided that is what really counts.

Capt. Burnham expressed regret over the illness of Father McGuire who is now in St. Joseph's hospital. In conclusion he ventured the opinion that unless men have a care the newly enfranchised women would yet beat them out.

Judge Heycke's Address.

Judge Huycke gave one of the apt addresses, sparkling with pleasantries, abounding with philosophy and replete with fatherly counsel for which he is famous. One of the points made by him was that the pupils who failed to win the prize

HUN OUTRAGES ON BELGIANS

ENTIRE FAMILY WAS PUT TO DEATH ON AN UNPROVED CHARGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 31.—A despatch received today by wireless press from Amsterdam says the German authorities at Liege arrested, tried and sentenced to death within three days an influential Liege merchant named Groneret, his wife and their two daughters aged twenty and fourteen, on an unproved charge of espionage. The father and mother were both shot in the presence of their daughters.

The latter were offered their freedom if they revealed the names of their parents' accomplices. The girls refused, the eldest stating "If we speak we might cause fifty people to be killed. We would rather die alone." She was immediately shot.

The younger girl was then tortured, outraged and shot.

ALLIES BEGIN NEW OFFENSIVE IN FLANDERS

Three Lines of Trenches Are Taken on a Twenty-Mile Front.

GREAT BARRAGE FIRE.

Germans Are Unable To Resist Onslaught With Fresh Troops.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

British Front in France, July 31.—The Entente allied forces which launched an offensive this morning have advanced well beyond the shattered front line of German trenches. In many places they have reached the second line defenses on a twenty mile front of attack according to an early report. The British and French troops went into the battle under cover of what perhaps was the greatest barrage fire ever seen. The Entente artillery is moving forward and whole situation is satisfactory in every particular.

Advance Continues.

"Between Dixmude and Boesinghe the attackers reported they had secured two first lines of trenches after having fought over the most difficult ground imaginable. The British have again captured La Basseeville which they recently relinquished to the Germans. The British and French forces are falling upon large concentration of German artillery and fresh troops which have been rushed up.

The Entente allies have established complete air superiority and Entente military officials say morale of the Germans here is not up to the old standard.

The attack was made on a new front gained after the British capture of Messines ridge which was a preliminary to this last move.

Three Lines Taken.

Three lines of German trenches in Flanders have been captured by the British forces, most of the points stormed were between Boesinghe and Warnelon.

PTE. L. B. BASSETT DIES OF WOUNDS

THREE OTHERS FROM THIS DISTRICT ARE AMONG THE INJURED.

The casualty list published to-day contains the names of several of the soldier boys from this district:—

Died of Wounds

Private L. B. Bassett, of Madoc, who was previously reported wounded is now reported as having died of wounds.

HEAVY LOSSES FROM FLOODS

TWO LARGE IRON BRIDGES ARE SWEPT AWAY IN QUEBEC.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, July 31.—Floods even worse than those of last month when two drownings occurred and scores of narrow escapes were recorded, are sweeping Beauce County today. A huge iron bridge at St. Mary's is gone and also the Quebec central iron bridge at Valley Junction. All telephone and telegraph poles are down beyond St. Henedine. Dorchester county, and connections are impossible. No drownings are so far reported, but many families are marooned in houses on the elevated spots.

ALLIES MAKE SWEEP ON WESTERN FRONT

British and French Join in Advance Against Foe and Reach All Objectives---A Large Number of Prisoners Are Taken

London, July 31.—British troops, in conjunction with the French forces on their left, attacked the German positions along a wide front to the north of the River Lys, at 3:50 a.m. today. The Allied troops, according to the British official statement, have captured their objectives on the whole front, and reported making satisfactory progress at all points. A considerable number of prisoners have already been captured by the French and British.

The British casualties in all the fields for July total 71,832.

STRAIN GROWS INTENSE.

The strain along the greater part of the front has grown intense. The artillery fire is especially extreme to the north and around Lens. It is never quiet. At times the shelling is terrible. Every way, except that no concerted infantry action on a large scale has been undertaken, conditions are those of a great battle. The initiative universally is with us. It is we who do the most raiding and have the advantage in weight of guns. Aerial supremacy is our beyond dispute. Nevertheless the Germans are very active, in the northern sector especially. The Germans are firing enormous numbers of gas shells around Lens, both to the north and south sides of the city. Our pressure never relaxes.

RUSSIANS HELD, GERMANS AT BAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, July 31. — North of Husiatyn, on the Russo-Galician frontier the Russians yesterday restored their positions on the east bank of the River Zbroes. Austro-German efforts to force passage across the Zbroes in region of Puklany and Podlipie were frustrated.

ON THE RUMANIAN FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 31.—The Rumanian official statement of Saturday says between the Casin Valley and Putna the enemy attacks were everywhere repulsed. Fighting is in progress for the possession of the Magura Casilunin Height.

THE WEATHER

While the extreme heat continues, the thermometer to-day did not touch the high figure it did yesterday. This afternoon about two o'clock the mercury reached 91 degrees as its highest. Last night was again extremely warm, the lowest figures being 73 degrees.—W.P.

BERLIN REPORTS BATTLE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, July 31.—Strong attacks by the Entente Allies have commenced along a wide front from Yser to Lys in Flanders, says an official statement issued today by German general staff. Infantry battle in Flanders, statement adds, has thus opened.

Those Who Will Be Exempt, Methods of Appeal, Penalties and System of Collection---Is Now Ready for Committee

Ottawa, July 31.—Copies of Sir Thomas White's income tax bill were distributed in parliament preparatory to its discussion in committee of the House of Commons. In addition to the details of the measure made public the bill contains the list of exemptions, methods of appeal, penalties and system of collection.

Under the measure any person making a false statement in any return required by the Minister of Finance will be liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000 or six months' imprisonment or both. For such default in complying with provisions of the Act governing returns the person will be liable to a penalty of $100 a day during the period of default. Boards of referees consisting of not more than three members are to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council and will act as courts of revision and hear appeals. If a taxpayer is dissatisfied with the decision of a board of referees he may within 20 days appeal to the finance Minister. Such appeals will come under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court

Returns in the case of corporations, associations of other bodies shall be made and signed by the president, secretary or chief agent having a personal knowledge of the business.

The Act makes it compulsory on the part of employers to deduct from salaries of employes subject to the income tax the amount of the tax and to forward it to the Finance Department.

CAPT. BURNHAM EXPLAINS CASE AT KINGSTON

Military Officers Were Willing to Return to Civil Life.

SENSATION IS EXPLODED.

Attempt of the Liberal Press to Stir Up Strife Ends in Failure.

The following letter appears in today's Mail and Empire. It is in direct contradiction of a dangerous rumor set afloat by The Globe yesterday tending to shake public confidence in Sir Robert Borden at this critical time. Mr. Burnham is particularly well qualified to speak on the matter as it was to him that the two officers in question came at Ottawa and it was he who visited the Department of Militia on their behalf and it was with him they visited the Civil Department to which they are to return.

They were perfectly satisfied with the justice of their treatment but hoped some day to get to the front which will probably be the case when officers now at the front return on home service.

The following is the letter:

NO FAVORITISM.

Editor of The Mail and Empire:

Sir,—The Globe's large type scandal item today charging, via Kingston Whig special, that Lieut.-Cols. Brown and Wilson are being retired from headquarters, Kingston, because the Government wishes to promote favorites, is false. I am fully cognizant of this case, and had it from these gentlemen's own lips last week that although they had wanted to get to the front they were needed at Kingston, and remained there, and that the reason they were being retired is that officers from the front will get first chance of home promotion, those in England next and those not out of Canada last, and these officers come under this class, and will go back to civil life to await the call of their class.

Yours, etc.,
J. H. BURNHAM.
Peterboro, July 30.

BORDEN BIPLANE DID NOT ARRIVE HAD A MISHAP

AVIATOR PROUDFOOT WAS FORCED TO LAND ON A FARM IN EMILY.

A large Curtis Biplane passed over Lindsay on a practice flight Saturday shortly after noon, and was seen by hundreds of people. The machine travelled at a good speed toward Peterboro. When about three miles from Downeyville it alighted in a field of grain belonging to Mr. Wm. O'Brien, owing to the running short of gasoline. In taking to the air again, owing to the cramped space and tall grain the aeroplane did not rise quickly enough to quite clear a fence, and came to earth with a damaged wing and broken propeller.

A military truck from Camp Borden arrived Sunday, and after dismantling the machine took it back to Borden for repairs.

The aviator, Cadet Proudfoot, was on a practice flight at Camp Borden, and while he was up a cloud came between him and the earth, so that he lost his bearings. When he could see the earth again he was on this side of Lake Simcoe, and was down in this district looking for Camp Borden. This is the second time this machine has been lost, it having been gone for three days not long ago up near Georgian Bay.

When flying over Lindsay Saturday it was about three thousand feet up in the air. Hundreds from Lindsay and the district around Downeyville and Omemee went to see the aeroplane on Sunday.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH TUESDAY, JULY 31, 1917

THE CALL FROM THE TRENCHES

—I wish you could hear, as I do tonight, the call of those boys for reinforcements. It is a long way from here to the battlefields, but I can hear the call. If you could hear it as I do, I do not believe that there is one of you who would hesitate to do all in your power to put men in France. We must have these men or we are lost. Shall it be said that the boys laid down their lives for us to get out from under at this critical time? I do not think so. Let us then get to work, no matter how. Let us get down to business at once.—Dr. Michael Clark (Liberal) at Hamilton

A BLUNDER.

THE MORNING HERALD of Sydney, Australia, says that it is now apparent that a blunder was made when the conscription issue was submitted to the people. A nation, in seeking such powers as that sought by the federal parliament, should have taken counsel of its "braves," of its fighting men only. It should have been a question put to men of military age only, and put in another form. Instead of that, it was decided by the women's vote and the vote of old men and women, frightened by the tales put up by the unscrupulous Laborites, who did not hesitate to put their great organisation to work to accomplish the downfall of those above them in the political world, not for the sake of a principle, but for the sake of office. The loafer and shirker only too readily followed their lead, and they, together with those who studied only their own short-sighted, selfish ends, gave them the victory for the time being.

In a general election the same conditions will prevail and the same objections will hold when conscription is the issue. The men who, by holding back from their duty, rendered such a measure necessary, will vote against it, and will be able to rally all their friends to their support. People who have no direct interest in the new law will naturally oppose it. And yet, granting all this, the indications are that the issue will win out at the polls in all provinces of the Dominion with one exception.

THE SLACKER ACRE.

I AM the idle acre.
You will find me on every farm.
For a long time no one has paid any attention to me.
And I am getting tired of being overlooked.
Besides, I hear that I am needed—BADLY.
They say that many folks across the sea and in the cities will go hungry unless each acre does his bit
And here I am, loafing.
The busy acres are sneering at me.
I can hear them whisper "Slacker."
They say I am not willing to do my share.
But I AM willing.
If somebody will take me and treat me right, I will furnish Thirty bushels of wheat, or Seventy-five bushels of corn, or Sixty tons of tomatoes, or
Lots of other good things.
I'm not the slacker.
It's the man who neglects me.
He is the slacker.

COUNTING ITS CHICKENS.

THE NEW YORK SUN says that Col. Mulberry Sellers himself would have contemplated with wonder and amaze the spectacle of the Germans, at this stage of their game, figuring on the size of the indemnity they will exact from the United States. "Was fur plunder!" says the great Hindenburg, as he gazes over the top of his shattered line to where in fancy he can see the buildings of New York rearing their towers skyward. The professors are called in. Great men for creating public sentiment, the German professors. They point out that the colossal capital of America will be back of England when Deutschland shall be truly liber- [illegible] that colossal capital must be transferred to German coffers. Perhaps they overlook the Scriptural injunction that if you desire to spoil a strong man's house you must first bind the strong man. Still that is easy enough. By sinking sixteen million tons of shipping a month—or was it only 1,600,000 tons?—England can be reduced to starvation, our armies in France cut off, and our safety vaults made to fly open at German demand.

Something like $20,000,000,000 is the suggestion of one professor as to the size of the American contribution. What chair he occupies is not made public, but it is probably either that of higher mathematics or else one of the art of international robbery — a subject Germans should be peculiarly fitted to teach.

With the course of the war in all its activities except those of the submarine going steadily against the Germans, it seems merely ridiculous that they should be seriously considering indemnities at this moment. But it is characteristic of that people. It is, furthermore, a phenomenon not lightly to be ignored.

In the event of a German victory the measure of indignity and humiliation to be heaped upon the United States baffles imagination. The toll in suffering, blood and death exacted would shock humanity.

Take the last paragraph as one that can be applied with equal force to Canada. The indignity and humiliation that would be heaped upon this country surpasses anything that imagination can picture. Even Quebec would receive no mercy or consideration, but would be treated in every way like the rest of the Dominion.

What Germany has done to Belgium and France was bad enough in all conscience. What it would do to England, Canada and the United States would exceed in barbarity the darkest deeds ever perpetrated in the present battle zone. The Teuton hates the British and the Americans with a special hatred, regarding them as the factors that so effectively militated against the program for the conquest of the world by easy stages

ONE IDEA OF PATRIOTISM.

"We were called upon in the name of patriotism to forget party and remember only the country and its interests in passing the conscription bill. We responded loyally to the appeal, and it was by a subjection of partisanship and concerted action that the Military Service Bill was placed on the statute books."—The Examiner.

THE "WE" in the above extract from an editorial in our local contemporary does not refer to the Liberals of Ontario, but to the party as a whole throughout the Dominion. And so that is The Examiner's idea of loyal support. Evidently it takes no note of numbers in its estimate. One Ontario Liberal vote is worth half a dozen or so of the votes cast by Quebec members.

The Liberal party at the election in 1911 elected 86 members to Parliament. This number has fallen off owing to vacancies that have occurred during the past six years. Of the number that the party is now able to muster, 26 voted for conscription on the second and only 22 on the third and final reading. There are 37 Liberal members from Quebec, and these were a unit against the Military Service Bill.

It was not the support received from the Liberals that made the passing of the Conscription Bill possible, although the help received from the Ontario members certainly gives added prestige to the measure. But to talk of loyal support of the Liberals is simply absurd. Had the fate of the bill depended upon Liberal action alone, it would have been defeated by a larger majority than that by which it was adopted. Loyal support, forsooth!

Now that the bill is adopted, The Examiner worries itself with a nightmare to the effect that it will not be operated, or that, if it is, it will not be made fair in its application to all classes. There is no cause for uneasiness on this score. The machinery of the Act appears perfect. The trouble with The Examiner is that it realises the position in which the party has been placed by the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers in his own province.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

KEEP THE HOE going and the war garden free of weeds.

REAL PATRIOTISM, like true Christianity, needs no advertising. It speaks for itself.

THERE IS compensation in all things. The hot spell has a tendency to curb the flow of oratory at Ottawa.

• • •

AS THE CHICAGO NEWS remarks, this is a great age when women are taking to overalls and men to kilts.

• • •

THE BEST argument in favor of conscription is that so many wounded soldiers are eager to get back into the fray.

• • •

IF IT IS REALLY TRUE that olive oil can prevent fog, the case of the anti-conscriptionists is not entirely hopeless.

• • •

NOW THAT IT IS in the war for fair, Siam has not been so prominently before the public since the days of the famous twins.

• • •

THE MOST OPTIMISTIC must admit that affairs in Russia and China are something of a frost for republican forms of government.

• • •

WITH A FEW trifling variations, that immortal military air, "Marching Through Georgia," can be made to fit the present march toward Berlin.

• • •

NOW THAT the Government has ordered the motorists to save gasoline, we may not have to jump so high or so often in crossing George Street.

• • •

THE CALL COMES for the people of Canada to go over the top. While the conscriptionists scramble up the parapets, the antis emulate the habits of the mole.

• • •

THE LIBERALS do not lack sturdy and patriotic members, but it is going to be a hard matter to get any such to run for office until the platform is patched up.

Wit and Wisdom

What He Wanted.

Mark Twain was a good sailor and he often spent happy weeks cruising with his friend H. H. Rogers in his steam yacht. Once they were caught south of Cuba in a heavy sea, the effect of a long drawn and violent gale. The Caribbean was heaving at its worst and for once Mark Twain was upset by the rolling and pitching of the ship. He leaned over the lee rail and clung desperately.

"Mr. Clemens, can't I get you something?" asked a steward solicitously.

"Yes," Mark drawled earnestly, "yes, I'd like a little island."

Petty Spite.

"There is too much petty spite," said a society woman one day at the Acorn club, "among women who pretend to be friends.

"Two women sat at tea the other afternoon in a restaurant.

"'There goes Mr. Smith in his new car,' said one of the women. She added with a simper, 'What a fibbing flatterer he is, to be sure.'

"'Why? Did he tell you you were pretty,' said the other woman, coldly.

"'N'o,' said the first woman. 'He told me you were.'"

A Bargain.

Paddy was jubilant. He chuckled as he sat in the corner by the pothouse fire.

"What's the joke?' asked a neighbor.

"Shure, and A've done a deal!" chortled Paddy.

"Good!"

"A've gave Murphy th' oul mare for a cartload o' hay."

"But what's the good of the hay if the mare's gone?" asked the neighbor.

"Och, bedad," said Paddy, with glee. "Murphy's promised to lend me the ould mare to ate it!"

As to Whalebone.

The subject was the whale, and the teacher, who had given a lesson on the same subject a week previously, was anxious to see how much the children remembered. But they seemed never to have heard of a whale bfore and were extraordinarily stupid.

"Come, come!" cried the teacher, patiently. "What do we do with whalebones?"

There was a minute's sielnce, then a small hand was raised.

"Please, teacher, we leaves 'em on the side of our plates!"

TEACHING CRIPPLES TO WORK

One of the problems that have been and are being solved in other countries and which will have to be solved in like fashion in this country is that of providing self-sustaining work for persons whom war has crippled.

In the first place, there is a universal lack of realization of the great difference existing among the cripples, and of the need of placing each man in that work not only that he is best fitted to do, but that he would most enjoy doing, and that would arouse and hold his interest most successfully and permanently. In the second place, there is a lack of realization of the many more opportunities available for cripples than had been realized. In the third place, there is a lack of realisation of the necessity of supplying the proper and fitting re-education for the productive output at the earliest possible moment, in order to bridge over the period of discouragement and despondency and to help the cripple to fit back into the economic world and its work.

In the fourth place, there is a failure to impress upon the cripple from the earliest possible moment his likeness to other people and to other workers, rather than his differences, and, therefore, as a result, a failure to provide for that social element in the work that is necessary if his permanent happiness is to result. In the fifth place, is a failure to educate the general community as to what their attitude toward the cripple should be. It is along all these five lines that this preparation must take place, and every one of these lines demands the most accurate measurement of the human factors involved.

Peterborough finds itself confronted with this problem. It can never hope to solve it until that technical school is established. The experiment has been successfully made in other places and there is no reason why it should not succeed here.

In some cases it is possible to assign a man to work which he has done before he had been injured, and to adapt the working equipment in such a way that he can make a satisfactory output at the work. In many cases it is possible to re-educate the man to do a type of work [illegible] than any he [illegible] done. We have never, as yet, found a case where it was necessary to assign any man to work that could not be made interesting, stimulating and profitable.

Too much of the work assigned to and taught to cripples carries the inference that they will work either as lone workers, in their homes, or in communities of cripples like themselves. Now, we all know there is no punishment like ostracism. there is nothing that troubles the average human being like being considered different from his fellows. We must make the cripple feel, from the earliest possible moment, that, in essentials, he is like every other member of the community, and that the quicker he fits back into the social and industrial life of the community, the better for the community as well as for his own self.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

"Why are you going to the doctor's if there is nothing the matter with you as you admit?" asked Mrs. Pinwood as Pinwood reached for his coat and hat.

"Because there is nothing the matter with me," was the seemingly paradoxical reply of Pinwood. "I'm going now so that there won't be anything the matter with me in the future. An ounce of prevention is worth a quart of cure.

"This is one of the lessons to be learned from the humble automobile. Recent experience has taught me that man is a complicated mechanism—a kind of combination phonograph and motor car. Like the latter he is made of many parts, any one of which is likely to become worn, broken, or simply in need of adjustment.

"You know I spent a small fortune on my Jimrax this season. And the reason was that I had thought the thing everlastingly perfect. I believed the salesman implicitly, you know. You will remember how I boasted that I'd had the old carryall two years and in that time had never once looked under the hood. In fact I was proud of my ignorance of everything contained in the car except the steering wheel.

"The result was that the thing suddenly went all to pieces, like a man trying to frame an alibi in a hurry. Three garage physicians and four trained motor nurses have been trying to bring it to ever since.

"I don't want to imitate my Jimrax if I can help it, so I am going over to my old friend, Dr. Reostat, and have him give me a general overhauling.

"A one minute's session with the doc's stethoscope will tell whether my heart is hitting on all cylinders. Then he's got another attachment that will show whether my gasoline pressure—I mean blood pressure—is right for proper combustion.

"There is another thing that will help me to feel well. Doc Reostat is a born optimist. He has a pleasant way of telling you how he has just pulled forty-seven patients back to earth after they had all arrangements made for a trip across the River Styx. It's great stuff to listen to and I will leave his office a new and happier man."

"You're an impressionable individual," said Mrs. Pinwood, "but maybe you're right."

NOW THE DOG DAYS

Prose and Rhyme Invoked To Paint A Midsummer Day's Dream

And now the dog days!— when scintillating Sirius is a morning sun of night, and Giant Arcturus glows and glitters in the west!

The dog days! — hot, sultry, breathless and yet at times cooler, drier, with breaths of air that come from the the restless bosom or old Atlantic or the woods, lakes and mountains in the north! A time when country is popular and city is disliked. When the waves offshore and on the beach sparkle invitingly and not as those waves sparkled in winter coldly and forbiddingly. When forest shades and forest glades, whispering breezes, singing birds and purling brooks are delightful to our eye or ear, and distant mountains lie in hazy grandeur beneath the clear almost cloudless, azure firmament. When most of us feel indolent, and many of us seem to have forgotten wholly or less fortunate fellow citizens in the great superheated cities. In the season when the blazing sun is once more descending slowly southward toward the equator, and the length of each sultry day is shorter and shorter, although every summer day seems too long. The hot, uncomfortable tedious dog days!—now again about to visit us:

When July wanes the dog day reigns once more
And Sol of summer wakens warm and red.
Each seed time season now is almost o'er,
And azure Vega glitters overhead
Bird, breeze and brook are chanting soft and low,
And thunder's voice alone speaks
clear and loud.
The sunset lingers in an afterglow,
Whilst over nature lies a sultry shroud.

ON THE LIFFEY

Things are lively on the Liffey;
It is torrid there to-day.
Sure the atmosphere is tiffy,
Clear across to Galway Bay.
There are Ulster men from Belfast,
there are Munster men from Cork.
And the Irish of the Irish—that's the Irish of New York.

Things are lively on the Liffey,
Ah, sure every Irish heart
Would be joyful in a jiffy
To jump in and take a part.
As the delegates start workin' with a single end and aim—
That's to settle things their own way and make others do the same.

Things are lively on the Liffey,
The shillelahs twist and twirl
Every old dudgeon is whiffy,
Every caubeen gets a whirl.
Munster men in Leinster, Ulster, while the doorway Connaught guards!
When itcomes to raisin ructions,
they could give the Kaiser cards.

Yes, there's doin's now in Dublin,
And God send that hatred cease,
So the land can murther troublin',
Laving peace—and that means peace.
Sure the sun by day is orange, but the moon at night is green,
Here's to Erin, bless her! Erin! May she rise aloft serene!

SAVING FUEL.

262 Wescott St., Peterborough,
July 28, 1917.

Editor Review: I have read your article in The Review re the smoke nuisance, and certainly agree that something should be done to reduce the great waste of fuel. On arrival in this country a few years ago I was greatly surprised at the apparent indifference of steam users in Toronto and other towns as apart from the great waste of fuel, the damage to surrounding buildings from the emmission of dense volumes of smoke must be enormous. The probable saving that could be effected by the use of efficient devices, in the hands of competent persons may be anything from 10 per cent to 50 per cent.

I have had extensive experience with fuel economics in the old country, and in one installation consisting of five boilers, I was able to reduce the coal bill by twenty thousand dollars per annum, and the smoke to practically nil and this with a highly bituminous fuel.

I might add incidentally that in 1908 I was selected by the president of the local Government Board to give expert evidence before a Departmental Committee on facts and combustion and therefore may be considered a judge.

There are on the market any number of really efficient appliances which, whilst increasing the all round efficiency of the steam raising plant, reduce the fuel cost to a minimum and pay for the outlay in a few months.

THE SALVING OF A DERELICT

By MAURICE DRAKE

—No—and you can choose which answer you like best. Now get me a time-table, and let me see what time I must start."

So intent was she on the packing of the raiment that should reduce Laurence to a due state of subjugation that it was two o'clock before she got to bed, by which time every article of dress in her box had been inspected, approved, packed, unpacked again, rejected, and again packed, at least twice over. In her excitement she slept but little, but by ten o'clock next morning was seated in the train, very silently and soberly watching the racing succession of northern suburbs through the carriage window. The eight hours' lonely voyaging reduced her to pitiful nervousness. What should she say to Laurence when she met him? What would he think of her? 'Unmaidenly? Her little chin set resolutely at the thought. Whatever he thought she was not going to let convention spoil two lives; and the reflection that her own was one of them—a reflection that would have unnerved most women—only made her the firmer in her determination.

She slept in Edinburgh that night, continuing her journey to Leith on the following morning, and on arrival went straight to Harper's and demanded to see Mr. Averil. He was not in, and the clerk was unable to tell her where he had gone. Would she sit down whilst he asked Mr. Harper?

A sudden repugnance against speaking, even casually, of her affairs to a clerk came over her. She would see Mr. Harper herself, she said and sending in her card, was ushered into his private office.

"Please, I want to see Mr. Averil," she demanded, refusing the seat he rose to offer her. If she hesitated now, she was lost.

"He's out, Miss—Miss Stewart," Clement informed her, consulting the card he held in his hand.

"Can you tell me where he is?"

"He'll be on the quayside, I've nae doubt. He'll be here again in about an hour. Will ye not wait?"

"No, thank you," Marion said, moistening her dry lips. "It's—it's very important."

Clement glanced at her keenly, and a sudden light came to him.

"Ye—ye'll be the young lady that owns the Iceland shares?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Then I'll take the liberty o' asking what ye want wi' one o' my employes?" he demanded, his eyes twinkling.

Marion blushed to the roots of her hair, and, "Lucky lad," said Clement Harper to himself.

"It's—it's private," said unhappy Marion, hot and miserable.

"Nae doubt. Sit ye down a minute, young lady. I've something t' say t' ye—an' then, if ye wish, I'll take ye to the quayside myself."

Marion sat obediently, and Harper walked up and down the room in front of her. At last he came to rest before her chair, and stood still, looking at her gravely.

"Have ye known him long?" he asked. "Forgie me askin'—I'm old enough to be your father."

"About a month," Marion answered, her eyes downcast, the long lashes lying on her flushed cheeks.

"And of that month he's been a fortnight away from ye. D'ye know where he's been?"

"To—to Iceland, hasn't he?"

"Who told ye?"

"His friend, Mr. Dwyer."

"Ah!" He became preternaturally grave. "D'ye know, I feel it's my duty to tell ye that Laurence Averil is one of the roughest men in my employ."

The little chin came out obstinately as she looked slowly up at him, and her eyes settled on his face.

"He's a wild, foul-mouthed, drunken ne'er-do-weel. Never a man in the fleet but's afraid o' him; the drivin' man-killin' sweater. He's a——"

But Marion was on her feet, quivering with anger. "He's a man," she said. "And that's more than can be said of you, saying such vile things behind his back. I hate you and what's more, if—if Laurence Averil had horns and a tail I'd marry him. There!" She stamped her foot and swung round to the door. She had her hand on the handle before Harper's shout of laughter made her pause.

"Eh, eh!" he cried, his fat sides shaking. "Forgie's, Miss Stewart. We old folks must have our joke. But oh! if that's the way ye mean to treat dour Laurence, yours'll be a peaceful household, I'm thinkin'. Where's my hat?" Before Marion had recovered from her surprise, they were descending the narrow ways to the Fish Quay together.

On the road he told her of his early connection with her own story—of the sale by him of the lands to Laurence's father. "And have ye sold all your shares?" he asked.

"Some of them."

"Which?"

"The ordinary shares. I've still got the debentures."

"They'll come nicely to paper a room wi'," he told her. "Ye've seen your last profit from that company. Well, ye got rid o' th' ordinaries. That's one service Laurie's done ye. And here's another."—He told her of the episode of the firebox on his last trip, and her breath came quick with pride and love at the thought of his daring and suffering in her cause. "And now here's the Fish Quay, an' yonder's Laurence. I've work to attend to elsewhere, and ye can go and announce yourself."—

Laurence stood with his back to her amid a busy knot of men and women. Great piles of newly caught fish lay around their feet, and a man standing by his side was selling them by auction. She watched him for some time. Occasionally, as he turned to nod to the salesman, she caught a view of his profile. It seemed stern and forbidding, but at length, taking her courage in both hands, she picked her way between the heaps of fish, and touched him on the arm.

He turned over his shoulder to see who was behind him. She saw him catch his lip in his teeth at recognition, and he barked an order to two men, carrying a great basket between them, with an oath that made them jump.

Then, over his shoulder. "Do you want me?" he asked curtly.

"Yes," she told him. He turned and walked back with her to the edge of the clamorous circle, and stood there, his eyes still upon the men who were bringing up and emptying the harvest of the seas upon the stones.

"Yes?" he said, and waited for her to begin. He never looked at her.

"I—I've sold the ordinary shares," she announced timidly.

"Only the ordinaries. Why didn't you sell the debentures?"

"I haven't tried. I'm afraid it's too late now."

"Tchk, tchk." He clicked his tongue with annoyance. "What did you get for the others?"

"Sixteen hundred pounds."

"Good!" He nodded approval, but still he looked away, and they were both silent for a while.

She broke the silence. "I've spent a hundred of it already," she said.

"Yes?"

"Yes. In—in a trousseau. I—I'm going to get married.

He made no answer. She saw his shoulders heave with the deep breath he took as his back came round towards her.

All he had ever heard of women's cruelty raced into his brain. Olden legends of gladiatorial fights in the arena, watched by the languid ladies of old Rome—tales of the Spanish bull-ring of the present day, where there were more mantillas than sombreros in the circles of seats around the filthy butchery. Oh, cruel, cruel beast of a woman! This was worse than he had ever conceived. However ill he had behaved, nothing could justify this deliberate torture as punishment. Could women know the pain they gave? Was it true that they bore suffering better than men, because they were themselves incapable of keen feeling?

Again her hand touched his arm and her shaking voice broke in upon his thoughts.

"Don't—don't you want to know who it is?" she asked.

"No." His voice was harsh and hoarse.

"O-oh." The touch upon his arm became a timorous squeeze, and he turned towards her in consternation. Was she ill? he wondered.

But her lips were smiling, though her eyes were full of tears. Beneath their wet and fluttering lashes they looked bravely into his own. And—"And must I ask you myself, then, Laurence Averil?" she said.

IN MAKING OMELETS

In making an omelet the pan must be dry, hot and smooth; the least roughness will cause the omelet to stick. To make sure of these necessities heat a bit of lard or suet in a clean pan, simmer for a few minutes, then remove it and wipe the pan dry with a towel. A great many dishes can be made from the simple, plain omelet, not only for breakfast uses, but also for desserts at dinner. Most of the additions are made to the omelet just before it is folded and while the top is moist and readily receives the different ingredients. It consists of the beaten egg with a little milk, water and cream or melted butter added, quickly cooked in a little fat or butter in a suitable pan and folded over so that it may be turned out of the pan in a half round form. Some cooks insist that the best omelets are made by using hot water instead of milk or cream.

CARE OF FINGER NAILS

"Five Minutes Per Day" Method For Working Girls

Many a busy working girl, while she is desirous of caring for her nails is unable to devote much time to this all-important function and may like to know a simple method which would occupy only a few minutes daily. Any one will find the following method simple to understand, and requiring a few minutes only to perform, and although, of course, you cannot expect to obtain the same results as when your nails are submitted to a professional manicurist, yet after a few weeks you need never be ashamed of them again. Soak the fingers in warm, soapy water, so as to soften the nails and the surrounding cuticle. Then dry them on a soft towel, and, taking an orange wood stick, deftly insert this under the nails to extract any colored matter. Next trim the nail with a pair of curved scissors, and then, with the rough side of the file or emery board sold for this purpose, finely bevelling it with the finer side.

Now for the cuticle; this must be loosened with a cuticle knife which should be blunt-pointed, or the orange wood stick may be used for the same purpose. Care should be taken not to bruise the nail during these processes, or little opaque spots of white will appear. Now dip the fingers in a toilet cream, wiping off with a soft towel or tissue paper. Then take some polishing powder, and, sprinkling on the nail, briskly apply the polishing pad. When finished, see that none of the powder remains on the nails. And never use a knife or any sharp metal instrument in cleaning your nails. They only scratch little fissures into the nail substance, in which lodge particles of dirt and dust that are very difficult to remove and keep the nails discolored and gray looking.

USING ONE RECIPE FOR SEVERAL FOODS

Seven Dishes Made From Drop Batter, Thin Batter and Dough, With Few Variations

A cookery expert writes: If cooks would use their gray matter, makers of cookery books would retire to other fields of usefulness, for one small volume an inch thick and six inches square would hold all the directions needed to prepare all the foods we use. Just to show how needless it is to have a recipe for every separate article we cook, let me show you how to use one recipe for several things. We have drop batter, thin batter and dough, just three, and no more. The thin batter is used for breakfast cakes, for fritters and anything to be poured upon a griddle or baking pan. The drop batter is made into drop biscuits, dumplings, pop-overs and scones. Dough is any flour mixture thick enough to roll out on a pastry board.

Let us first make dropped egg scones. Use bread flour for all baking except cake and pastries. Two cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, one tablespoon melted butter, one egg, one cup milk. Break the egg and beat slightly, add milk and beat again and pour into flour. Add pinch of salt. Beat and drop by spoonsful onto baking pan. Bake about twenty minutes. Make gems same as above but bake in gem pans or custard cups.

Nut Loaf and Egg Rolls

Make Nut Loaf same as above, but use whole wheat flour and omit the shortening. Chop one-half cup of nut kernels and beat them in well. Bake thirty minutes in moderate oven. This should be eaten warm, but not hot. Do not cut the loaf, but break it apart. It can scarcely be told from yeast bread. This recipe makes one small loaf. For Egg Rolls use the first recipe, but cut milk down to two-thirds of a cupful. Roll out in thin sheet and cut in rounds. Spread with butter and fold over like pocket-book rolls. Brush again with butter and bake in hotter oven than for nut loaf.

For Pin Wheels or Baking Powder Rusk use egg-roll recipe and after rolling out spread with melted butter, sugar and cinnamon. Roll up like jelly cake and cut in inch lengths. Bake this biscuit.

Muffins and Shortcake

Muffins are made with drop batter as in first recipe, but two eggs and one and a half cups of flour are used, with other quantities unchanged. This is fine for fruit dumplings; cherry dumplings, for example, are seeded, drained and beaten in with just enough sugar to make them sweet. When the fruit is exceedingly juicy, cut down a trifle on the milk.

An excellent peach shortcake is made with this muffin recipe. Mix it and pour it into a cake pan. Use halved canned peaches in it and dredge with sugar. This is a pleasant change from the regular shortcake, which is often a doughy-tasting affair. The seventh? Omit the eggs from the scones, and you have drop [illegible].

STUDY FOOD VALUES

In Cooking Vegetables Best Is Often Thrown Away

To obtain the highest food value, potatoes should not be peeled. When peeled, there is least loss by putting directly into hot water and boiling quickly. Even then the loss is considerable. When potatoes are peeled and soaked in cold water the loss is very great. It has also been found that considerable losses occur in the boiling of other vegetables such as carrots, beets and parsnips. The loss in the mineral matter is serious, as vegetables furnish mineral materials from which teeth and bone are formed. Vegetables should be boiled in large pieces and in as small a quantity of water as possible.

Old Fashioned Pickle

Mix one pound of minced Spanish onions with one pound of minced apples and one ounce of chopped chillies. Boil one pint of white wine vinegar to which a dessertspoonful of salt has been added. When the mixture is quite cold, tie down in jars. It is ready for use the same day.

Baked Eggs

Make a good luncheon dish. Butter a dish and lay on it thin slices of cheese. Break in it carefully six eggs, add a half cupful of cream and a half cupful of grated cheese, seasoned with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and bake until brown.

An egg beater, also any vessel that contained raw egg or milk, should first be washed off with cold water.

HUNGER YEAR IN CANADA IN 1790

Crops Failed; Half-Starved Children Dying — Raw Potatoes — Wolves Almost Annihilated Deer

How many [illegible] know the real history of the "Hunger Year"? The late Henry Ruttan, Esq., in an address once gave his experiences of the great hunger strike of 1790, he says: "I remember the time when, as Bishop Berkeley observes, a man might be the owner of ten thousand acres of land in America and want sufficient means to buy himself a breakfast: One-half of the land in the Bay of Quinte, the garden of Canada, could, within my remembrance, have been purchased for five pounds a two-hundred-acre-lot. All this cannot be a matter of wonder when I tell you that a great scarcity of provisions prevailed for two or three years consecutively, in consequence of failures in the crops and what brought on the famine or scarce year (about the year 1790, if I am not mistaken), was the almost entire destruction of the deer by the wolves in two consecutive years. The snow lay upon the ground from December until April at the depth of four to five feet.

Horses Were Eaten

"In the month of February of the last of these years, a near relative of mine sent all the way to Albany in New York State, more than 200 miles, for four baskets of Indian corn. And this was brought all that distance by two men on snowshoes. It took them about eight weeks to accomplish this journey. The few cattle and even horses which the settlers had collected at great trouble, were killed for food. The faithful dog was, in several instances, sacrificed."

Children Almost Starved

Another resident of the Bay of Quinte district tells of a farmer in Adolphustown, who planted the potato eyes and peelings, and adds that some children were so hungry that they dug up the pieces of raw potato and ate them, to the great detriment of the succeeding year's crop. But Providence about the year 1791, and about seven years after, began to smile upon the efforts of this small band of heroes. The winters began to assume a somewhat milder aspect. The wolves in their turn became a prey to the famine which their own devastation among the deer had caused.

RISK OF SUMMER FIRES

Grave Danger from Stoves in Kitchens Without Chimneys

A serious fire hazard is the summer kitchen or lean-to. Frequently there is no chimney attached, yet stoves are moved out for the warm season, and a stovepipe put through the wall or roof. This is a very dangerous practice, and should not be permitted. Stoves should be at least eighteen inches from any wooden wall or partition. The floor should be covered with zinc or iron beneath the stove to catch any live coals, the covering should extend beyond the stove for eighteen inches in front and on the side on which the fire door opens. Where pipes pass through partitions, proper thimbles with air spaces should be provided.

Brick chimneys should be used, and these should be at least eight inches thick, and start from a foundation on the ground. If chimneys be lined with tile forms made for the purpose, a single brick thickness is satisfactory. This is the only safe way, and, while more expensive, the reduction in the fire danger more than compensates for the added cost. Again, as insurance companies will not knowingly insure a building where a stovepipe passes to the outside through a wall or roof, the insurer risks being unable to collect the amount of his insurance policy.

MYSTERIES OF NICKEL

Many and Wonderful Properties has "Devil's Copper

Nickel may well be called the mystery metal. Chemical research has endowed it with a power to bring about the ruin or the triumph of the greatest nations. By itself it does not possess qualities that compare with a score of other metals in long use; but when alloyed with other metals it becomes that wonder-working stone which the ancient alchemists believed would transform base substances into the most precious and magical minerals. No known alloy imparts to the metals of commerce qualities so new and distinct as nickel, and while these new qualities bestowed by nickel are capable of adding so much to the physical comforts of the human race and to its range of knowledge of the earth's material, yet the main uses to which such mixtures are actually being put have brought more pain and degradation to the world than at any time in history—for most of us know that nickel has made modern armament what it is. Not because of its capabilities, but because of its actual applications, the original German word nickel has been well derived—Devil's copper.

Avoid Farrowing in Fall

Articles are published everywhere urging an increase of meat production. This is justified because of a decrease of total numbers of livestock, accompanied by a considerable increase in consuming population. Much of the advice given concerning the holding and breeding of livestock is good, but occasionally someone is over enthusiastic and urges methods that are impractical. One such piece of advice advocates immediate breeding of sows for fall litters. This is probably good advice for sections having fall pastures.

There is no place where the spring clean-up is more necessary than on the farm, and in the farm home.

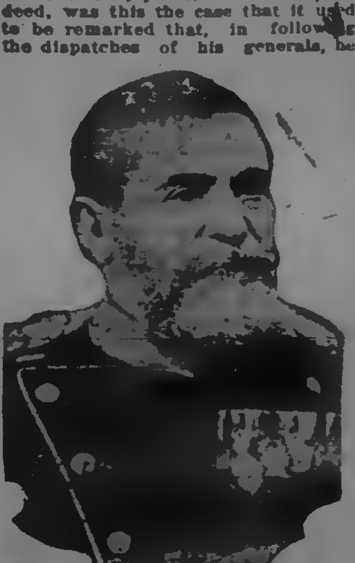
General Putnik Proved Great Military Genius In War Against Austria

VOIVODE PUTNIK, the great Serbian generalissimo, whose marvelous exploits against Austria, in the early days of the war, set all Europe, at the time, talking, was, in many ways, typical of his country. The son of a village schoolmaster, without money or influence, he rose to the summit of his profession by sheer merit. He was, however, one of those men for whom there are no obstacles, and the same wonderful ability for finding the means to the end, which characterized many of his campaigns, was characteristic of all he did. He had set his heart, for instance, on soldiering, and so, somehow or other, it became possible for him to leave the home of the village schoolmaster and go to Belgrade, and the military school. Money was scarce, but young Putnik was eager for work, and, when he had finished his own laborious days of study and exercise, he would earn the wherewithal to go on by coaching his fellow students, and teaching the arts of his calling, in which he greatly excelled.

Like many other great soldiers, General Putnik possessed a remarkable memory and remarkable powers of observation. He always remembered the salient features of territory he had once visited, and he knew Serbia almost by rote, every hill and stream almost, even every turn in its roads and by-paths. So much, indeed, was this the case that it used to be remarked that, in following the dispatches of his generals, he had no need of a map, and, without the aid of one, he would discuss with his staff the topography of the most difficult operations. Such familiarity with his country was, of course, the result of long years of service, for when General Putnik led the retreating, but unvanquished, Serbian forces over the mountains of Albania to the sea, in the winter of 1915, he had almost forty years of service to his credit. The Russo-Turkish War of 1877 was his first experience of active warfare. In that war, of course, Serbia co-operated with Russia, and Voivode Putnik was in command of a battery of artillery. Some eight years later, in the war against Bulgaria, he was chief of staff of the Division of the Danube. The war was disastrous for Serbia, and thereafter followed a period of difficulty for Putnik. He was deprived of any active military command by King Milan, and, during the troubled period which ensued, was little heard of. King Peter, however, knew his worth, and, upon succeeding Alexander, in 1893, appointed him General Chief of Staff.



GENERAL PUTNIK

General Putnik was, of course, not only a great tactician, but a great strategist. It was he who drew up those wonderful plans of campaign which were carried out by the Balkan League in the struggle against Turkey, in 1912; whilst his energy and resource were mainly responsible for the defeat of Bulgaria in the second Balkan war, in 1913.

It was, however, in the present struggle that General Putnik's military genius found its fullest expression. The wisdom of his bold offensive into Austrian territory, in the autumn of 1914, may be questioned; but the manner in which he conducted those astonishing manoeuvers, which accompanied his subsequent retirement before overwhelming numbers, constitutes one of the great stories of the war. Giving way before the Austrians, he abandoned Belgrade without striking a blow, and drew his opponents on as he slowly retired behind the Valievo line. Then, it will be remembered, he suddenly reversed his tactics, and, by a vigorous stroke, carried out with masterful precision, enveloped the Austrian army, took 40,000 prisoners, drove the Austrians back across the Danube, and retook Belgrade. The Serbians lost Belgrade again, of course, as they did the rest of their country; but this could not dim the brilliance of General Putnik's achievement, and in nothing was his genius ever displayed to greater advantage, unless it was in his patient and masterly direction of that retreat across Albania, which subsequently marked so definite a period in Serbia's struggle for liberty.

He Spent Enough To Pay For Home

Suffering of 30 Years Cost Doman Hundreds Tanlac Brings Relief.

Remarkable, indeed, was the statement made a few days ago by John Doman, section foreman for the London & Port Stanley railroad, who lives at 184 Maitland street, London, who declares that he has derived more benefit from two bottles of Tanlac than from other treatment and medicines that had cost him enough money to pay for a good house and lot. His statement follows:

"I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble and catarrh in my head for thirty years. My food would sour and seem like lumps of lead in the pit of my stomach. I suffered terribly from the gas on my stomach and heartburn and would sometimes belch up great mouthfuls of a substance so hot and sour it would put my teeth on edge. My appetite went back on me and for the past two years, that is until I began taking Tanlac, my breakfasts consisted of corn meal and milk. I was so nervous I could hardly sleep and often get up at night and sit around trying to get my nerves quiet so I could get a little rest. I suffered a great deal from the catarrh in my head, had flighty feelings, was badly constipated and always taking something for this trouble. All my strength and energy seemed to leave me and I would get up in the mornings feeling unfit for my work.

"I have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac and have started on my third and, honestly, it has helped me to pay for a good home. Tanlac is the only thing that has ever helped my catarrh at all and that is so much better already that I believe it will soon be gone entirly. I can eat anything that is put on the table now and it don't hurt me a particle. Gas has stopped forming and my tired, draggy feelings have left me. I go to sleep almost as soon as I get in bed at night and never wake up until the alarm clock goes off in the mornings. I am not constipated like I was. don't have those weak, dizzy feelings any more, and my strength is built up until I can do my work without any trouble. I expect to take three more bottles of Tanlac as a clincher, and when my wife comes home from Michigan and sees what it has done for me she's going to want to try it, too. Well, it's great, everybody ought to know about it and it's a pleasure for me to tell them what it has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

The Handy Girl.

There are some girls who have a perfect knack of fashioning the daintiest accessories from apparently nothing save a few scraps of material and a yard or two of lace. One of the most fascinating little negligees was made by a clever girl who had on hand an unusually large supply of handkerchiefs. Four of these bits of linen were joined together with strips of lace and an edging was run around the whole thing. An opening was left in the square, where two handkerchiefs met, and lace was sewed on each side instead of joining with one piece. Nile green ribbon was used to tie at the neck and under the arms, and the result was a cunning little negligee.

BUILDING MANY SHIPS

OLD INDUSTRY IS BEING REVIVED IN DOMINION.

The Ravages of the Submarine Have Increased Need for All Sorts of Vessels, and Many Cargo Steamers Are Being Built at the Present Time in Our Shipyards.

MANY years ago shipbuilding was one of the important industries of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. This was in the days of wooden ships, which, owing to the large supply of cheap timber, could be constructed profitably in Canada, but with the introduction of steel steamships and the passing away of the sailing vessel, the industry steadily declined, and the places that knew it once know it no more. In 1874 the tonnage of vessels built and registered in Canada was 183,010, while in 1896 the tonnage was only 16,146 tons. The tonnage of vessels on the registry of shipping of the Dominion rose from 767,654 tons in 1867 to 1,267,394 tons in 1883, declined to 663,415 tons in 1906, and thereafter took an upward turn, being 896,965 tons on January 1st, 1914, and 1,215,021 tons on March 31, 1916. Politicians now propose that the industry be revived by Government aid, bounty, or subsidy, the time being propitious for the construction of ships. There is no doubt about the propitiousness of the times; they were never more so. The ravages of the submarine have materially reduced the tonnage of all nations, neutral as well as Allied, while the commandeering of ships for transport purposes by the British Government has so depleted the supply for commercial uses as to create a perplexing problem. Ships of all kinds, steel and wood, large and small, have never commanded such profitable prices, whether under sale or charter, as at this time.

The ship-building industry is not now languishing in Canada. All the yards are occupied to capacity. In Montreal, the Canadian Vickers plant is building six cargo steamers of 7,000 tons, and one of 2,360 tons, besides other vessels. At Levis a steel vessel of 5,000 tons is under construction, at Sorel there is great activity in the Government yards, and at the Isle of Orleans, near the ancient seat of the industry, Quebec, four large wooden ships are on the ways. At New Glasgow, N.S., three cargo steamers aggregating 3,080 tons are being built, at Shelbourne, N.S., a wooden cargo steamer of 350 tons, and at Sheet Harbor, N.S., a wooden cargo steamer of 320 tons. Other vessels named are: At Collingwood, Ont., a vessel of 8,000 tons, and four large oil tankers; in Toronto, two cargo steamers of 4,400 tons, six of 3,500 tons each, and two of 5,000 tons each; at Midland, Ont., a large steamer has just been launched and other construction is in progress; at Port Arthur, five cargo steamers of 3,400 tons; on the Pacific Coast five steel steamers of 8,800 tons, and two of 4,600 tons.

The above figures were given to the House of Commons by Hon. Mr. Hazen as indicating the great and varied activity of ship-building in Canada. The industry is of permanent character; for years to come it will prove very profitable, and private enterprise in such circumstances may well be relied upon to ensure its development.

In Fairness.

Mr. Hearst's American says: "Why should not Canada have conscription and Australia and New Zealand and the rest of the English colonies? The United States is in this war to protect the principles for which England and the English colonies are fighting, and those colonies ought to be willing to make as much of a sacrifice for the cause as this country."

The man who cheats at cards or hides behind the skirts of a woman has the standards of a sportsman and gentleman compared to the standards of fair play that could produce this gem on a page devoted, according to its printed word, to Truth, Justice, and Public Service. We comment on it only so that we may assure our Sister of the Snows that there is not lacking in this country an appreciation of all she has done, of all the tremendous sacrifices she has made. We know that before we can equal her record we shall have to have more than five per cent. of our population under arms, or an army of more than 5,000,000 men. We know that seventy days after the war began she had embarked an army of 33,000 men. We know that on February 1, 1917, she had contributed to the Belgian relief fund an amount equal to 18 cents per capita, while at that date we had given but eight cents per capita, and we know her wonderful record of production from field and factory.

We have much to be proud of, but at our present rate of progress we can only hope that some day we may be able to equal the pace set by our brave and heroic Northern neighbor. —New York Tribune.

Northcliffe Is Coming.

An enquiry made at the Foreign Office as to whether Lord Northcliffe's mission will take him to Canada elicited the statement that such an extension of his visit had not been formally arranged, "but you can assume," said this informant, "that whoever goes to the United States in these times goes to Canada also, and Lord Northcliffe with both personal and business interests that have to do with all North America will hardly pass Canada by."

POTATO BLIGHT CAN BE CURED

APPLY BORDEAUX MIXTURE ACCORDING TO INSTRUCTIONS.

It is estimated that 25 per cent of the potato crop of Ontario or approximately 5,000,000 bushels is lost annually by the farmers of Ontario due to attacks of the late blight and of the Colorado potato beetles. This loss can be prevented by spraying thoroughly at regular intervals with Bordeaux Mixture as a fungicide to prevent blight and paris green or arsenate of lead as a poison to combat the beetles.

Late blight is a fungus disease which is particularly noticeable on potatoes in the late summer and it is quite serious when the weather is all warm, moist, and muggy. It is first noticeable in the form of dark colored spots on the leaves which soon begin to curl up and in some instances the diseased portion of leaves and stem emit a smell like that of bad fish. A careful examination of the under surface of the leaves where these brownish spots appear will reveal the presence of a greyish white "mould" or "mildew." The spores produced in these spots on the leaves are scattered by wind and water and are capable of infecting a healthy potato leaf and starting the disease afresh. If no spraying has been done and weather conditions are at all favorable the spores thus produced rapidly infect the surrounding plants and the disease spreads most rapidly. The disease can be prevented by thoroughly spraying with Bordeaux Mixture. It is an insurance, in fact an investment worth while.

Bordeaux Mixture.

The Bordeaux Mixture for controlling late blight, also early blight, should be very carefully prepared and applied in a very thorough manner in order to be effective.

Correct method is to go to Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, and get—

4 lbs. Copper Sulphate (Bluestone).
4 lbs. Lime, freshly slaked.
40 gals. water.

The Copper Sulphate and Lime should not be mixed in concentrated solutions as this lessens the value of the mixture and fungicide. Dissolve each separately and dilute by making up to 20 gallons with water before straining into the spray tank. Bordeaux should be used fresh, though stock solutions may be kept for an indefinite period. These stock solutions may be made as follows:

Put 20 gallons of water in a barrel and suspend 20 lbs. of bluestone in an old sack just below the surface of the water. The bluestone will soon dissolve and each gallon of the solution will contain 1 lb. of the Copper Sulphate. Slake 20 lbs. lime—good burnt lime—and make up to 20 gallons with water. To make the Bordeaux Mixture put 4 gallons from each of the stock solutions in separate vessels and dilute each to 20 gals. of water and mix together in the spray tank.

In order to control the potato beetles some poison may be used along with the Bordeaux Mixture. Add ½ lb. of paris green and 1½ lbs. arsenate of lead to 40 gallons of the mixture. This has been proved a very effective remedy.

In order to do effective work all parts of the potato plants should be covered with a fine mist or spray. The plants should be sprayed about every two or three weeks. Carefulness and thoroughness pay and pay well, while careless and poor work is simply energy thrown away. If you procure your Copper Sulphate at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, it's absolute purity is guaranteed and it is sold at the lowest possible price.

Hundreds Plunged Into the Otonabee

Citizens Tried Various Places To Obtain Relief From the Heat.

Where to get away from the intense heat was a subject that caused a good deal of worry to many of the citizens last evening.

At every point along the river bank where the shore was at all suitable numerous parties of bathers were gathered. At Inverlea Park the water was literally black with bathers male and female. Opposite the cemetery on the East City shore hundreds of young people enjoyed the cool waters of the Otonabee, and the same condition was to be observed at various points along the lower river.

The owners of automobiles did not have far to look for passengers. Rides into the country and around the city were gladly taken in order to get an atom of relief from the sweltering heat.

The weather man encouraged a breeze during the night, but it was not a pleasant night to rest comfortably.

CARDINAL BEGIN MAKES ATTACK ON DRAFT BILL

Say That Conscription is a Menace to the Church to Which be Belongs---May Not be Operated Fairly.

Quebec, July 31.—In an interview on conscription given to L.Acton Catnolique, the official organ of the Catholic Church in Quebec, Cardinal Begin says, as regards the clergy only:

"This conscription law is a menace which causes the Canadian clergy the worst apprehensions.

"This military service, as it is proposed, or at least, as we are enabled to judge from the speeches and articles its discussion has provoked, is not only a serious block to the rights of the church of Christ, independent in its domain, and whose laws and practice exempt the clergy and that class of the society which that name designates from the service under arms, but also it (conscription law) constitutes a fatal obstacle to the recruiting of ministers of God, shepherds of souls, as well as to that of the staff of clerical teachers, and through this very fact it creates, in our society, an evil much worse than that which it is alleged to attempt to remedy.

"The clause, as it is written, might lose some of its ill if it were interpreted in the spirit of the church. But, what guarantees have we that the members of the special tribunals will be all Catholics, enlightened and good-willed, capable of pronouncing with sincerity and knowledge on a question of this importance? If we judge by the very rude knowledge revealed by certain speeches made in the Commons, one may indeed fear that some legislators, so little enlightened and may be also somewhat ill-willed, may not make a choice that we would approve. And here is what legitimates all the fears.

"On the other hand, the treaties assure the Canadian Catholics the free practice of their religion. The legislation under way may strike said liberty a mortal blow. I like to believe that the political wisdom, will in the end, overcome, in the hearts of our statesmen, the urgings and counsel of certain elements liable to trouble forever the peace of this country, and that no one will dare, on a matter so important and delicate, hurt the sentiments of the whole Catholic population of the Dominion and imprudently sow on this side of the Atlantic, the seed of the fatal religious discords that have divided the old world."

Fearing he would be drafted, John Mayshack, aged 29, a German chemist, killed himself Saturday at Detroit by exploding a tank of compressed oxygen.

RETURNED MEN NOW ON FARMS NEAR MONTEITH

GOV'T IS SENDING MORE HORSES AND MEN TO NORTHERN ONT.

Deputy Minister of Agriculture C. F. Bailey at Toronto, reported that one car load of horses which the Government sent to their depots at New Liskeard and Monteith to supply the settlers with horses at cost price, had been all disposed of. Another lot are being sent up.

Last spring the settlers sent up themselves 624 horses, and the Government decided that they would help the settlers along by disposing of a good grade of horses at actual cost.

Twenty-one of the returned soldiers who are taking up Government farms have been removed from the school at Monteith to the Kapuskasing colony farm. Twelve houses are just about ready, and the other 78 are under way. These men will assist in the building of the houses besides clearing a certain portion of the land, and build roads and railway sidings. The remainder of the 30 men at Monteith will be shipped up in 10 days' time, while others will be sent to take their places at Monteith.

WHO CAN EXAMINE

Books Of Express Companies For Liquor Orders

St. Thomas, July 31.—At the close of a case in Aylmer recently enquiries were made of Magistrate Hunt whether a county constable has the right to examine the books of an express company to see what liquor is being shipped in. Some Aylmer lawyers present contended that they had the right under the statute of 1916 but the squire pointed out that there had been some amendments during the present year and that according to section 70a of the 1917 amendments no person but the inspector or a provincial constable had the right to examine the books, and then only under a written order.

County constables have been taking it upon themselves to examine the books of express companies in Aylmer and there was some talk of takng action against them, but it is unlikely that any steps will be taken a present. Both the express man and the constable are liable to a fine for the examination of the books under both the common law and the Ontario Temperance Act.

Joseph White, 19, was electrocuted at Masena while engaged at his work.

BANNS WERE CALLED

But Soldiers Were Saved By Comrades From Committing Bigamy

A story of "ways that are queer and tricks that are strange" on the part of others than the heathen Chinese recently came from overseas to officials of the patriotic fund in London. Over in England some time ago, a little party of London soldiers was attending a church service. To the amasement of these men, the banns were called of two fellow soldiers from London whom they had known in Canada as married men. They made inquiries and were told that the first wives had died and the lone, lorn widowers seeking consolation. This explanation didn't exactly satisfy, and an investigation was made, whereupon it was found that the alleged "dear departed wives" were still very much alive back at home in Canada, and receiving the allowances regularly from the patriotic fund. And so the English maidens were kept, "waiting at the church," and the time-honored excuse was made by each Canuck, "My wife won't let me."

RETURN TO CIVIL JOBS

Kingston Officers Not Ill-treated, Contention of Militia Dept.

Ottawa, July 30. — Sir Edward Kemp, if the matter is brought up, will make a statement in the House with regard to the retirement of Lieut.-Cols. Brown and Wilson from the headquarter's staff of military district No 3, and the charge of the Kingston Whig that they were ousted to make way for political favorites.

It is understood that the department will take the position that the officers in question have no fault to find. They had dual positions, being federal civil servants as well as military officers, and were not overseas. The dual jobs have been abolished, and the officers in question, not being required for military service, simply revert to their permanent jobs in other branches of the public service.

Winnipeg, July 31.—The Telegram (Hon. Robert Rogers' personal paper), in a full page editorial comment on the McLeod-Tellier report suggests that the Parliament of Canada be asked to remove Judge Galt from the bench.

Rev. A. S. Imrie, of Toronto, preached at the 117th anniversary of the Wicklow Baptist Church yesterday.

CONDUCTOR GOT SEVERE SHOCK

BRASS WORK ON STREET CAR CHARGED WITH ELECTRICITY.

Harry Smith, the popular conductor of the Street Railway Company met with a very serious accident last night and his many friends hope that he will soon recover.

It seems that he was on duty on the "Hour Ride" car last evening and was passing from one car to the other near the Antrim street switch and from some cause or other the brass handles were electrically connected and he suffered a very severe shock as well as having both hands badly burned.

Conductor Smith stayed in his car despite the fact that he was very weak and would not heed the advice of friends to be taken home. While on the Charlotte street run near Stewart the shock he received began to tell on his heart and he collapsed and was taken in Mr. Tewsley's car to the Fire Hall where the pulmotor was applied and after working with him for over an hour Mr. Smith recovered sufficiently to be able to be taken to his home on Kenneth Ave.

A deputation of officers of the Canadian Mounted Rifles handed to M. Malvy, Minister of Interior, the French flag which surmounted the town hall of Airon, in the Department of Oise.

PRISONER ACTS INSANITY ROLE

FRENCH-CANADIAN IS HELD AT POLICE STATION FOR FURTHER EVIDENCE.

Henry Frechette, who was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of theft, appeared before Acting Magistrate Rush this morning and was remanded for a week. In the interval his finger prints will be sent to Montreal and other police departments with the idea that something more will be learned of the wily French Canuck.

Last night at the police station he was quizzed as to his ability to speak English but in spite of the fact that the officers have evidence that he is able to discourse in that language, very little could be learned from him.

However, he gave a new name and pretending that he is insane while the officers are firmly of the opinion that he is able to tell a lot of things that other police departments would like to know. The name he gave last night was Antonio Dandurand and he says that his father is Alphonse Dandurand, 12 Bright street, Manchester, Mass.

There are three charges now laid against the prisoner and more may follow.

Frederick J. Dominey and his 17-year-old-son, John, who were drowned while on a fishing trip to Georgian Bay, were buried at Ingersoll.

STORY OF A REGIMENT

SCOTTISH BORDERERS POSSESS AN ACTIVE BOSWELL.

An American Who Has Done a Great Deal of Work in Canada Since the Outbreak of the War Writes Description of Trip to Halifax.

No foreign-born private citizen has done more since the war began to recruit the Canadian army than Mr. W. D. Gregory, of Leamington. An American by birth, he threw himself into the work of recruiting since the day war was declared, and nobody in this country or in the United States, we are sure, hailed with deeper satisfaction the decision of Uncle Sam to take his place by the side of the Allies. The latest service Mr. Gregory has rendered is the preparation of a booklet entitled "From Camp to Hammock," in which he describes the trip of the 241st Battalion, C. E. F., Canadian Scottish Borderers, from Leamington, where the battalion was recruited, to Halifax, where it embarked a few weeks ago on board the largest steamship in the world. The account of the journey is given in racy, humorous style, and is one that every member of the battalion and his friends will desire to preserve as a souvenir. Others who read it may well wish that every overseas battalion had its friendly Boswell, too, in order that the "little unremembered" incidents might be similarly preserved, to be referred to in years to come as part of the history of Canada's expeditionary forces.

Mr. Gregory speaks of the kindness of the ladies of Leamington in preparing for the soldiers' departure. There were several "false alarms," and baking raged over the town from morning to night. Several times the welcome supplies were consumed before the real day arrived on April 24th last. All along the route, wherever the train stopped, the men were greeted with enthusiasm, and regaled with whatever refreshments military regulations and their own particular tastes permitted. Pipes and tobacco in several forms were popular gifts, and if we mistake not there is a veiled reference to some peculiar liquid, familiar enough to Kilties, perhaps, which is frequently absorbed with water and ice. As an American Mr. Gregory was particularly pleased at the fact that at Windsor several thousand Americans had come over from Detroit to give a cheer for the Canadian soldiers, and he mentions that in the battalion were many Americans, neither too proud nor too soft to fight.

"Of Quebec," he says, "we shall say little. Too much has already been said and too little done." If there was no particular cheering for the Borderers as they passed through the province, "whose stand in this war shall some day shake Canada from centre to circumference," there was no hostility. Mr. Gregory seems to have expected something else, for he notes that at Riviere du Loup the train was not stoned, and he observes that if the train had been stoned "there would have been some strange faces in hell the next morning, and they would not have been Highlanders." Whether he means that a Highlander there would not have been recognised as a "strange face" we are unable to determine.

Before concluding his spirited account of the trip with the roster of the regiment and a brief biographical sketch of the officers, Mr. Gregory makes some remarks in more serious vein, which are worth quoting in full. He says:

"Meantime, what of the folks at home? Are we playing the game or are we looking for decorations? We have been a young country, struggling to get on our national feet, and business has so thoroughly saturated our minds for so long, that we cannot yet see past profits. We forget that man has a soul as well as a body. Then, too, we have been living under such a nervous strain that we sometimes fail to regard things from a wider viewpoint and are inclined to be irritable, and fond of finding fault and of airing imaginary grievances. Then the Government is blamed for everything and a nice spice is given to conversation by talking of 'pull' and 'graft,' and money and influence. Isn't this a slander on our national life and a reflection on everyone who calls himself Canadian? As if the representative men whom we, as citizens, have elected to power and who sent our soldiers across the sea in honor's cause, have so far forgotten themselves that our national virtue, our national conscience and our Canadian honor have been banished from our shores! Is it any wonder that honest men hesitate to assume public responsibilities when this is their reward?"

JUST A FAD.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

Distinctive Points That Mark Her Racial Type.

We may be asked, "Well, what is an American girl?" She is just this: A vital person, with a combination of health, vigor, wholesomeness and beauty. The fact that many American girls have in some instances a certain amount of "hereditary foreign blood makes them, as a class, a delightful combination of personalities. The typical American girl is usually described as being a tall, slender person, with free and graceful carriage, plenty of poise and a face that bespeaks a well balanced mind. One is apt to visualize her as a person who can adapt herself to any and all circumstances and be an interested and interesting conversationalist in groups of young and old. Taking her all in all, she is a person who is a delightful companion.

The American girl is generally considered beautiful. If technically analyzed, the main charm of her beauty lies in the fact that her features are chiseled, while many of her contemporaries are beautiful from the standpoint that their features are molded. There is a subtle difference. It would be difficult to state authentically just what the coloring of the American girl is, for she is invariably a blending of nationalities and thus is a variation of type.

Painted Floors.

No floor is so bad but that it can be made presentable by painting. Two coats are usually necessary and after that one or two of varnish or shellac. If the cracks are very wide they may be filled prior to painting. So many women feel that their floors are too bad to permit the use of rugs, but paint will work wonders.

Purple Hats.

You can have a big hat of very dark purple straw faced in delicate pink, its crown entirely covered by violets with a simple pink camellia nestling among the violets near the front, or your purple hat may have grapes in rose and gray and green and dull blue clustered in wreath fashion around its crown top, or may have cerise roses harmonizing with its purple.

There are much orchid and mauve, as well as purple, in the summer millinery, often with soft old blue in combination, a color scheme very charming if successfully handled and quite hopeless when it goes wrong.

What Matty Has Done for Cincinnati

Yessir' Matty seems to have made a man of Old Guy Cincy. For over 49 years Cincinnati has been a ne'er do well in big league baseball. Old Cincy usually associated with the lowest in the league too—the baseball bum. Now and then some manager with good intentions attempted to reform this vagabond of the diamond, but none ever wholly succeeded. Cincinnati never achieved a pennant. Second place was the noblest effort—and that happened 39 years ago, before he became incorrigible.

Just at present Matty has him straightened up and looking fine—the best in 12 years. Cincinnati is reformed, and is now a very classy looking team. He is mixing with high-class company—the first division boys—for the first time in five years, and promises to remain there.

Cincinnati's career began with the National league in 1876. The Reds finished last five times and seventh five times. They finished in third place on three different occasions only.

Billy Sunday has nothing on Matty.

THE GAMBLER

Last night I was wealthy,
  To-day I am broke;
My money has flown,
  Not a cent in my poke.
Last night I was drinking
  Champagne with the bunch,
To-day I'll dring water,
  And crackers I'll munch.
But wait till to-morrow—
  I've got a sure thing!
I'll beg, steal or borrow
  And hock my gold ring;
I'll just place a bet
  And be flush once again—
Come around then and meet me,
  And have some champagne.

Do you see the dust cloud? No, it's not a cyclone: it's only John Ganzel's Kansas City team starting something in the American Association.

The fans of Pittsburg are heaving verbal bricks at Barney Dreyfuss for letting Bunny Brief slip out of his hands. Barney's declaration that he couldn't afford to pay the price for Bunny's release doesn't make any difference to the ball fiends from the Smoky City. Meanwhile the Louisville club of the American Association is glad that it grabbed Bunny while it had the chance.

Jake Daubert is still nursing a lame leg, and Colonel Ebbets is correspondingly nursing his pocketbook, because Jake's $9000 salary goes blithely on—which is one of several differences between salary and wages.

A fine example of cutting off your nose to spite your face was that offered by Catcher Emil Hunn, released some time ago by the Cincinnati Reds to Indianapolis. Hunn didn't like it and so refused to sign up with the Hoosiers. Well, whom does he think he hurt by his refusal?

Grouchy Gus says: "Umpires ought to take comfort out of the fact that since the war they are no longer the world's most unpopular persons. There's the kaiser, for instance, and the crown prince."

When it comes to taking punishment you's got to hand the palm to Jack Gifford the Brooklyn Strong Boy, who went down to defeat recently before Jack Dillon, the Indianapolis Bearcat, at New York. Clifford showed that he could stand more hard knocks than either Batling Nelson or Champion Al McCoy, and that's going some. It was in the sixth round of the contest that Dillon showed his complete mastery over the Brooklyn lad. In that round he sent the Strong Boy almost through the ropes with a right. However, Clifford bounded back to his feet without taking the count. In the two following rounds Clifford showed his gameness, for despite the fact that he was almost all in from the body blows administered to him, he continued to fight back, and even in the last two rounds of the fast ten showed remarkable endurance under heavy p[illegible]ment.

To her class a teacher once came—
An innocent sweet little dame.
  Said she: "Johnny Magee,

Said John., "I've forgotten the

There seems to be a regular fining bee on in the American Association, and President Hickey is being kept busy keeping track of all the penalties. Since Hickey abolished the dou[illegible] umpire-umpire system, managers and players seem to have been overstepping the bounds somewhat. For a scrap in Kansas City recently Tinker and Joe Wagner were fined $50 each, while Mollwitz was mulcted to the tune of $35. Bill Clymer, manager of the Louisvilles, who had an altercation with a rival player, was fined $50 and suspended for three. That didn't seem to bother Bill very much, for not long afterward he was fined $100 and suspended for six days for kicking out loud. then Jack Hendricks, manager of the Hoosiers, got the talking fever, and was suspended for three days, and, finally, Roger Bresnahan, manager of the Toledos, who committed a verbal assault upon an umpire, got a three days' rest from his ardous activities. President Hickey is generally considered to have made a mistake in going back to the single-umpire method, but, once having made the decision, he's going to stick to it. Meanwhile he promises to slap on fines until everybody behaves.

Like "Les Miserables."

An ambitious young man called upon a publisher and stated that he had decided to write a book.

"May I venture to inquire as to the nature of the book you propose to write?" asked the publisher, very politely.

"Oh," came in an offhand way from the aspirant to literary fame, "I think of doing something on the line of 'Les Miserables,' only livelier, you know."—Kansas City Star.

THE BRITISH SIDE.

Sydney Brooks Gives Reasons for Secrecy in U-Boat Campaign.

Without minimising in any degree the frightful seriousness of Germany's submarine warfare, there is a ray of hope and encouragement in the reasons for secrecy on the part of Great Britain concerning just what is being accomplished in stalking these snakes of the sea. Sydney Brooks, the English journalist, gives some of the strategic reasons for silence relative to the success with which the British Admiralty is meeting in bagging this nefarious game. A part of the communication is issued as the following bulletin by the society:

Just as Great Britain never advertises the feats of her armies, so she allows the world to think that the Prussians are having it pretty much their own way with their submarines. As a matter of fact, the German submarines have scored very few legitimate successes—by which I mean successes that conform to the usages of civilized warfare. It must be nearly two years since they sank a British man-of-war of any importance.

As pirates preying upon fishing smacks, trawlers, Atlantic liners, and the merchantmen of all nations, they have added a new and infamous chapter to naval history. Otherwise it is, I believe, the opinion of most naval men that in German hands the submarine has proved disappointingly ineffective.

People, I remember, were thrown into a state of quite unbalanced admiration when the Deutschland appeared in American waters. It was spoken of as one of the most remarkable achievements of the war. Few stopped to remember—even, indeed, if they ever knew—that the war was only a few months old when ten British submarines crossed the Atlantic from Halifax to the British Isles—the first submarines in naval history to make the journey under their own power.

While we publish the number of vessels sunk by Prussian submarines, we say not a word about the U-boats whose careers are brought to a sudden stop. I do not know how many of them we have caught, sunk, or destroyed. It may be 180; it may be 200; it may be 220. They come out and they do not return, and there is no one in Germany, and perhaps not half a dozen people in England, who know what becomes of them.

The reasons for our secrecy must be tolerably obvious to anyone who thinks the matter over. All that the Germans are able to infer from the failure of any given U-boat to return to port is that somehow or other it has been lost. But how or where they cannot tell.

It may have been through some error of structure or design—a thought to send a chill down the spine of every admiralty official. It may have been through a mistake in navigation. It may have been through one or other of the endless and constantly changing devices that British ingenuity has evolved and brought into play against the new piracy. It may too have happened near the German coast or after the U-boat had reached its appointed station, they cannot tell.

They are faced with a blank wall of possibilities that they have no means of verifying. Weeks must often elapse before they can be sure that a submarine which they thought was operating in a certain area had really perished, and that another boat should be dispatched to take its place.

Sometimes, however, the veil of mystery is partially lifted. Sometimes a German U-boat is towed up the Thames, moored to the embankment, and from $75,000 to $100,000 collected for some naval charity by throwing it open to the public. Sometimes if you are dining with a naval officer you will hear wondrous tales of submarines netted, bombed by aeroplanes even when they are well below the surface, hunted and caught by destroyers, induced by one ruse after another to show themselves where they can be got at.

Sometimes, too, in a British port the men of the merchant marine will tell you of Homeric combats that would have warmed the heart of Nelson and Farragut and made Drake and Frobisher gasp and stare.

But these are mere haphazard personal gleanings. No one knows the full extent of the harvest or how it has been gathered in. But we do know enough—or at any rate we think we do—to feel fairly confident that the Germans can attempt nothing and can invent nothing that we cannot find the means of countering; and that confidence has been rather more than justified by all that has happened since February 1.

Wholesale Burglary.

Speaking at the Temple Church, Dean Inge said our opponents in this war were not really a fighting race, and so they had no chivalry. War for them was a sordid business, shorn of all romance; it was merely scientific burglary by a very large gang.

It seemed to him that reliance on the law of progress, on socialism, democracy, common sense, and industry, or on organized religion, to prevent a recurrence of what was happening, was in each case alike futile; they would fall again as they had failed now.

He knew that this war was forced upon us, but he did not think we had a right to assume that we and our present allies could never be guilty of breaking the peace at some future time—our past record was not clean enough for that. It was of no use trying to change the world without changing ourselves. We must promote from top to bottom the great reforms in national education which he hoped would come after peace.—London Times.

Author of "Old Mother Hubbard."

Very few people know who wrote the favorite story for children of "Old Mother Hubbard." The author was, says a writer in The Essex Review, Sarah Catherine Martin, and she was buried at Loughton, in that county. Miss Martin was born in January, 1768, and was about thirty-seven years of age when she wrote the story of the old lady and her dog. Tradition says the original "Old Mother Hubbard" was the housekeeper at Kitley Hall, Yealmpton, the residence of Miss Martin's married sister; and a cupboard is pointed out as being the cupboard mentioned in the story. A copy of the original publication is preserved at Kitley Hall, and inside the book is the note: "Original Presentation Copy of 'Mother Hubbard,' written at Kitley by Sarah Catherine Martin, and dedicated to John Pollexen Bastard, M.P." A second edition, of which a copy is in the British Museum, is dated May 1st, 1806. The colored cuts are ingenious, and, it has been suggested, are by Bewick. It is not generally known that Miss Martin wrote "A Continuation of 'The Comic Adventures of Old Mother Hubbard.'" The sequel is not considered as good as the original.

The Banana Family.

To most persons in the temperate zones a banana is a banana. But the truth is that there are over fifty known varieties of the fruit, with as great, or greater, variation in character as the different kinds of apples. Hawaii is said to have something over forty distinct varieties of the fruit, most of which have been introduced by the whites. Some of these are of extremely delicate and delicious flavor, while other kinds are used, if at all, only when cooked in various ways. There is scarcely a city house lot or country "kuleana" or homestead which does not have a clump or two of bananas, which grow with practically no care, new plants or suckers shooting out to replace the ones which have fruited and been removed.

[illegible] in guns appears [illegible] vestigation at Oxford. Bacon's claims to the invention of gunpowder are often pressed by English writers in opposition to those of Berthold Schwartz, who is generally said to have invented it about 1344—a century after Bacon's time. It seems certain from the latter's writings that he was familiar with the composition, not as its inventor, but because of its use in various countries of the world. Apparently, however, it was regarded merely as a firework, a means of producing sudden and brilliant flame, and its users were far from suspecting that in a confined space the expansive power of its gases could be put to use in hurling projectiles. Says a writer in the Revue des Questions Scientifiques: "The text that we have studied allows no further doubt that Bacon knew of gunpowder. On page 313, under the title 'Of the powder,' he also informs us that it is known in various parts of the world, and that it is composed of saltpeter, sulphur and willow charcoal.

"Comparisons of the terms used by Bacon to describe the effects of explosive powder in three different places shows that he was writing of the same powder. Now his letter on the 'Secret Works of Nature' would appear to have been written to William of Auvergne, Archbishop of Paris, who died in 1248 or 1249. It seems, then, that the explosive properties of black powder were known in France and England before the middle of the thirteenth century.

"It should be noted, however, that nothing shows that Bacon knew also of the projective power of the powder when ignited in a closed vessel, or that he ever dreamed of making this use of it. Nowhere in his writings, in fact, did he allude to it, and the first cannons must have made their appearance much later."

CARE OF HORSES

A horse accustomed to hard work and good feed should not be heavily fed during a rest. Probably no grain at all, or at least a very small quantity should be given on Sundays and other rest days.

Wash and oil the collars occasionally. Two minutes work at the end of the day is sufficient to keep the surface of a collar clean, soft and pliable. A damp sponge and a cake of harness soap kept in the curry comb box are the only equipment needed. Shoulder galls are due to one of two things. Dirty or ill-fitting collars. There is no excuse for either.

Water should always be given to horses before and not after feeding. If they are allowed to drink immediately after a meal, the water is liable to wash some of the undigested food into the intestines, and produce indigestion or colic.

Grooming should always be attended to. Horses left ungroomed and undried are liable to skin ailments, sore backs, collar galls, and parasitic affections. Chills and illness also follow in the wake where animals receive faulty attention in this respect. Half an hour twice a day on grooming is time well spent.

Proper ventilation of stables is absolutely necessary if lung diseases and other troubles are to be prevented.

Many a valuable horse has been lost through carelessness in pasturing after a hard day's work. The teamster should feed his horses well and get them nicely cooled before turning them in to pasture for the night.

Fix things in the stable so that the horse which is inclined to gnaw will have something to make him tired if he tries to get his teeth into it. Tin is pretty good to tack over every edge of board that is exposed.

Colds in horses must be broken in time. It is dangerous to work horses when they are suffering from cough and difficulty in swallowing or loss of appetite. They should in all cases be kept in and treated.

Mr. Gillespie said that last year all the prize winners, or nearly so were girls. This year that order appears to be reversed. He certainly scored with the audience, being greeted with a storm of applause when he announced that he would give a prize to the pupil in the Emily School who made the same standing as Patrick Perdue.

A Special Prize.

After Ald. Stratton had made a brief address Capt. Burnham said that two years ago he had asked the farmers of Ennismore to name for him a certain kind of apple which even the agricultural experts at Ottawa were unable to classify. None of them were able to do this but later a young girl wrote him giving the desired information.

"If that girl will come forward now," said Mr. Burnham, drawing a roll of bills from his pocket. "I will give her a prize."

Miss Clara Murphy, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Murphy, walked to the platform and received her reward.

The Musical Program.

An excellent musical program was rendered by the orchestra composed of Miss Agnes Scollard, John K. Galvin and Patrick Padigan. Mr. Galvin sang two Irish solos and other vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. J. E. Donahue, and Miss Lottie Donahue. The gathering broke up after the singing of the National Anthem.

Miss Audrey Milburn of No. 3 Smith, is the winner of the Burnham watch this year. It will be presented at the school house tonight.

IS BEGINNING OF FINAL VICTORY

THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS NOW IN PROGRESS WILL BE GREATEST STRUGGLE SINCE THE WAR BEGAN

British and French Troops Joined in Offensive That Has Been Carefully Planned on Vast Scale for Months---May Last for Months But Effects Will be in Proportion to Magnitude.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Aug. 1.—The battle of Flanders has begun and the indications are that it will be the biggest battle of the war. The offensive of the French and British Allies had been expected for some weeks past for although the French and British official communications gave no inkling of it German reports showed clearly a large scale of operation was preparing. The French public, however, did not know that French troops had been despatched to share in the assault.

Originally the front from the North Sea coast to Ypres had been held by the French in the Nieuport region, then by the Belgians as far as Ef Verdinghe and then by the British troops who later relieved the French and part of the Belgians along the coast.

It is thoroughly recognized here that the operation is only the beginning of a battle that will last weeks, perhaps months, but it is also hoped and believed that its effects will be in proportion to the extraordinary care and vast scale on which it has been prepared.

ALLIES MAINTAIN ALL GAINS.

Paris, Aug. 1.—In Belgium after our magnificent success yesterday our troops, under a torrential rainstorm, consolidated the positions which they had conquered. Artillery bombardment on our front in the Aisne region was continuous. East of Cerny a vigorous counter attack permitted us to make progress at several points and to take prisoners.

On the left bank of the Meuse in the region between Avocourt and Hill 304 the Germans, after artillery preparation which lasted several days, attacked this morning positions which we had conquered from them July seventeenth. The enemy was only able to reach certain advance elements of our first line where he was stopped by our fire. There was nothing to report on the rest of the front.

PUPIL OF NO. 3. SMITH WINS THE BURNHAM GOLD WATCH

Miss Audrey Milburn Presented With Prize Last Night---Capt. Burnham, Judge Huyce and Mr. Gillespie the Speakers.

School Section No. 3, Smith, is known as the Milburn School, and it is one of the wealthiest districts in the county, surrounded as it is by an up-to-date farming community. It has always been noted for the excellent teachers who have at various times presided over it. The present instructor is Miss Kate McLean, who has been in No. 3, Smith, for the past year. She comes from Bruce County, and is now spending her vacation taking the summer course in the Agricultural College at Guelph.

To the last Entrance examination Miss McLean sent up five pupils, and of these four were successful, the fifth failing by a narrow margin. One of these, Miss Audrey Milburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Milburn, took the highest stand in the township and so won the Burnham gold watch.

A large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered at the schoolhouse last night for the presentation exercises, among the visitors from the city being Capt. Burnham, Judge Huycke, Mr. C. S. McClelland, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Gillespie, with members of their family, and Mr. and Miss Scott, of Ashburnham. Reeve McKee of Smith autoed from his home ten miles away to preside at the gathering.

After a short address by the chairman, Miss Milburn was called to the platform and was presented with a handsome gold wrist watch by Capt. Burnham, who complimented her upon the distinction which she had won not only for herself but for her teacher and her school. The donor of the watch gallantly ventured the opinion that, judging from her appearance the winner of the prize would grace the watch rather than be graced by wearing it.

Capt. Burnham's Address.

Following the presentation, Capt. Burnham delivered a practical address, in which, as usual on such occasions, the benefits of hard work and careful study were emphasized. Any task in life, whether it has to do with school work or household duties, can be made interesting if taken up with the proper spirit. Any one who does not do at least some hard work is simply a loafer, although hard work is not all that is required in life.

Mr. Burnham paid a compliment to Miss McLean, the absent teacher, for her efficiency. He knew that she must be efficient, otherwise she could not have made the record which she did with her pupils at the recent examination. In conclusion, he thanked Reeve McKee for presiding, and bore testimony to the interest he has always taken as a public official in the affairs of Smith Township.

Appreciation of Capt. Burnham.

Judge Huycke spoke of the debt of gratitude which the schools of West Peterborough owe to Capt. Burnham. The yearly prizes which he offers have been the best possible incentive to prospective Entrance candidates to take an interest in their work.

"Miss Milburn," continued the Judge, "Must be either very clever or very industrious, and I prefer to think she is both. The watch she has been given tonight will always be a reminder to her of her pleasant school days."

The Judge then spoke of the benefits of education, showing how it is impossible to succeed in any calling without special training. Household duties he inclined to regarded as the highest sphere of woman, and this vocation is elevated by those who possess expert knowledge. Continuing, by way of illustrating his point, he showed how a mass of crude iron, worth perhaps one dollar, becomes worth thousands when put through the various processes and converted into watch springs.

The Judge concluded his address with an excellent dissertation on thrift, taking as his text, "A crust of bread saved is a bullet saved."

WIN-THE-WAR TO BE THE SLOGAN OF CONVENTION

Delegation From Peterborough to Attend Toronto Gathering.

TWO LEADERS TO SPEAK.

Premier Hearst and Mr. Rowell Are in Accord on This Issue.

The Win-the-War Convention will open in Toronto tomorrow, in the Arena, the largest public hall in the city with a seating capacity of over 8000. Peterborough will be represented at the gathering, among those who expect to attend being Messrs. Joseph Wearing, R. Hartstone, Ald. A. H. Stratton, R. B. Rogers, F. D. Kerr, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., and J. A. Aylmer.

A number of others who signed the call will be unable to attend owing to other engagements.

The coming convention is the great centre of public interest today throughout the entire country and especially at Ottawa.

The report that Sir William Hearst and Newton Wesley Rowell, K.C., were to speak from the same platform at the Toronto convention and virtually form a union party for the Province of Ontario created no little stir and comment.

Mr. Rowell, however, does not so regard it. In a leter to a Toronto paper he says he fails to see that any more significance is attached to the invitation to him than to that extended to the Premier. "I assume," he adds, "it was extended to each of us on the same basis because it was believed we were in sympathy with compulsory military service and the better organization of our resources for the successful prosecution of the war.

"I am in no way responsible directly or indirectly for the association or its policy, although I am in hearty sympathy with any and every effort that will help us to win the war."

The spirit in the air was felt in the senate at Ottawa yesterday when Sir James Lougheed announced that the government would proceed to enforce the conscription act before the ink used by the governor-general in giving the royal assent had had time to dry.

HeavyRains Cause Lull in Fighting

The Battlefield in Flanders Is Transformed Into a Sea of Mud.

NO ARTILLERY MOVED.

Storm Also Renders Airplanes Powerless to Render Help.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

British Front, August 1. — The heavy rain, which continued in an unceasing downpour since last night, transforming the battlefield in Flanders into a sea of mud, had forced a comparative lull in the operations this morning at most points within the scene of the Allied offensive begun yesterday. Generally speaking, the situation early today was unchanged. Along the British front several German counter-attacks were repulsed in the course of the night, and a heavy artillery duel continued, but the movement of big guns has been rendered difficult by rain.

German artillery today actively shelled the trenches which were wrested from them yesterday in No Man's Land about the salient, and British guns continued to pour a steady stream of shrapnel and high explosives into the positions to which the enemy had retired.

Air squadrons on both sides were rendered helpless by the storm to assist in the direction of artillery fire.

Paris, Aug. 1.—On Saturday Aviation Captain Guynemer brought down his fiftieth enemy airplane.

THE WEATHER.

The heated spell still continues, but a break is looked for. Highest official figure today, 92 degrees in the shade and lowest last night 69 degrees.—W.P.

New Yorkers Are Dying From Heat

Twenty-six Deaths and Many Prostrations Reported Since Yesterday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Aug. 1.—The lowest temperature in the past 24 hours was 84, at 5 a.m. The thermometer is rising again, and no relief is in sight. In Greater New York yesterday there were 14 deaths and 185 prostrations from heat, and between 2 and 7 a.m. today 12 deaths and 31 prostrations.

FUEL DANGER IS IN HOLDING UP CARS AT BORDER

Toronto Coal Dealers Have a Session With Fuel Controller Magrath.

COAL FOR $6.00 AT MINES.

C. P. R. Has Now Plenty of Cars To Move Full Supply.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, August 1. — Local coal dealers told Commissioner Magrath this morning that the dealers should be recommended to buy coal at the mines at whatever price they could obtain it. A good deal is being offered at $6 per long ton or 75 cents above the price fixed by the Federal Trade Commission. To prevent congestion at the border was the most important thing. There would be plenty of coal if cars were not held up at the border.

Supt. Arundel said the C. P. R. had now 1,100 more coal cars than at the first of may, and would soon add some 1,300 or 1,400 more.

BEGINNING OF FINAL VICTORY

KEY POSITION CAPTURED IN FIRST HOURS OF NEW DRIVE.

London, Aug. 1.—La Basseville is again in British hands. The first few hours of the new movement could not have yielded a more important strategic victory, for this point is the key position for movements to the northwest. It can be taken for granted that if the British forces break the German line at any place between Armentieres and Holelbeke this will provide a wonderful opportunity for completely isolating the army in Belgium, thus splitting the German forces and engaging them separately, the beginning of the last stage of complete victory.

Labor Agitator is Hanged by Mob

Frank Little Had Made Offensive Remarks About U. S. Troops.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Butte, Mont., Aug. 1. — Frank Little, a prominent member of the Industrial Workers of the World and leader in Arizona labor troubles, who recently referred to U. S. troops as Uncle Sam's scabs in uniform, was taken from his lodging here early today by masked men and hanged to a railroad trestle on the outskirts of the city. His body was identified by Chief of Police Murphy.

SUNDAY NIGHT'S MEETING

The City Reception Committee have completed the arrangements for the meeting on Sunday night, when the anniversary of the declaration of war will be commemorated.

The speakers for the occasion will be his Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Judge Huycke, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.

The Band will be in attendance to assist in the services which will follow the line laid out by the Lieutenant-Governor.

GERMANS VAINLY ASSAIL NEW POSITIONS WON BY THE ALLIES; FOUR THOUSAND HUN PRISONERS

British in Operations Last Night Improve New Line Won in Yesterday's Battle---Ten Villages Captured in Advance of Two Miles on Twenty Mile Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, August 1.—South of the Ypres-Comines canal the British minor operations during the night resulted in the improvement of our new line. Hostile counter-attacks yesterday afternoon and evening against our new positions at La Basseville and immediately north of the Ypres-Comines canal were successfully repulsed. Further north, in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Roulers railway, another German counter-attack was crushed by our artillery. The weather continues unfavorable for operations. Heavy rain has been falling since early yesterday afternoon. We made successful raids last night east of Bois Grenier.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

The official report from British headquarters in France reads as follows:

"The operations of the Allied troops, begun in the neighborhood of Ypres, have been continued with success during the day, despite unfavorable weather. The enemy's positions have been entered and our line has been advanced on a front of over fifteen miles from La Basseville, on the Lys, to Steenstraete, on the River Yser. Both of these villages are now in the hands of the Allies."

"On the extreme left, the French troops, acting in close co-operation with and protecting the left flank of the British forces, captured the village of Steenstraete, and rapidly penetrated the German defences to a depth of nearly two miles. Having gained their objectives for the day at an early hour, they continued their attack with the greatest gallantry beyond their original objectives, and captured Bixschoote and the enemy's positions to the southeast and west of the village on a front of nearly two and a half miles, including the Kortekerrf Ian.

"In the centre and on the left centre British divisions penetrated the enemy's positions to a depth of two miles, and secured crossings on the River Steenbeek, which constituted their final objectives.

"In the course of their attack our troops stormed two powerful defensive systems, and carried by assault the villages of Verlorenhoek, Frezenburg, St. Julien and Pilkem and many strongly-defended farms, woods and organized localities.

"Farther south, in the right centre of our attack, after gaining the whole of their first objectives, which included the village of Hooge and Sanctuary Wood, our troops fought their way forward against very obstinate resistance from the enemy in a difficult country in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Menin open road, and carried the village of Westhoek. In this neighborhood, where heavy fighting has taken place throughout the day, and still continues, we have penetrated the enemy's defences to a depth of about a mile. A number of powerful counter-attacks have been successfully repulsed."

"On the extreme right, south of the Zillebeke-Zandvoord road, our troops gained the whole of their objectives, capturing the villages of La Basseville and Hollebeke.

"In addition to heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy, over 3,500 prisoners have already been brought in, but no accurate estimate of our captures can yet be made."

SIR JOSEPH FLAVELLE WAS NOT SPECIALLY FAVORED

Davies Company Filled Weekly Contracts With British Government and Had Nothing to do With Ship Space Required to Ship Bacon.

Otawa, Aug. 1.—Sir George Foster read a letter in Parliament from Sir Joseph Flavelle, head of the Imperial Munition Board, regarding a statement made by George W. Kyte, of Richmond to the effect that rumor was current that the William Davis Packing Company was able to secure space for its products on munition ships going to England. Sir Joseph stated in his letter that the inference to be drawn from that statement was that he, as head of the Imperial Munitions Board was able to secure preferential treatment as to space for the Davies Company. It should, he said, be sufficient to state, that the Davies Company was under contract with the British Government to supply so much per week. Arrangement for space was made by the Minister of Shipping, and the company had nothing to do with it.

For private contracts the company had to get its space in common with all other companies.

"A Nefarious Proposal."

Mr. J. C. Turriff took advantage of a motion to go into supply to bring to the attention of the House the present regulation regarding the sending of parcels to Canadian prisoners of war in Germany. Prior to last Christmas, he said, the relatives of prisoners were allowed to send whatever they desired. After that a change was made and they were prohibited from sending such parcels unless to officers. This was one of the grounds of which Mr. Turriff complained. The work had been handed over to the Red Cross, and though he had every respect for this great organization and its work, judging by results in this case its work had been absolutely unsatisfactory. It had neither been thoroughly nor well done. The proposal had been made, said Mr. Turriff, that prisoners should contribute out of their pay toward the Red Cross. He considered this a nefarious proposal.

A thousand recruits weekly for the British and Canadian forces are expected to enlist in the United States.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY, AUG. 1, 1917

WHY RECRUITING FELL OFF.

"Almost ever since the beginning of the war The Toronto Star has persistently attacked the Ottawa Government. Every new action of the Administration has been made an excuse for another assault. No other paper in Canada has done so much to check recruiting and to undermine the confidence of the country in the Prime Minister and his colleagues. The Star has persistently sought to convince young Canadians that if they got into khaki they would be poorly equipped, badly armed, neglected in hospital, and left without adequate support for themselves or their dependents. — Toronto News.

THE TORONTO STAR is not the only Liberal newspaper that has sinned in this regard. In the above extract the name of our local contemporary could be substituted for that of the Toronto journal, and no violence would be done to truth. The local, or outside, of the journalistic platter may have been kept tolerably clean, but this was more than offset by the condition that prevailed within, the editorial side.

The Government is still accused by that paper with responsibility for the slump in recruiting. Why stop at this? Why not blame the Government for the all but universal failure of moral suasion to teach men their duty? Compulsion is required to keep men on the narrow path. There are men who would steal, murder, and commit other offences but for the fear of the law. Moral suasion never succeeded in closing the bars and liquor stores in Ontario. Compulsion was necessary to make the province dry, even though no license law was ever more thoroughly administered than the one that was in force in this province a few months ago.

The voluntary system of raising recruits was only one form of moral suasion, and as such it proved a failure, just as all other campaigns conducted upon similar lines have done.

There are still politicians and newspapers who profess to believe that the voluntary system could yet be made a success, just as there are men who maintain that people can be made righteous by precept rather than by legislative enactment. That is a thing that fails to work out in practice. Conditions remain as ever.

RURAL SOCIAL CENTRES.

DOES IT NEVER strike the people in the rural communities that they are not getting their money's worth out of their school buildings? School houses are erected at considerable cost. They are kept open about six hours a day, five days a week, during the school term, but are completely closed for over two months every year.

Occasionally a public function is held in a public school, such as the presentation of a Burnham watch, and the building is always crowded to capacity, even though the season may not be timely or the weather conditions favorable. This fact should set the people thinking of the possibilities in making the rural schools more of social centres, especially during the winter months.

It may be a long time before there are consolidated schools in this country, certain as the change is to come eventually. But the rural school as it exists now is capable of further development as an educational force. Lectures of interest to farmers could be held from time to time, with lighter entertainments between, entertainments that would appeal more directly to the young people, so many of whom drift to the city for no other reason than that they desire the diversion they fail to find in the country.

But the day is surely coming when instead of several there will be only one school in a township or district, graded just as are the modern educational institutions in the cities. Each such school will be the centre of the community, with teachers' residences as essentials to the welfare of every one. When that change is brought about, there will be no trouble due to frequent changes of teachers, and the pupils in the rural communities will at last come into their own—the right to enjoy advantages equal to the pupils in the city schools, who so often finish their course without witnessing constant changes of instructors.

THE NEW OFFENSIVE.

THERE HAS BEEN considerable of a lull on the Flanders front for the past few weeks or ever since the glorious achievements of the British troops at Vimy Ridge. But the Allied forces have not been idling. Word was sent out that they were preparing for another big offensive, and that it would in all probability exceed in magnitude and effectiveness anything yet attempted.

The new drive has begun, and the hopes held out for successful operations have been justified from the start. Along a front of twenty miles, according to the official report, the Allies have swept everything before them, pressing the foe back from the three first lines of his trenches and capturing ten villages on the way.

The new drive may mean much in military gains, but with it there is sure to come the long list of dead and wounded Canadians. Such advantages as those reported yesterday are not lightly achieved. The ranks of the conquering heroes will grow thinner day by day.

Who is to take the places of the fallen? The troops available for reinforcements are all but exhausted, and the call for volunteers has been all but unheeded for months. Conscription is the only resort, if faith is to be kept with the men who are writing Canadian history in characters of blood in Flanders today.

STILL PLAYING POLITICS.

THERE IS NO incident too small to escape the argus-eyed critics of the Borden Administration, if there is even a faint hope that it is possible to add to the Liberals' depleted stock of party capital. Two officers at Kingston, formerly in the civil service, asked to be returned to their old positions, pending the need for their military service, and the request was granted. The Liberal papers seized on this affair as a partisan move, claiming that the men were to be replaced by political favorites. Capt. Burnham promptly pricked that sensation in a letter to the Mail and Empire.

Mr. Kyte, who seems to have a penchant for springing groundless sensations in Parliament, insinuated, by retailing a rumor, that the Davies Packing Company was receiving special official favors by reason of the fact that Mr. Joseph Flavelle, head of the Munitions Board, is a member of that company, and that the company's bacon was being shipped to England with munitions.

A word of explanation, furnished promptly by Sir Joseph himself, was all that was required to dispose of this rumor. His company has a contract to furnish the British Government so much bacon a week. Food is required for the soldiers, just as munitions are. The Canadian company has nothing to do with the shipping of bacon. How the British authorities elect to get food supplies to England is peculiarly their own business.

The British are able to manage their own affairs without unsolicited counsel from the Canadian Opposition, many members of whom have assumed the role of guardians of imperial officials. They did it in the case of the cost of munitions, in the shipment of nickel, and again in the matter of food supplies. In each case they have been answered and silenced.

Most unwarranted of all is the stand taken yesterday by J. G. Turriff, M.P., when he questioned the recent order which forbade the direct sending of parcels to prisoners in Germany by their friends in Canada, and the turning over of that work to the Red Cross. That matter was fully explained and the order justified when the new conditions were imposed, and there is no justification for bringing the question up again. Valuable information was being sent to Germany, often unwittingly, by prisoners' friends. This was made use of by the country's enemies, and it was to prevent this that the order was issued closing all but one channel for the sending of parcels, these to be carefully supervised.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Wit and Wisdom

Simpler Code.

"In the olden days a gentleman used to call upon a lady with much formality and stately ceremony."

"Well?"

"Now he merely drives up and honks for her to come out."

Her Preference.

He—Do you believe in life insurance?

She—Some of my husbands died, but personally I prefer alimony.

Provoking.

"And how do you like Mr. Flubdub, girlie?"

"I hardly know. He's so pleased with himself that he doesn't seem to notice my good points at all."

Troublesome.

"What a trouble maker he is!"

"Yes. He couldn't be worse if he was a Socialist."

Won't Wait That Long.

"So you're a bill collector, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you believe in a hereafter?"

"I certainly do, but I'm not going to wait until then to collect this bill."

True.

"Pa, what is a has-been?"

"A pacifist, my son."

The Reason.

At the club Thompson and Taylor were discussing the peculiarities of certain of the card players, when Thompson said:

"There are two men here—Parker and Perkins—I surely hate to play with."

"Oh," said Taylor, "I know Parker's always a hard loser, but what's wrong with Perkins?"

"He," said Thompson, "is always an easy winner."

Where He Learned.

They were at the theater and the young lady was immensely taken with the leading man. "Watch," she said, "with what precision he steps across the stage. Every stride is of exactly the same length."

Her escort was just a little jealous.

"Yes," he said, cruelly, "I imagine that habit was acquired from walking the railroad ties."

The Flying Seconds.

An excited lady shouted out to the conductor just before a train was leaving, "Conductor! Are there no seconds on this train?"

"No what?" asked the conductor.

"No seconds," repeated the lady.

A passenger, who was a wag, popped his head out of the window and said: "Madam, you'll see sixty seconds pass if you'll only wait a minute."

"Please, sir," whined the beggar, "I'm a stranger here, and——"

"So am I," interrupted the accosted man, "and I think we've both something to be thankful for."

CANADA'S CARE OF SOLDIERS AS IT STRIKES AN AMERICAN WRITER

Is More Generous Than Plan Yet Designed by United States Congress.

Congress is proposing to abolish the present pension system for wounded soldiers and for the dependants of those killed in battle by substituting a minimum compensation of $1,500 for the death of an enlisted man, a maximum of $1,500 for total disability and a maximum of $5,000 for the death or total disability of an officer, writes Clara Kern Bayliss in the Chicago News.

The present pension system is considered expensive and wasteful. It is estimated to have cost the country $5,000,000,000, but, as the administration of it has cost $1,000,000,000 more, it would seem that part of the wastefulness lies in the distribution.

During the civil war a private received the magnificent sum of $12 a month. He came home penniless after four years of service. It made him a little sore to find that the shirkers of his period had bought and paid for good houses and farms. Even if he was sound in body, he felt that he had a four years' handicap.

During the present war one soldier was sent home from a foreign hospital "cured," but he was handed out from the train to his wife in a basket—both arms and both legs were gone. Think of a $1,500 compensation for that! A railroad would pay $10,000 for one leg.

Canada is more just and generous with her defenders. A bulletin issued on behalf of the soldier and his children by the United States child welfare bureau says that if a Canadian private is killed or totally disabled the pension is $480 yearly; if a disabled soldier below the rank of captain requires an attendant to care for him, a further allowance of $50 annually is made; if not totally disabled a percentage of $400 based on the percentage of his disability is paid, while an allowance is made for each daughter less than 17 years old and each son less than 16.

On his return to his country he is met by a commission, which takes entire charge of him, putting him in a hospital and looking after him until he is discharged. His pay as a soldier and the care of his family continue until he is discharged from the hospital and from service. Thereafter, if it is found that he is unable to follow his previous occupation, he is re-enlisted, not for service but for "treatment," and he is taught a new trade. While learning it he receives his pension, his maintenance at one of the institutions, $8.00 a month for spending money and the allowance for his children. Moreover, some cities and counties pay the premium on $1,000 insurance against death and total disability of every citizen who enlists there. Yet it is said that Canada's entire rate of pensions is considered too low and will probably be raised.

In addition to this well-deserved care of those who have suffered for their country Canada has a system of looking after the families of soldiers from the day of enlistment. The funds for this are derived from three sources:

1. Every soldier not an officer is required to assign one-half his pay ($15 a month) and can assign two-thirds of it to those dependent upon him. This is paid directly to the beneficiary.

2. The Government pays a separation allowance of $20 a month to the dependents of a private.

3. A patriotic fund collected from voluntary contributions from grants made by some provinces from cities and counties, is used in cases wherein the foregoing sums are insufficient to keep the family from want. These monies are held and distributed from a general office. In Montreal, for instance, local agencies have collected $7,946,085, which is deposited in the bank and no part of which can be drawn out except upon specification of the case to and an order from the general office at Ottawa.

The separation allowance of $20 a month is a flat sum paid alike to the childless wife and to the wife with children. But the patriotic fund is more wisely apportioned to the size of the family: Wife and one child less than 15, $17.50 a month; wife and two children less than 15, $22 a month; wife and three children less than 15, $25 a month.

This care of the soldier's family during his absence and of himself if disabled tends to increase the patriotism of the Canadians. But one feature of their system seems unjust. An officer receives more pay than a private, but is not required to assign any part of it to his family. The separation allowance to his family is greater than that to a private. His pension in case of discharge or disability is greater than that of a private and the allowance made to his children is greater than that to the children of a private.

For example the allowance for a private's child is $72 for a major's $84, and for a colonel's $120. This reminds one of the Hungarian schoolmam's cow, for whose sustenance the school board allows just one-half as much as for the cow of the schoolmaster. Presumably the children of the private are not as hungry as those of the colonel. This kind of class distinction is undemocratic and should not be copied by the United States.

One may hope that the richest nation in the world will not be niggardly with its defenders. It is every man's duty to help his country in her hour of need, and it is his country's duty to help him in his hour of need.

CAKES WITH CREAM

Four of the Right Kind Are Described for Housewives

A Silver Cake is made by mixing one cup of butter and two cups of sugar to a cream; then add the whites of four eggs well beaten and stir for 20 minutes, then add a cup of milk, two cups of sifted flour and lastly one cup of flour mixed with one and a half teaspoons of baking powder. Flavor with vanilla and bake.

For Solid Chocolate Cake have one cup of sugar and half a cup of butter creamed together; add two eggs, a half cup of milk, two teaspoons of baking powder and flour enough to make a stiff batter. While beating this batter smooth put over the fire in a clean saucepan one cup of sugar, the yolks of two eggs, a half cup of Baker's chocolate, grated, and a half cup of milk. After it has boiled smooth for five minutes set it aside and slightly cool; then stir it into the thick batter, beat and turn into a shallow buttered pan and bake in a medium oven; or part of the dough may be put into the fancy shaped pans and that in the large pan cut into small squares then iced or split, spread with marmalade, then cut into small jelly sandwiches and iced.

Jumbles

Beat to a cream one cup of butter, and add to it slowly 1 1-4 cups of powdered sugar. Beat three eggs light and add them to the sugar, then add two tablespoons of sherry, one teaspoon of vanilla, and sift in a pint of flour. Beat the whole well and drop by the teaspoon on a baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven until the edges are a delicate brown.

Macaroons

Take one-half pound of almond paste, nine ounces of powdered sugar, the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, a half-teaspoon of vanilla and one tablespoon of sifted flour; mix all thoroughly and drop on to a clean, ungreased baking pan. Bake a delicate brown.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of August 1, 1900:

John Hayes, a resident of North Monaghan, died in his wagon while delivering vegetables on Bolivar street. He was nearly 80 years old.

Forty-one patients were treated in the Nicholls hospital during the month of July.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

Western crops are badly in need of rain. Some showers fell yesterday.

Sir Edward Kemp stated that after August 1 parcels could be sent direct to men as well as officers prisoners of war in Germany.

Sir James Lougheed, in the Senate, said he understood the Government's intention was to enforce conscription as soon as the bill is signed.

Parliament vigorously debated the delay in presenting to the Commons Dr Bruce's report on Canadian Army Medical Service overseas.

Premier Borden said information was expected respecting one or two statements in "The Fiddlers" so far as they concern the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

WATCH-BOYS IN NORWAY

Norwegian Boys Who Scout For Fish From Sentry Boxes

It is common enough to see a boy watching cattle to keep them from straying, and in days not so very long gone by it was no unusual thing for a boy to be set to keep the birds off the crops. But a watch-boy whose duty it is to keep a look-out for a school of fish and who sits in a sentry-box set upon stilts, is not such an everyday sight.

This particular kind of watch-boy is Norwegian, the scene of his labours being the shores of some fjord of his native land.

His little sentry-box is made of wood, and perched high upon posts. Here the lad sits, gazing out across the arm of the sea, using his keen eyes for the benefit of the farmers who are depending upon him to give the alarm when a school of fish shall appear. They work contentedly enough in their fields, secure in the belief that their watch-boy will let them know when it is time to reap a harvest from the sea, instead of from the land.

When the signal is given they leave their work, throw their big nets over their shoulders, and hurry off to the boats.

Sentinel-boxes similar to those employed in Norway were in use among the fishermen on the shores of the Mediterranean, and it is supposed that the Vikings brought back with them from some of their piratical raids the idea that has been put in practice ever since.

Clean Motorist's Hands

To those who object to the old method of thoroughly greasing their hands in order to make subsequent cleaning easy after an overhauling job at their automobile, it is recommended that a solution composed of four parts of alcohol, three parts of glycerine and three parts of water be used instead. This should be well rubbed in and the hands permitted to dry before work is commenced.

Lemon For Freckles

Lemon juice is said to be very good for the face—for freckles. Apply it to the face with a bit of absorbent cotton. If your skin is not oversensitive you may be able to use it undiluted, or with an equal part of peroxide. Otherwise, it should be mixed with an equal part of water.

Hamburg Steak with Olives

Place a pound of Hamburg steak in a baking pan to form a layer about an inch thick. Put through the grinder a small onion and ten-cent bottle of stuffed olives. Spread evenly on top of steak and pour over a cup of tomato catsup and half a cup of water. Bake in a hot oven over fifteen minutes.

Scalloped Veal

Mince veal enough to make two cups. Place in a baking dish a layer of raw potatoes, then a layer of veal, again potatoes and veal, until the dish is full. Season well and pour over all a cup of water and a tablespoon of butter. Bake in a hot oven half an hour.

Pineapple Sherbet

Boil four cups of water and two cups of sugar five minutes. When cold add a cup of chopped pineapple, fresh or canned, the juice of one lemon, and freeze as usual. When half frozen add the white of one egg and a tablespoon of powdered sugar.

Clove Cake

Mix one cup of sugar, one egg, one cup of milk, a tablespoon of butter, two teaspoons of baking powder, a teaspoon of cloves and flour enough to make a stiff dough. Bake in moderate oven.

Tripe in Batter

Mix one egg, one cup of milk, a small half a cup of flour, and half a teaspoon of baking powder. Dip the tripe in the batter and fry brown. Spread with butter.

A faded carpet is freshened by wringing a cloth out of strong salt water and going over it.

WHY WOMEN DON'T STAMMER

Have you ever met a woman who stammers? If you have you are a man in a thousand, for stammering is extremely rare among the fair sex.

In most cases the reason why a man stutters over his words is due to sheer nervousness or self-consciousness. He thinks he is going to stammer and that makes him do so.

Women suffer far less from self-consciousness than men, and that is why they so seldom stammer. If they are self-conscious they usually show it by blushing and not by halting in their speech.

Of course, there are cases of stammering which simply cannot be cured whatever means are tried. But nine people out of ten can cure themselves if they will not think they are going to stutter, and if they will learn for a time to speak slowly and distinctly. An excellent help, too, is to read aloud to oneself.

A plain collar of striped silk trimmed with covered buttons. This is one of the models recently selected in a neckwear competition to decide on standard styles.

WHO IS AT THE WHEEL?

Nearly Everyone in Business and Society Seeks a Leader

Ada Patterson writes: "I've seen that car skid. I'm afraid of a skidding car, ain't you?"

"It depends on who is at the wheel." Two men stood on the curb at the street corner, looked at a small automobile and exchanged ideas. The words of the last contained much wisdom of the streets, and of the drawing room, of store and shop and tea room, of every place where assemble thinking folk. "It depends upon who is at the wheel." We hear it when a new venture is discussed. Is it a business scheme? We hear the phrase: Is a new club projected? We hear it. Is a new political organization being incubated? We hear it.

Business isn't founded on dollars or promissory notes or collateral security. It is founded on confidence. Will outsiders go into a new deal or won't they? It is simple enough. Who's at the wheel? If it is a man in whose brain and character they have confidence they will go into the deal with scarce a question. A social movement is on foot. Will Mrs. Brown work in this bazaar? Mrs. Brown thinks the movement a worthy one. She has time, yes, but who is to manage it? "Who is at the wheel?" A name is mentioned that begets confidence. The woman who will manage it is of unimpeachable moral, social, financial character. Mrs. Brown smiles. She will work for the bazaar. Mrs. Brown should know her own mind and be independent of personal considerations. True, but Mrs. Brown is playing safe and that way likes

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. THOS. MCGONIGAL, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

only a few stand alone, tearless and ashamed. It may be as well. Society, like Mrs. Brown, is playing safe. Who are these human torch lights on the path of progress? Are they brightly burning ones? Is that their last flare, or is it a steadily burning light? Society wants its torches to burn bright and true.

The moral of all which precedes is, that if we are placed at a wheel of responsibility, we make others glad that it is so.

Using Up Magazines

Have an old magazine handy on the kitchen serving table upon which to place hot or soiled dishes from the stove. As the top leaf becomes soiled it is torn off and burned. Because of the weight of the magazine it is often possible to tear off a leaf with one hand while the other hand is engaged. This is easier than scrubbing black and greasy rings from the table or having the white oilcloth scarred by stains and burns. When the youngsters want to paste things into their scrap books give them an old magazine to work on. As fast as a leaf becomes gummy it may be torn off and thrown away, and a clean one is always waiting. This saves the table from becoming sticky and smeared with paste.

Lotion For the Hands

Here is a good whitener: Rosewater three ounces; glycerine, one ounce; carbolic acid, ten drops. Always apply to the hands from tips of fingers downward to the elbows. Another good thing to do after washing the hands is to apply this lotion and leave on a few minutes: Glycerine, rosewater, benzoin, equal parts. You will soon find a marked change in them.

Sardines and Spinach

Boil two quarts of spinach, strain and chop. Mix with a beaten egg, a tablespoon of milk, salt and pepper, and boil two minutes longer. Place a layer in a baking dish, then a layer of sardines. Cover with the rest of the spinach and bake ten minutes.

We believe that any man who attempts to match his logih against a woman's tears is one kind of a padded sell candidate.

Peach Bread Pudding

Soak a pint of fine bread crumbs in boiling water. Add half a cup of sugar, two well beaten eggs and a tablespoon of melted butter. Fill a buttered pudding dish with alternate layers of this bread mixture and sliced sweetened peaches, having a layer of bread on the top and bottom of the dish. Bake slowly for fifty minutes in a moderate oven and serve hot with sweetened cream.

Hot Sandwich

Cream a roll of snappy cheese; add a well beaten egg and season with a tablespoonful Worcestershire sauce, 1-4 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon mustard. Spread the mixture on slices of bread, cut about half an inch thick. Put a slice of bacon on each piece of bread and bake for a few moments in a hot oven until the bacon is done.

Stuffed Heart

Mix a cup and a half of bread crumbs, quarter of a pound of suet, chopped fine, a tablespoon each of minced parsley and sweet peppers, the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, salt and pepper, and a little nutmeg. Moisten with milk and stuff the heart. Bake until done, basting often.

New Turnips With Sauce

Peel and cut in small pieces. Boil in salted water, and when done, drain and pour over a sauce made by melting a tablespoon of butter, stirring in a tablespoon of floor, a cup and a half of milk and boiling until thick.

Raspberry Ice

After you have extracted the juice from a quart of raspberries, strain it and dissolve one pint of water in it, then add the juice of one lemon and a half a pint of water and freeze.

Watermelon Ice

Scoop out the pink of a very ripe melon, add a cup of sugar and freeze. Serve in the melon rind.

It is easier to criticize the small mistakes of others than it is not to make a few large ones yourself.

COOKING VEGETABLES WRONG AND RIGHT WAY

Draining Them After Boiling in Water Would Frighten a French Cook—The Better Way

Worse than meat for breakfast, or throwing stale bread in the garbage can, is the sin of boiling vegetables in quantities of water and cheerfully throwing said water down the kitchen sink. Such a practice, which would be unthought of by French or other foreign cooks, is carried on in our households every day.

If we stop to analyze the composition of vegetables we shall find that all of them are composed of fibrous cellulose, starch grains and mineral salts. The cellulose is just the network to hold together the starch and salts, which are really held in solution in the vegetable or plant body. Now, with this idea clearly in mind, think of boiling a vegetable in a quantity of water—say, three quarts. The boiling bursts the starch granules as well as cooks them, softens the cellulose and releases the mineral salts, which pass off into the water.

Only Fibers Left

If we "drain" our vegetables in the common manner we throw away this three quarts of water in which are dissolved the most valuable constituents of any fruit or vegetable. What we have left is a residue of starch with the cellulose fibers. It is true that the fibers serve as "brooms" to the system or as a scouring soap of nature, and the starch represents a certain amount of definite food material.

But the salts, the acids, the minerals, the phosphates, these are all wasted when we commit the great sin of throwing away water in which vegetables have boiled.

Use Of Vegetables

We can get the same amount of starch from other foods like grain, and the fibers of the vegetables are the least important part. The main function of the vegetable is to furnish to the body those chemical constituents which are particularly needed adequately to develop heat, other bones, and to purify the blood.

Now, this practice is not necessary. It is simply due to carelessness, haphazard methods of ignorant workers who never measure the amount of water on a vegetable and who would just as soon have two quarts left at the end of boiling as one pint. The proper way is to cook the vegetable in just sufficient water to keep it from burning, and to use this small quantity in some kind of sauce as as to conserve it. Others may utilize vegetable water in coups, as is commonly done abroad, and as a basis for stock.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR

In making raspberry vinegar let your proportions be a pint and a half of fresh raspberries to every pint of vinegar; put these together in a stone jar and let them stand twenty-four hours; then strain and put the liquor back in the jar with one and half pints of fresh raspberries for twenty-four hours longer. Repeat the process for a third day, and drain without pressing through a jelly bag previously wet with vinegar, and add one pound of sugar for every pint of juice. Stir well, and when dissolved cover. Place the jar in a kettle of hot water and boil on hour, removing the scum as it rises. Bottle hot and seal the corks. When serving dilute with three parts of water.

RUINED TRENT VALLEY

Fires and Axes Waste a Million Arid Acres

The Canadian Forestry Journal advises: Of the 1,171,614 acres in the lower Trent watershed. Eighty-three per cent. are still forest covered but only 700 acres are virgin forest. Less than 90,000 acres have been moderately culled. The rest have been severely culled and are therefore in unmerchantable condition. Nearly 60,000 acres are waste lands, the results of fires. Some 580,000 acres are covered with young and second growth trees. Less than 12 per cent. are farmed.

The bulk of the country involved should be placed in, and managed as, a permanent forest reserve for the growing of timber. The Provincial Government still controls about one-third of the area, partly under timber licenses, partly in cancelled and abandoned lots. The municipalities are naturally closely interested in seeing as much of their land as possible put to profitable use in order to reduce the individual tax assessments and at the same time to permit of a higher degree of civilization through increased industrial activities and educational facilities.

Private landlords will be benefited by better protection. Permanent manufacturers can be established, industrial development will increase, and the public at large will gain in prosperity. Co-operation of the three administrative agencies, the Dominion, Provincial and Municipal governments is especially needed to develop anything like a permanent forest policy. The policy then should be to bring all the lands which are not strictly farm lands as rapidly as possible under the control of one or any of these three agencies.

REPARTEE AT THE CARD TABLE

An Amateur Bridge Player "Comes Back" at a Typical Auction Tyrant.

JONES didn't want to play cards, never had wanted to play cards in his life, and said so, but to no purpose. His objections, conscientious and otherwise, were waved to one side by the red faced person who was looking for a partner.

Jones took his seat at the card table. Before they had been playing fifteen seconds Jones and the red faced person took a forty horsepower dislike for each other. Then the wretched Jones made his first serious mistake. He of the ruddy complexion banged the table.

"Why on earth didn't you follow my lead?" he shouted.

"If there is one man in this world today whose odious example I would not follow in any circumstances you are the man!" retorted Jones, with dignity.

After that the jolly pastime proceeded. Then Jones put his foot in it again, and again the rubicund one banged the table.

"Couldn't you see me calling for a spade or a club?" he boomed. "Haven't you got a black suit, man?"

"Yes, I have," said Jones, rising from the table, "and I'm jolly well hanging on to it for your funeral."—Baltimore American.

Between Friends.

"He loves me!" said the sweet young thing.

"How do you know?" asked the merely pretty one.

"From his lovely letters."

"You poor girl—can't you tell love from literature?"

That was the first climax. The second came a little later, when one was explaining to the other how she knew all these things.

"For instance," she said, "a foolish boy proposed to me only last night. I had given him no encouragement—he might have known I'd refuse him."

"Maybe he did know you would," breathed the younger one.

Girls are so catty!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"But don't judge a man by appearance," said Mayor G. S. Marshall at a banquet in Columbus.

"Jackson Wentworth after an absence of thirty years returned to the home of his youth. Jackson had a slight affection of the skin which made his nose very red; hence when he called at the parsonage the old minister remarked:

"'Jackson, Jackson, my man, I'm afraid you've become a hard drinker.'

"'Don't judge by appearances, Dr. Steenthly,' said Jackson Wentworth, 'I hardly average two glasses of beer a week.'

"'Well, then,' said the minister in a soothing voice, 'I guess your face, Jackson, is like my gas meter—it registers more than it consumes.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

Beauty Hints.

When the eyes are very tired bathe them with hot water and drop a few drops of diluted boracic acid in the eyes with an eye dropper. Use ten or fifteen drops of the acid to one ounce of distilled water.

The habit of raising the brows continually will also tend to produce wrinkles, more quickly than the passing years. Before combing your hair place long, narrow strips of court plaster just above the center of the eyebrows and reaching halfway to the hair line. Every time you raise your brows this will be a silent reminder, and soon you will learn to know when you use those muscles that you know work unconsciously, and this will soon break you of the habit. Wear the plasters whenever you can until broken of the habit.

Mr. Gillespie on Farming.

In his address, Mr. G. A. Gillespie M.L.A., took up his favorite theme, agricultural education. He knows—no man better—the possibilities in the farmer's calling, the chances for a still further development of the industry and for greater financial success. He believes, too, that the agricultural officials at Toronto are interested in their duties and that Commissioner of Agriculture Creelman will do a valuable work on behalf of the farmer. There is in Peterborough city, Mr. Gillespie said, no industry so important to the county as that of farming. The war has brought this fact out more clearly than ever, and when peace comes greater interest will be taken in farming, and agricultural education will receive a new impetus.

Mrs. Milburn, the mother of the successful candidate, in a few graceful words, returned thanks for the prize that had been awarded her daughter.

After the singing of the National Anthem the audience spent a social hour, during which ice cream was served, the refreshments being provided by Mr. E. Sanderson and the other trustees. Mr. Sanderson, after a few years of the life of a retired farmer, has returned to the land again with all its strenuous duties. He finds himself at present, owing to the scarcity of labor, confronted with the task of working a 130-acre farm, with no help except that of his son, who is only 13 years old.

The Burnham watch has been won again this year by a pupil of May's School, the latest winner being Robert Allan. The prize will be presented this evening.

CAN ALL EXTRAVAGANCE AND CAN THE VEGETABLES

School Boards Are Cooperating and Are Giving Use of Buildings for Temporary Canning Factories.

A can in the pantry is worth two in the prairie.

Every can is a pledge to posterity.

The can is the stomach of posterity, the icebox of democracy; the esophagus of freedom.

Can waste, can extravagance, but most of all can your vegetables and fruits.

School Board Co-Operating.

The fight to conserve the country's resources and eliminate waste and reduce the price of food is now being waged in the schools of Chicago. The appeal for a general canning revival was issued by President Wilson. Canning has become the most significant of the women's patriotic activities. In the light of this new development grandmother and her basement full of jams and vegetables looms as a veritable Joan of Arc. The board of education has met the woman's committee of the national Council of Defense in the canning propaganda more than half way, according to Mrs. William S. Hefferan.

"We have arranged," said Mrs. Hefferan, "to provide equipment and canning centers for every group of twenty women which applies for it. These centers will be and are in the different city schools. The canning is conducted under the supervision of a domestic science instructor who is spoiling and give valuable pointers to able to save dozens of cans from the women at work. We have now about a dozen such centers going full blast.

Supplements Home Gardens.

"The great object is to conserve the immense quantity of produce raised in the back yard gardens this year. This vegetable and fruit supply, so much greater than ever before, stands in danger of being wasted unless a systematic propaganda impels women to take to canning. The movement is on all over the country. The canning centers are in the neighborhood schools, which are thrown open during the afternoon. The women furnish their own vegetables or fruits and the school provides the equipment.

If there are twenty women in any school district who would like to take advantage of this situation they have only to notify the board of education. After school is opened in September we plan to have the canning work continue after school hours."

President Warns Against Waste.

The president said in his appeal:

"I am informed that in many sections the people already are canning and drying fruits and vegetables in large quantities. But in this hour of peril I am concerned as I know you are, with the necessity of avoiding waste everywhere.

"To win we must have maximum efficiency in all directions. We cannot win without complete and effective concentration of all our efforts.

"We can all aid by increasing our consumption of perishable products and by so doing relieve the strain on our store of staples.

"The service we are asking the public service. Upon the housewife much of the burden of the task will fall. I join you in your appeal to the women of the nation, whether living in a city, town, or country, to devote their time, as far as it may be feasible, to this very essential work.

"I am sure we may confidently rely upon the co-operation of the editors of the nation in disseminating necessary information."

PLEDGE FROM HOUSEWIVES.

Those Who Sign Will Be Provided With Window Cards to Show Patriotism.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—The housewives of Canada are to be asked to volunteer for food service. Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, proposes to utilize the machinery of the representative provincial committees to pledge every housewife in the Dominion to the observance of the orders and regulations which conditions may determine to be essential to feed the Canadian divisions, the British forces and people, and the allied armies and nations.

Every housewife signing the pledge is to be supplied with a window card for her home, showing that the household has enlisted in the domestic food forces which Canada must have to support the soldiers at the front.

Specific instructions on methods of conserving, preserving and substituting foods to take the place of those required for export will be issued from time to time.

War will be declared at once on the food waste which is costing the Dominion sixty-five million dollars a year. Adequate food supplies are essential to victory. The Food Controller looks to the women of Canada to do their utmost to provide these supplies.

366 LONDONERS ARE KILLED BY AIR RAIDS

London, Aug. 1.—Since the beginning of hostilities, 366 persons have been killed and 1,092 injured by air raids in the London metropolitan area, according to a statement made by Sir George Cave, the home secretary, in the house of commons.

During the same period, the secretary noted, 2,412 persons were killed and 7,863 injured in ordinary street accidents in the same territory.

SIR CLIFFORD SIFTON SPEAKS AT WINNIPEG

If Laurier is Elected, Canada Will Drop Out of War.

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Sir Clifford Sifton, chairman of the conservation commission, addressed the Winnipeg Canadian Club at a luncheon in the Royal Alexandra Hotel on the present political situation, and especially in regard to the need for conscription in Canada.

"If Sir Wilfrid Laurier is returned to power, it means that Canada will drop out of the war," said Sir Clifford.

RAILWAYMEN ANXIOUS TO HEAR FROM MONTREAL

The members of the Railway Trainmen and Order of Railway Conductors are becoming a little restless to learn what their representatives are doing with the officials in Montreal. They have been gone now three weeks, and nothing has been heard from them. "It is a usual thing for these committees to return to their divisional points for the week end and discuss matters with their local branches. It costs the brotherhood enormous sums to keep these men in Montreal, and we ought to know what is doing. The trouble is that there is more time and consideration given to the officials than there there should be, and whether the delay is for the purpose of depleting our treasury or not is a question too difficult to answer." "What are they seeking from the officials?" "They are asking for the same conditions granted the C. P. R. employes on the basis of an eight-hour day.

SENDING OUT PHOTOS OF ALL UNFILLED CARS

Photographs of cars loaded below their carrying capacity are being sent to shippers by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The policy has been adopted as a part of a program by which the company is making an appeal to utilize equipment to the utmost. J. M. Davis, vice-president of operations who introduced the plan said:

"One of our large shippers could have increased the market output of his plant by 100 carloads last month, if greater care had been given to loading to capacity the cars furnished."

AMUSEMENT TAX WILL BE EQUAL TO RACING LOSS

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT EXPECT RECEIPTS WILL NOT FALL OFF.

Although the racing meets are cut in half this year, it is estimated that the amusement tax payable o the Ontario Govrenment will be nearly twice if not more, thap that paid last year.

Last year something like $50,000 was collected from amusement tax at races, but the season was twice as long as this year. However, the Provincial Treasurer must have had an inkling of what was coming and that the racing season was going to be cut in half. This year he raised the tax from 10 cents to 25 cents a head, and the result is, with the attendance this year, the tax will run somewhere between $80,000 and $100,000.

The companies tax, which is payable by September 1st this year, will it is thought, at least equal, if not be a little more than, that received by the Government last year. Last year the Government got about $2,000,000 and the figure this year will be slightly increased over that.

ONE IN THIRTY WAR DEAD.

Boston Statistician Says Majority of Wounds Are on Head.

New York, Aug. 1.—A Boston despatch to the World says: Roger Bason, the eminent statistician of Wellesley, has gathered the following figures from a close study of war casualties:

Fourteen men out of every fifteen so far have been safe.

Under present conditions, where man power is being saved, no more than one in thirty is killed.

Only one in 500 loses a limb — a chance no greater than in hazardous conditions at home.

Mr. Babson's conclusions are based on the mortality figures of the French army for the full three years of war. Attention is called to the fact that present fighting is not claiming anywhere near the number of dead recorded for the first two years.

He says: Most of the wounds sustained in the trenches are clean cut and of a nature that a few weeks in the hospital makes the subject as fit as ever. But 300,000 French soldiers have been discharged on account of wounds during the three years of the war.

Most of the wounds received in the trenches are on top of the head, simply scalp wounds. Practically speaking, a wound is either fatal or slight, with but few in between the two extremes."

WON'T HAUL THE COAL.

Railway Officials Complain that Local Coal Dealers Won't Help.

"No one cares about coal these days, that is evident," said a railway official at Toronto, who had been getting warm under the collar in an effort to have the local coal dealers unload some of the cars at Mimico yard. "But there is no use, they will not do it."

The cry is "The weather is too warm," or, "We cannot get men."

Monday, there were 510 cars of coal in the Mimico yards, out of which only 198 were unloaded, leaving 412 cars with tons of coal untouched.

"How long have the dealers got before they are expected to remove the coal?"

"They have 48 hours," was the reply. "Twenty-four hours to be warned of the coal and 24 hours in which to unload it, and then they are charged the demurrage, but you can never get them to do it."

"Now is a splendid time for the railway to haul the coal from the frontier, not when it is 6 or 7 below zero and snow drifts to plough through."

Chinese Want To Raise Unit To Fight The Kaiser

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Chinese of Chicago are bubbling over with patriotism and are eager to get into the war against Germany. All that is needed to organize a regiment of celestials here, it is declared, is for the government to furnish a military leader to train the volunteers and equipment with which to fight. This feeling abounds among both aliens and native born.

Louie Sing, one of the recognized leaders of Chinatown, said the problem of assembling the soldiers was a simple one. He declared his countrymen had been enthusiastic for weeks over the idea of organizing a unit of their own here and offering their services to Uncle Sam.

GOD SAVE THE KING

POTATO BLIGHT HAS NEW RIVAL IN THE BEETLE

POTATO GROWERS IN HASTINGS DISCOVER ANOTHER PEST.

Is there a new potato pest? Producers in certain potato-growing sections in Hastings County, report that a new enemy to the potato has appeared which threatens the crop. The pest is described as a large black beetle, which delights to feed upon the new potatoes just formed at the root of the growing plants. The beetle, it is said, burrows in the potato hill until it reaches the root-centre and in that spot lays its eggs. Later the larvae feed upon the young potatoes, leaving nothing but an outer shell. It is stated that potato growers have already met with considerable loss by the depredations of this pest.

This beetle has not made its appearance around Peterboro.

AN UNEXPECTED BATH.

While the firemen were flushing the street last evening a section of hose burst in front of Mr. Schwartz's store on George Street. That caused trouble enough but the heavy stream aimed itself directly at the window of the sleeping quarters of Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz giving them a very unexpected and cool drenching.

EXPERT GETS $25,000 YEAR

It Comes High To Get Assistance In Relieving Coal Situation

Ottawa, Aug. 1. — T. McCue, of Pittsburg who has been appointed to assist the fuel controller of Canada, is to be paid $25,000 a year. The arrangement is for one year. Mr. McCue will look after the American end of the work designed to ensure for Canadians an adequate supply of coal, anthracite and bituminous. The salary is high and there is a question about it on the order paper which may lead to discussion in the House. The situation, however, called for an expert, and experts these days command big figures. The Government considers that assurances of a coal supply will compensate fully for any high salary paid in securing it. Mr. McCue knows the coal business.

CHURCHILL RE-ELECTED BY A LARGE MAJORITY

London, Aug. 1.—Winston Spencer Churchill was re-elected member of the house of commons for Dundee, the by-election being made necessary by his recent appointment to a cabinet position. Mr. Churchill polled 7,302 votes. His opponent Edmund Scrymgeour, prohibitionist and laborite, received 2,036 votes.

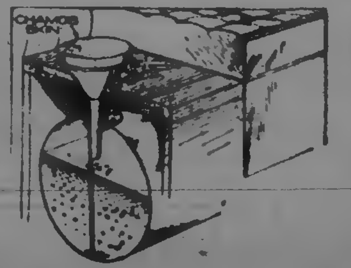
TO PREVENT FIRE

When You Are Pouring Gasoline Through Chamois Skin

Fires occurring without apparent cause while gasoline was being poured into automobile tanks through chamois skin were found to have been caused by electric sparks from ungrounded funnels. The pouring of gasoline through chamois skin develops static electricity, which accumulates in the funnel, if it is set into a wooden seat or similar place while in use. When a considerable accumulation has taken place a sharp contact of the funnel and the metal edge of the tank may cause a spark, resulting in an explosion. In order to prevent the accumulation of electricity the funnel should be grounded by fastening a light chain to it, as shown in the sketch. The chain should be long enough to remain in contact with the bottom of the tank. —Popular Mechanics.



APPLE-GROWING COSTS

Profit Per Tree Is Calculated On Basis of Barrels

Under good orchard management where there are 200 or more trees in the orchard, it costs Maine growers approximately $1 per barrel to produce apples when the production is two barrels per tree; $1.25 per barrel when the production is one and a half barrels per tree; $1.50 per barrel when the production is one barrel per tree; and $2 per barrel when the production is only one-half barrel per tree.

A tabulated statement of costs in nine orchards made by the Maine station in co-operation with fruit growers shows that the cost of production varies closely with the production per tree. Of course, considerable depends on age and condition of the trees, as well as the distance from shipping station.—Maritime Farmer.

Sheep Notes

Between the time of mating and the time of lambing the ewe flock should never be rushed about nor hurriedly driven. Dogs are the cause of much trouble among sheep at this critical period, and only those thoroughly well trained to sheep should be allowed in their vicinity

Foot rot can often be prevented by the regular paring of the sheep's feet.

Clip away the tags in the neighborhood of the ewe's udder. Attention to this details will prevent wool balls in lambs.

Get High Average In Hens

Better have a good average than a phenomenal one; better have good sized eggs than small ones which necessarily must come from the famous 200-egg layers. It is not natural for hens to give large egg records and large eggs at the same time. That fact is proved by the two-year-old hen which lays fewer eggs than she did when a pullet, but what she does lay are of a generous size. Strive for quality more than quantity.

Auto Tire Cement

When rubber cement for motor tires has stood exposed to the air for even a short time it becomes too thick to give best results. But great care should be used in thinning it as the common gasoline contains some oil and is not suitable. High-test gasoline or [illegible] of carbon should be [illegible]

SHIPBUILDING IN CANADA

Fifty Wooden Steamers Will Be In Service Within Year

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Fifty wooden steamers of a uniform size of twenty-five hundred tons will be added to the ocean-going tonnage of Canada within the next twelve months. The first of them will be launched this fall and on the others good progress is reported.

The ships are those which are to be built for the British Government through the agency of the Imperial Munitions Board. About thirty are in yards on the Pacific coast, and the others at Atlantic or lake ports. From five to nine months is the time required for completion. Simultaneously with ships of steel construction the various ship-building plants are stocked with orders to their full capacity for the coming year.

WARNS OF COURT PLASTER.

State Health Director Finds Bacteria on Sample.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1.—Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, director of the state board of health, issued a warning to residents of Illinois against the purchase of court plaster from itinerant venders. The warning came after an examination of a sample of court plaster showed bacteria. The sample came from Champaign, where a man who is alleged to have sold it is under arrest.

The warning, in addition to advising against the purchase of court plaster from peddlers, says that people should refrain from using court plasters on open wounds at any time.

In a return to Parliament by the Minister of Militia it is stated that no recommenration of the British Army Council for utilising existing Canadian facilities in the manufacture of a new and improved Enfield rifle was received by the Government.

REPORT IN FIVE WEEKS.

Chairman Henderson Promises That No Time Will Be Lost.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—An interim report on the bacon and cold storage business will be submitted in five weeks, so George F. Henderson, K.C., chairman of the investigating commission, announced today on his return from the opening sitting in Toronto.

"It will take a couple of weeks to go over the books," he said. "After that Mr. Bain, K.C., the Government counsel, will come down here and go over the record, and incidentally look into the data supplied to Mr. O'Connor. After that, in Toronto, there will be public hearings and the examination of witnesses."

It is understood that a cost accountant as well as the other expert accountants will be secured. Mr. O'Connor, K.C., who made the first report has recommended this as essential.

LIMIT TO HOURS OF WORK

Ontario Factories Act And Its Application To Women

Toronto, Aug. 1.—"The Ontario Factories Act states plainly that no girl must be allowed to work more than 36 nights' overtime in one year, or more than 60 hours a week," stated Dr. W. A. Riddell, superintendent of Trades and Labor branch, in reply to the published statement that women were workng much over 10 hours a day in munition plants. "We give women employes in munition plants a permit to work over the hours stipulated in the Act, providing there is no danger of impairing their health." Dr. Riddell added.

An Idea Grows.

The League of Nations meeting in London, the other day, must have been a peculiar gratification to Viscount Grey. His was the voice first raised on behalf of a League of Nations to follow on the war. The world then had hardly begun to think, in the darkness of battle, of the new day about to dawn. But the seed sown by Lord Grey has been like that of the mustard plant, "which becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." The great democracy of the West, in the person of its President, has done the nobly quixotic thing of declaring the League-of-Nations idea its national policy. And now three of the great nations which form the British Commonwealth have given it their approval. It has been the fashion, in certain circles, to talk of the League of Nations as "visionary" and unpractical. Persons holding such views are running the risk of getting themselves described as "antediluvian."

FLOWER FADS.

The Snapdragon Is Coming Into Fashion Just Now.

Fashions change even in flowers. There was a time when the fuchsia was all the rage. Then the dahlia had a time of immense popularity, and hundreds of new varieties were on the market.

Then came the turn of the chrysanthemum, but as it needed a house and a lot of attention it was soon left to the specialist, like the orchid.

Then came the great sweet pea boom. Anybody who had a garden at all filled it with sweet peas, and new varieties were called after every imaginable person of note on earth.

Now there is a new star—the snapdragon. People used rather to despise this flower. But, lo, the expert has taken notice of it, and it has suddenly become the rage. If the seed pods are nipped off they put out new shoots, which bear flowers until one imagines they are, like Tennyson's brook, going "on forever."

FRENCHY DESIGN.

What Paris Sends Us For a Breakfast Coat.

Smoke gray chiffon is the fabric used for this beautiful garment. The front is finely hand tucked, and femininely dainty ruffles of the chiffon adorn the collar and cuffs in double rows. A string belt of the fabric girds the waist loosely.

BECOMING NEGLIGEE.

TUB FROCKS.

Pointers About the Washable Models For Summer.

Some of the new gingham frocks are of the simplest and most practical character, frocks meant to stand hard wear and to be sent to the tub whenever necessary; yet a line here or a line there, the cleverness in cutting, the charm of color, the daintiness of collar and cuffs or guimpe—such things as these give even the plainest of the models an air of modishness.

Much is done with the rather large block checks in blue and white, black and white, pink and white, etc., and one of the simplest yet most popular of these block check ginghams shows good lines and finish and pipings of white.

Less practical because not tubbable, but extremely good looking and original, is a little dress in which Scotch plaid gingham is wedded to black taffeta. The gay plaid forms most of the upper part of the frock, but from the hips down the skirt is of black taffeta, and there is a little of the black taffeta about the collar and cuffs and buttons.

Plain gingham was combined with check or plaid very successfully in other models, and white pique or white organdy often relieved the darker colorings. One red and white broken plaid frock trimmed in narrow pipings of red and with a delectable little peplum vest and collar of fine white batiste, hand tucked and embroidered, was a great favorite with buyers and pretty enough for summer afternoon wear whenever one might in other seasons have worn a smart linen frock.

There seems to be a definite effort to place the white linen frock in the limelight, and it would be hard to find anything that would look cooler, crisper, more immaculate, for midsummer wear than fresh white linen, but that word "fresh" is the shibboleth that linen pronounces only with great difficulty. If there is a material that loses its freshness more easily and speedily than white linen, that more quickly looks mussy and wrinkled and all that the summer dress should not look that material is unreliable indeed.

The colored linens are not only fewer than usual, but seem on the whole less attractive in color, a fault they share with many of the season's materials, thanks to the complications regarding dyestuffs. However, there are linens of lovely colors, even if not in the usual quantity, and here and there one sees a linen frock that is altogether charming.

Coat frocks of linen in which a smock like coat of the stuff falls over a skirt hung from the shoulders by a suspender or skeleton underbody of white muslin are made up in various colors, as are genuine smock frocks in two pieces, and are comfortable and useful for sports wear or workaday uses.

Achievement.

Professor Plummer's life began
With every promise of success.
He was a diligent young man—
People admired him more or less.

From idle sentiment exempt,
He could observe with clearer eyes
And look with laudable contempt
At everything which was not wise.

To saw that friendships came and went.
"We meet," he said, "shake hands and scatter."
He saw that time was better spent
Upon some more important matter.

He reasoned in his lucid way
That love was quite unnecessary.
"When one was busy," he would say,
"A wife would be distracting, very."

Strange, after years in studying
Important matters occupied,
One wholly unimportant thing
Professor Plummer did—he died.

Dolan Winner of Blind Score Contest

Last night much interest was displayed in the rolling off of the blind score, 118, at the Water street alleys. At the end of the first game Dolan and Henderson were tie with 118 each and an extra game had to be rolled, in which Dolan won out with a 117 count, while Henderson rolled 120. There are two more bowlers to roll off the 118 score and if these players do not roll the exact score, Dolan then carries off the big prize. The scores were as follows: Dolan, 118 and 117; Henderson, 118 and 120; McDonald, 100; Boyd, 126; Routley, 125; Cocks, 120; Fielder, 116; Langley, 121; R. Ross, 113; Shook, 127; Thompson and Gordon will likely roll off tonight.

The proprietor of the alleys has donated a handsome prize for a blind score contest, beginning July 31 and ending Aug. 11. The scores are from 115 to 126.

Mr. J. J. Solomon, proprietor of the alleys, left last night for Ottawa, where he will spend the next few days.

MERLIN KOPP IS NOW BEST BASE-STEALER

Merlin Kopp continues to lead the International league in base-running. He has swiped 42 sacks, which is more than any player in the National or American league has done. Thirty pilfered stations mark the high line in the American league, and the great Ty Cobb is beaten in his former specialty by the Bishop flash, 42 to 24. Kopp also leads the Herd with the stick, with .283.

The Boys in Khaki Clad.

We have sung of the Blue
And sung of the Grey
Since the days of "Sixty-one";
We could write a verse,
Good, bad or worse,
That would jingle with either one.
But what will we do
When this war is through
And we sing of the soldier lad?
To find any rhyme
It's beyond my time
For the boys in khaki clad.

They're off to fight
For freedom, right
And justice for all men;
When duty's done
And vict'ry's won,
Then they'll come back again.
So give three cheers
And banish tears,
Don't let your hearts be sad;
They'll be brave and true—
Like the Grey and Blue
Those boys in khaki clad.

The Providence club has certainly contributed a live member to the Braves in the person of Outfielder Powell. He has been tearing the horsehide to pieces and looks like an all-round winner.

It is generally admitted that the most important thing about Cincinnati these days is its ball team. If you don't believe it, ask any Porkville fan.

The showing of the eastern teams in the National league does not warrant their pinning any roses on themselves. The western representation is making a much beter showing which will serve to quiet some of the very loud self-praise heard at the beginning of the season, indulged in by certain teams "somewhere in the east."

"Between patriotism and baseball, give me patriotism." So said Eddie Lafitte, formerly of the Brooklyn Feds and late mound artist for the Paterson Silk Sox, as the recruiting sergeant pointed a finger and said, "Sign here." And so Eddie is going off to war—ahead of some of the other fellows.

Grouchy Gus Says:

"I don't see anything to wonder at in the statement that married men outnumbered the single fellows in the overseas contingents. With many of the former the European scrap means simply a change of adversaries."

Lew McCarthy, star backstop of the Giants, is back on the home grounds, but not to play. He is hobbling around on crutches and won't be in the game until very late in the season, and perhaps not then. McCarthy recently left Cincinnati, where he was in the hospital ever since he broke his leg, to make the trip back to his team-mates. It is generally admitted that the loss of a player like McCarty would have been fatal to the Giants' pennant chances, had it not been for the fact that they were able to fall back on the veteran George Gibson to help out Catcher Bill Rariden.

Founding of the New York Yacht Club.

The New York Yacht club, the largest organization of its kind in America, is today seventy-three years old, having been founded on July 30 1844. This year there will be no great celebration of the event, for many of the yacht owners have placed their craft at the disposal of the government, and instead of sailing in sunny bays and steaming hither and yon in search of pleasure, they are today engaged in the more serious business of keeping a lookout for predatory U-boats. It was on July 30, 1844, that several gentlemen owning pleasure craft gathered aboard the yacht of John C. Stevens, lying off the Battery in New York harbor, and formed what has become the foremost organization of yachtsmen in America, and one of the most influential of its kind in the world. They called themselves the New York Yacht club, elected Mr. Stevens their first commodore, and agreed to hold an annual cruise to Newport. During the past few years there has been an annual rendezvous at Glen Cove, Long Island, N.Y., and from there the annual cruise started. Bound up with the history of the New York Yacht club is the history of the America's cup. The trophy which England has sought vainly to recover for sixty-six years was brought over here in 1851 by the famous schooner America. The Royal Yacht Squadron of England has sought time and again to win the cup, but has always been defeated. It is only fair to explain that the conditions of the contest for the cup, one of which requires that challengers must journey to the course under their own sail, are extremely favorable to the retention of the cup in America.

May Send Parcels Direct to Germany

Military Department Has Revised Order of Last Year.

Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, said in Parliament that action had been taken on the recommendation of Sir George Perley, that no more parcels be sent direct to prisoners of war in Germany, but that the money be sent to the Red Cross in London, by whom parcels would be forwarded. It had been decided, however, to revise this regulation, and after August 1 parcels could be sent direct to men as well as officers. Sir Edward Kemp said there might have been irregularities, but he paid tribute to the work of the Red Cross in London, a tribute in which Premier Borden concurred.

LT. D. R. MUNRO SUPPOSED DEAD

WAS MEMBER OF AVIATION CORPS AND WELL KNOWN HERE.

Word has been received in the city that Lieut. D. R. Munro, with the aviation corps at the front, is missing and is supposed to have been killed in action. A telegram came from the young man's parents in Halifax to Mrs. Spry, 210 Stewart street, with whom Lieut. Munro was boarding when he enlisted last November. He was at that time in the employ of the C.G.E. in the testing department and had lived in this city several months.

The late Lieut. Munro was a bright and popular young man and his many friends here will sincerely regret to learn of his probable death.

Troubles and gray mules should always be approached from the front.

We never heard of a husband and wife quarreling about which loved the other the most.

In the good time coming everybody will be struck by the sun of prosperity.

OBITUARY

CLARISSA JOSEPHINE DUNSFORD.

A highly respected resident of Lindsay passed away on Monday, July 30th, in the person of Mrs. Clarissa Josephine Edwards, at the advanced age of 79 years. The deceased lady was born in the Township of Harvey, Peterborough County, and was a daughter of the late Claude Toker, an Englishman who settled on the shores of Sandy Lake with his family, and was afterwards drowned in that lake.

The late Mrs. Dunsford has been a resident of Lindsay since 1860, her husband, James Wicks Dunsford, lawyer, having died on November 1st, [illegible]. He was the first police magistrate of the town.

Seven daughters survive, namely: Mrs. J. G. Edwards, of Lindsay; Mrs. W. B. Irwin, of Toronto; Mrs. George Edwards, of Denver; Florence, Josephine, Kate and Nellie at home. One sister, Mrs. Gage, of Peterborough, also survives. These have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

AN OUTING FOR THE VETERANS

TWO STEAMERS TO CARRY THEIR FAMILIES AS CITY'S GUESTS.

The war veterans will have a trip down the river at a date to be selected by themselves on which they can secure boat accommodation.

Acting-Mayor Duncan and Ald. Doboin and Stratton met members of the Great War Veterans' Association last night and discussed the trip which the Council had offered them. It was felt that one boat would hardly be sufficient to carry all the veterans and their families, so the commitee told the officers to get the boats and arrange the date and the Council would attend to the boat fees.

The veterans expressed their appreciation of the Council's generosity by extending a hearty vote of thanks.

CUPID OUT ON STRIKE SINCE SOLDIERS LEFT

Reports which have been received by the vital statistics branch of the Provincial Government indicate there has been a very depreciable falling off in marriages in Ontario compared with last year. Conscription does not appear to have hastened or increased the number of marriages.

The falling off is attributable to the fact that last year there was an unusually large number of marriages of soldiers before they went overseas. Soldier marriages this year have been few in comparison, while the marriage rate generally is lower because of the fewer numbr of single men in the Province, owing to the response to the call for war service.

MOONLIGHT ON THE RIVER

The moonlight excursion down the river last night was one that those on board will talk about for many days to come. It was one of the grandest nights that was ever enjoyed on the Otonalee.

Last night's trip was the third of the night trips run under the auspices of L.O.L. 1175 per steamer "Geneva," and while the others were good ones the third was admitted to be the best of all.

The moon shone out in all his glory and the reflection on the ripples caused by the motor boats and canoes as seen from the steamer was simply grand.

It was just a nice sized crowd for a hot night, and the south wind gave great comfort to those who had suffered the intense heat in the city all day. At nearly every point along the river swimming parties could be observed, and on the shore of the Little Lake the bathers turned out by the hundreds to cheer the moonlighters on their way.

For those that delighted in dancing—and there were not a few—Nichol's Orchestra was present and rendered splendid music.

The young ladies in the front of the boat were so delighted with the evening that they could not refrain from singing "Memories" as the boat drew near the wharf on the return journey at 11 o'clock.

SENATOR MOVES TO AMEND BILL

LIBERAL LEADER WANTS AN ELECTION BEFORE CONSCRIPTION.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—The debate on the national service bill has begun in the senate, and while it could not be said to have stirred up so much interest as the debate on this measure did in the commons, the presence of a number of members from the lower house indicated that it is attracting considerable attention.

The expectation is that only two of the French-Canadian senators will vote against the principle of conscription, namely Senators Landry and Montplaister, and that apart from these the division on the amendment proposed by Senator Bostock, the Liberal leader, will be a party one. The effect of this amendment is that there should be a general election before conscription is put into force. With the new appointments to the senate recently, the government will be able to defeat the amendment by a narrow majority.

WILL TAKE OVER C.N. RAILWAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, August 1. — A despatch from Ottawa to the Daily News says the Government will take over the Canadian Northern Railway, the price to be left to arbitration.

SMITH FARMER BADLY HURT

GEO. SIMPSON MEETS WITH SERIOUS INJURY WHILE UNLOADING HAY.

George Simpson, a well-known farmer of Smith, was seriously injured while unloading hay at his farm last night.

Mr. Simpson was driving the horse that is hitched to the hay fork, and in some manner the pulley broke and the release threw Mr. Simpson on to a pile of rails some distance away. He was picked up and taken to his home where Dr. Cameron was called, and after relieving the injured man as much as possible ordered his removal to the Nichol's Hospital where he spent a very restless night.

It is thought that Mr. Simpson's spine is injured.

MOWER RAN OVER WELLS BATEMAN AT BAILIEBORO

INFLICTING VERY SERIOUS INJURIES — HORSES TOOK FRIGHT.

A distressing accident occurred at Bailieboro about 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the victim, Mr. Wells Bateman, is today in a very serious condition. Batemen is employed by Mr. Ira Dawson, and was returning home with the mower after cutting hay. Just when near his own gate an automobile passed and the horses took fright, and became unmanageable. Bateman was thrown to the ground in front of the knives, and the mower passed over him.

His skull was fractured, his shoulder and elbow broken, his face and head badly cut, several teeth knocked out, and numerous cuts and bruises were inflicted about his back and chest. Doctors were summoned from Peterborough and Millbrook, and today Mr. Bateman is resting fairly comfortably, but his condition is quite serious.

The widower who mourns the loss of his first wife sometimes takes a second—and continues to mourn.

ALLIES REGAIN LOST POSITIONS

GERMANS ADMIT DEFEAT IN OFFICIAL REPORT OF DRIVE

Describe it as Most Tremendous Battle of War and Say They Were Unable to Withstand the Onslaught of Allies---More French Successes.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Aug. 2.—The bad weather continues in Belgium says an official statement issued this afternoon by the French war department. Germans last night made two attacks to the east and southeast of Rheims, but both failed. On the left bank of the River Meuse there was violent artillery duels. The Germans last night attacked in the sector of Avocourt Wood without success and several attacks in Apremont Forest, southeast of St. Maihel, utterly failed.

Losses By Subs.

Paris. Aug. 2.—Two French ships of over sixteen hundred tons and one under sixteen hundred were sunk by mines or submarine last week.

Four Italian sailing vessels were sunk during the week ending midnight Sunday.

Huns Admit Defeat.

Some surprising admissions in connection with the great Anglo-French offensive in Flanders are made in the German official report last night, the full text of which appears elsewhere.

"Bixschoote could not be held by the Germans," is one admission. Another concession is: "The enemy penetrated with tremendous pressure into our defensive zone." The report says: "The great battle of Flanders has commenced. . . . It is one of the most tremendous of the third year of the war. . . With masses such as never have been used at any period of this war, not even in the East by General Brussiloff, the English, and in their wake, the French, attacked yesterday on a 25-kilometre front. . . . Their aim was a lofty one. It was intended to deliver an annihilating blow to the 'U-boat pest.'"

A History of the War to Date

Saturday is the third anniversary of the declaration of war by Britain against the Central Powers. The Review will on that date contain a special feature, comprising a brief, but comprehensive history of the struggle which has been in progress for the past three years and is now more intense than ever. This history will contain interesting tables showing the losses of each country involved both in men and ships, and will also supply estimates of the cost to date.

Do not miss this feature. Secure a copy of Saturday's Review as the history will be an article well worth preserving for future reference.

ITALIANS HOLD OFF AUSTRIANS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Aug. 2.—Todays War Office report says the enemy showed greater activity yesterday attempting surprise attacks with patrol and sometimes attacking with large parties our advance positions but was stopped everywhere and had to withdraw with losses.

RUSS. IS STILL FALLING BACK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Aug. 2.—Between the River Zbroes, on the Russian-Galician frontier, and the Dneister River, north-west of Kholin, the Russians yesterday abandoned their positions says an official statement issued today by the Russian War Department. The Rusians also retired in an easterly direction between the Dneister and Pruth Rivers.

MR. R. R. HALL IS AWARDED $3,000 DAMAGES BY COURT

Verdict in His Favor in Suit Brought to Recover for Injuries Sustained by D. A. McDonald's Auto in Toronto Two Years Ago.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Kelly yesterday, at Osgoode Hall, handed down judgment in the action brought by Mr. R. R. Hall against Mr. D. A. McDonald, wherein Mr. Hall claimed $3,000 damages for injuries suffered by him by reason of Mr. McDonald's car running him down on Wellington street east, Toronto, on the 5th of August, 1915.

Judgment was given in Mr. Hall's favor for the full amount of his claim together with full costs of the action.

This action is not only of a great deal of local interest to motorists and to pedestrians but will also be of great interest to motorists throughout the Province of Ontario and particularly to those motorists who frequently forget that pedestrians have some rights on the street.

On the 5th of August, 1915, about nine o'clock in the evening Mr. Hall was crossing from the north side of Wellington street east with the intention of entering the Ontario Club. While he was crossing the street he observed a motor car just crossing Yonge treet about 110 yard away. He naturally assumed that he had ample time to cross the street. The motorist however increased his speed to a high rate and struck Mr. Hall just before he reached the sidewalk and at the same time Mr. McDonald's car collided with a stationery motor car on the north side of the curb.

Mr. Hall complained that the defendant was negligently and carelessly operating and driving his motor car at an excessive and unlawful rate of speed and that he failed to sound his motor horn in time to give the Plaintiff warning of his approaching car. The defendant had two other passengers with him in the front seat and no passengers in the rear seat of the car and the plaintiff claimed that this circumstance interferred with the defendant's operation and control of his dangerous and swift running machine and that he was unable to stop his car or exercise any reasonable control over it.

Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., and Mr. R. T. Harding appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., and Mr. J. Callahan appeared for the defendant.

BRITISH FORCES RE-ESTABLISH FORMER LINE LOST IN COUNTER ATTACK TO GERMANS YESTERDAY

WHEN COUNTRY TAKES OVER THE C.N. RAILROAD

What the Government Will Get When the Transfer Is Completed.

10,000 MILES OF ROAD.

Line Was Begun Eleven Years Ago and Has Cost $500,000,000.

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—The Government of the Dominion of Canada, acting on authority of a resolution adopted at Ottawa yesterday, will acquire the entire common stock of the Canadian Northern Railway, and operate it through the C. N. R. Company, by controlling the Board of Directors, also acquiring all the subsidiary companies.

The Canadian Northern Railway was begun eleven wears ago, and nearly $500,000,000 has been expended on construction and equipment. It has 10,000 miles of track.

A straight loan of about $7,500,000 to the Grand Trunk Pacific is also contemplated.

The Proposals

The railway proposals in brief are:

Purchase of the outstanding $60,000,000 stock of the Canadian Northern Railway, giving the Government complete ownership of the C.N.R. system and all subsidiary enterprises.

Appointment of three arbitrators to determine the value of the stock acquired subject to an appeal to the Supreme Court by either the Government or the owners or pledgees of stock in the event of failure by the arbitrators to reach an unanimous determination.

Canadian Northern to retain its corporate identity with operation and administration under a board of directors named by the Government.

At least five-sixths of the outstanding shares to be transferred by agreement. Government to take the right to compel the transfer of the remaining shares.

Demand loan of $7,500000 at 6 per cent., secured by mortgage, to be made to the G.T.P. Railway. Government to take power to constitute a board of directors.

What the Government Gets

About 9513 miles of railway.

Lake Superior terminals with five elevators at Port Arthur, with a capacity of ten million bushels.

Steamship lines on lake and ocean

The Canadian Northern and Great Northwestern Telegraph Companies, with 1,500 offices in Canada and direct connection with the Western Union and the big cable companies.

Great terminals in all the cities of Canada, including the Mount Royal tunnel.

With the government-owned railways it forms a big national system serving every province in Canada, with stations and terminals in nearly every city of the Dominion.

The Government will now control a complete railway, telegraph, and express service from ocean to ocean.

"TO WIN THE WAR"

At a meeting of the L.O.L. 1175 held last night a resolution was passed and copies will be sent to the leaders of both political parties in which the members of the lodge agree to support the government that will stand for the prosecution of the war at all costs to the bitter end. The members were all very strong for a "Win-the-War" Government.

Number of Germans Taken Prisoner Now Given as 4039---Airplanes Assist Land Forces in Spite of Heavy Rain.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, August 2.—Reuter's correspondent at the front wires as follows: The Germans are throwing in their best troops to relieve the situation, and their losses must be colossal. Our artillery maintains a steady barrage upon the rear of the new German lines, so that the relief troops have to be brought through this before they can organize for attack. The enemy's artillery has been concentrating heavily upon Cernors, and the weather prevents our airmen directing the counter-battery work to any extent.

London, August 2.—The British forces today launched a counter-attack against the German positions in Flanders. Sir Douglas Haig reports that British troops completely re-established their former line in the neighborhood of the Roulers-Ypres railway, some territory in Wicharea that the Germans yesterday had regained.

British Win Raids.

The full text of the British statement reads: "Heavy, incessant rain has fallen throughout the past 48 hours. In the neighborhood of the Roulers-Ypres railway, where the enemy yesterday afternoon had succeeded at great cost in gaining a foothold in our advanced positions, our counter-attack, which was launched late in the evening drove back the German infantry at all points and completely re-established our former lines.

"On the remainder of the Ypres battlefront there was no change. On the right of the British line southeast of Hargicourt, our troops successfully raided the enemy's positions and secured prisoners."

4,039 PRISONERS TAKEN.

An official statement issued yesterday says in spite of the weather, which made flying almost impossible, our airplanes kept in contact with our advancing infantry throughout the day. Enemy airdromes, transport and infantry were also successfully attacked with bombs and machine-gun fire. A few enemy machines that attempted to fly were attacked and six of them brought down. Three of our machines are missing.

The number of German prisoners captured was 4,039, of which 85 were officers. These figures include such of the prisoners as were captured in yesterday's operations who reached the collecting stations by 6 p.m. The captured material includes eight field guns, fifty-three machine guns and thirty-two trench mortars.

Eighteen British vessels were sunk by the Germans subs last week.

Seventeen states in the neighboring republic have already filled their regular army war quotas.

MERCURY TAKES DROP OF OVER TEN DEGREES

Humanity at Last Finds Relief From the Excessive Heat.

PROBS — COOL TOMORROW.

Expert Explains Why Themometer Records So Often Vary.

Ten degrees change in temperature frequently means the difference between discomfort and comfort. After broiling for some days in temperatures of over 90 degrees, a welcome change has occurred.

The highest temperature to-day was 82, early this forenoon. A further drop of 4 or 5 degrees has since taken place. Lowest point last night, 69 degrees.

Several persons have drawn attention to the fact that higher figures than given in these weather notes have been recorded on instruments in the business section. For instance, the official figures for Monday were 95 degrees. Mercury thermometers on George, Charlotte and other downtown streets, went up to 100 and over. The large one in front of Trebilcocks Bros. bookstore was over 100 on Monday afternoon. But it must be remembered that it stands where the sun beats on it all forenoon, and the heat from the block pavement is reflected onto it. It does not receive the full benefit of any breeze that may be blowing, either and therefore does not stand in a place to give a fair test. And, besides, it reads several degrees too high.

Notwithstanding this it is a reliable instrument and is more accurate than the vast majority that their owners swear by—or at.

In many of the larger cities in the U. S. the weather bureau is stationed on the roof of the tallest sky-scraper, and the readings are usually from 8 to 10 degrees lower than on the street surface below.

There is also a difference in temperature in different sections, even within the city limits. The south part of the city is almost invariably several degrees colder on a zero day in winter than the northern end, and in the fall the early frosts nip gardens in the south, when those at the north are untouched. In hot weather the rule is reversed, and the southender perspires in a temperature several degrees higher than the northener does.—W.P.

THREAT OF DEATH FOR STATESMEN

SENATOR BEAUBEIN WARNED NOT TO VOTE FOR CONSCRIPTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Aug. 2.—A stick of dynamite accompanied by a note threatening death if he voted for conscription was this morning found under the balcony of the home of Senator Beaubien in Outrmount. The police suspect dynamite is part of a consignment stolen by masked bandits from the quarries in Rosemount. Senator Beaubien is one of the best known French-Canadian advocates of conscription in Quebec.

Yesterday he spoke in the Senate in favor of conscription but advised that it be not applied until after the election.

Eighteen British vessels were sunk by the German subs last week.

China may shortly declare war on Germany, following Siam's example.

HEAD OF RUSSIAN ARMY HAS RETIRED FROM HIS COMMAND

Busseloff is Replaced by Korniloff--Germans Still Gain on Northern Russian Front--New Russ. Offensive Begun But Heavy Reverses Are Reported.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Aug. 2—Gen. Brussiloff, commander-in-chief of the Russian armies has resigned, and Gen. Korniloff has been appointed Generalissimo. General Tchermemiscoff, commander of the eighth army has been appointed to succeed General Korniloff in command of the Southwest front.

Still Falling Back

German forces have occupied the Uskull bridgehead of the Northern Rusian front, fifteen miles southwest of Riga, according to reports received here from the battle front. The position had been evacuated by the Russians.

Begin New Offensive

London Aug. 2.—The beginning of a partial offensive by the Russians in Galicia, in the direction of Trembowla, is announced by the War Office. A hostile position was carried in this movement.

South-west of Kimpolung, towards the southern end of the fighting line, the Russians were forced back somewhat in the region of Nagray. They were also compelled to retire to some extent to the east of Geremeut, between the Dneister and the Pruth region.

The statement says the Russians suffered great losses when they were forced to retire across the Zbroes Tuesday.

Austro-German troops have made new advances in the eastern war theatre, according to the German official report. The Russian positions on the Horodenka-Czernowitz railway, says the army headquarters' statement were broken through by shock troops. North of the Dniester the Russians were forced into the Chotin river bend."

A telegram from Jassy says the Russo-Rumanian advances between the Casin and Putna valleys resulted in the enemy losing, between July 24 and 28, ninety-eight guns and about 4,500 prisoners. The enemy front of 60 kilometres (36 miles) was broken to a depth of between 17 and 20 kilometres.

ANOTHER ALLEN BOY BRINGS NEW HONOR TO FAMILY NAME

Robert Wins the Burnham Gold Watch in North Monaghan---Is One of Seven Sons Two of Whom Are at the Front---Presentation Last Night.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Allen, Morrow street, have raised a family of twelve children, five daughters and seven sons, and among the latter there is not one who bears the slightest resemblance to a molly-coddle. They are a sturdy and stirring band of young fellows who are continually active and accomplishing something worth while. Two of them are at the front, and another of military age would be there, too, but for the fact that he has been turned down three times by the military medical authorities.

William, the eldest, went to Europe with the 39th Battalion. One year ago he was in a dugout with three comrades, and of the four he was the only one who came out alive. He was, however, suffering so severely from shell shock that he was unconscious for six weeks, and when he came to himself was in a hospital in Scotland. He is still suffering from the effects of his injuries. His brother Frank went to Europe with the 52nd battery. Fred, the one who has tried in vain to get into the service, has been rejected by the physicians of three units, including those of the medical corps, to which he offered himself for special service.

The other day when a swimmer at Rye's boat house got beyond his depth and had gone down for the second time it was a younger Allen boy who went into the water and saved the swimmer's life, for which act he is entitled to a medal of the Royal Humane Society.

In scholastic circles, too, the Allen family has just won renown. Robert, who is about 12 years old, won the Burnham gold watch by taking the highest stand of any candidate in North Monaghan who wrote at the recent Entrance examination. He is a pupil of May's School, an institution which is on a par with any school in or out of the city and which has had the signal honor of winning the Burnham prize three times in all, twice in succession, the fortunate pupil last year being Miss Mary Morton, who is now attending business college in this city. The first to capture the honor was Miss Vera Whitfeld, who is now a pupil at the Collegiate here.

Miss Wilma Fair is principal at May's School, and her efficient assistants are Misses Eva Rae Olga Johnston, Stella Cuffe, who is in mourning for her brother who gave his life for his country, and Mrs. Stilison.

The high standard that has always been maintained by this school is due to a large extent to the three energetic and progressive members of the Trustee Board. These are Messrs. Harry Webber (chairman(, E. Saunders and C. Glover.

Presentation Exercises.

Reeve Rye of North Monaghan presided at the presentation exercises last night, and in his opening address highly complimented the Allen family, setting forth their many virtues as recorded above. Capt. Burnham called Robert Allen to the front and with a few neat words of congratulation presented him with the prize.

The following program was then rendered:

Chairman's Address—Reeve Rye.
Violin Selection—Sammy Swarts.
Mr. Burnham—Address and Presentation.
Recitation—Dorothy Butler.
Gramophone selection
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Speech—Judge Huycke.
Violin Selection—Sammy Swarts.
Recitation—Ruth Yardley.
Gramophone Selections.
Recitation—Mabel Lloyd.
Reading—Mr. J. John.
Address—Mr. H. Webber.

Capt. Burnham made a short practical address to the young people assembled, and emphasised the point that duty should always be performed for its own sake and without hope of reward.

Judge Huycke, in his opening remarks, said that North Monaghan was one of the wealthiest townships

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH THURSDAY, AUG. 2, 1917

SIR WILFRID MUST GO.

What have been the causes of [illegible] the effort to form a national Government? So far as Sir Wilfrid Laurier is concerned, the answer is simple. He is opposed to conscription; therefore, he cannot join any government whose policy is conscription. He and those who agree with him on that point, in Quebec or elsewhere, must be eliminated so far as the present problem is concerned.—Toronto Star (Liberal.

SHOULD SIR ROBERT RETIRE?

Editor Review: There is a disposition in some localities, not friendly to Sir Robert Borden, to say that "he ought to step aside and a new union or compromise leader be put in his place representing Conservatives and Liberals." Why so? Is Sir Robert not good enough? Has his career and conduct of affairs, not been straightforward? Has he not steered his ship loyally and like a true Britisher and man when the Liberal party cannot conscientiously follow their leader? Some of its members wants to break up our party, too.

Is this fair or just? I do not think so. I will be disappointed and surprised if the Liberal electors will not do the right thing in the present crisis, although sometimes a political manipulator cannot resist the wish to lose as little as possible by his difficulties, such as he is now facing to make as much as circumstances will allow out of the difficulties of the Conservative party at this time.

Such a proceeding is not fair to Sir Robt. Borden or the Conservative party and should be guarded against by all true and loyal Canadians at this time, be they Liberal or Conservative.

READER.

We believe that "Reader" has located the true reason for the agitation which he deplores when he says that the Liberals who insist upon the retirement of Sir Robert Borden are intent on nothing so much as disrupting the Conservative party just as their own is broken up. They are left without a leader in one of the greatest crisis that has ever arisen in this country. They are hopelessly lost, helplessly floundering. The Conservative party is united as it never was before for one purpose behind one leader. What a contrast! The one condition has arisen through no fault, perhaps, of the rank and file of the opposition. They are not responsible for their leader's inglorious desertion of his followers outside of Quebec. Should the Conservatives, to satisfy a whim of their opponents, wantonly work the same ruin in their own organization?

The retirement of Sir Robert Borden would mean something more than a party embarrassment. It would spell a national calamity. In the present upheaval he is the country's last hope, the one now in whom the better elements in all parties have implicit confidence. No man in Canada knows so much of the Empire's needs and his own nation's responsibilities. Sir Robert Borden is the man of the hour. To replace him with an untried and inexperienced leader would be simply wooing further disaster.

SIR WILFRID AS LEADER.

THE TORONTO STAR has practically read Sir Wilfrid out of the party, and The Globe, too, finds itself at issue with him. The Liberal politicians, who, in conference in Toronto, expressed confidence in him as a leader, set the entire party throughout Ontario by the ears. When the editors of twenty Liberal newspapers met to endeavor to find a way out of the meshes that encumber them and to agree upon a platform, they treated the Liberal leader with the scant courtesy of ignoring him altogether. Perhaps, after all, no condemnation could be stronger, no repudiation more thorough.

Sir Clifford Sifton, one of the bulwarks of the Liberal party, in an address at Winnipeg, recommended the elimination of Sir Wilfrid as leader [illegible] turned to power Canada's part in the war would cease. This Brutus-like thrust evidently touched the chieftain in a tender spot, and in Parliament yesterday he spoke in his own defence. What he said does not clear the way for his party in any part of the Dominion outside of Quebec, but rather adds to their difficulties.

Sir Wilfrid says he is still leader. He refuses to be ousted. This means a break in the Liberal party with the boudaries of Quebec as the dividing lines. He denies that he has been playing to the galery, that part of the House being filled by his compatriots. If this is so, then no man in Canada has ever been so grossly misunderstood, no man's record has so been at variance with his real intentions.

There can no longer be any doubt, after Sir Wilfrid's account of yesterday, as to just where he stands on the conscription issue. He is unalterably opposed to conscription in any form. That simply means that even if he is elected Quebec will be still permitted to shirk its duties and responsibilities, and if Canada did remain in the war under his regime the burden would be left to those willing to assume it.

Sir Wilfrid recalls what he said at the special session of Parliament held at the beginning of the war to the effect that when the Empire is at war Canada is at war. Unfortunately, his compatriots are able to get around even that maxim. The Nationalists, with whom Sir Wilfrid is so hopelessly involved, do not appear to regard Quebec either as a part of Canada or the British Empire. They are for home defence only. Their own selfish interests are paramount. Even if Sir Wilfrid was sincere in what he so grandiloquently said three years ago, his lofty precepts have failed to impress those of his own race.

Sir Wilfrid later in the war declared that he would never attempt to open the portals of office with a bloody key. He seems to have forgotten that sentiment. The key is as gory as ever, more so in fact, and yet he does not disdain to hold it in his hands and fumble at the lock which bars him out of the paradise of power.

NATIONALISM AGAIN.

"NATIONALISM killed recruiting in Quebec," remarks The Examiner, in one of its hot weather effusions on a subject that appeals to it when all else fails.

And so that is the reason why recruiting has proved a failure in Quebec. According to our contemporary's reasoning, then, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a Nationalist of the Nationalists, the king bee in the hive, as he more than any other man is responsible for the dearth of recruits in his own province. By slow stages The Examiner may yet fall into line and, with other organs of the party, come to the conclusion that Sir Wilfrid must be eliminated if the country is to be saved from disaster and the Liberal party from ignominious extinction.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

"COME INTO the garden, Maud," and get busy against the potato bugs.

AT ALL EVENTS the Liberal party is taking its leader seriously these days.

• • •

CALL IT A DRIVE or what you will, but to the Germans it is certainly offensive.

• • •

LOW INVISIBILITY affects adversely the search for a Liberal candidate in West Peterborough.

• • •

AFTER Sir Wilfrid's declaration that he is still leader, the Liberals find themselves left without a bean in the can.

• • •

IF IT IS REALLY TRUE that the weather is made in Medicine Hat, that city should offer a bonus for a new industry.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER says he is in the war to the end. But as a camp follower rather than as an active combatant.

• • •

BUT IT COULD BE a great deal hotter and more uncomfortable if we were the Germans and the weather men were Canadian soldiers.

• • •

Wit and Wisdom

Editha was admiring her new summer frock. "Isn't it wonderful," she said, "that all this silk comes from an insignificant worm!" "Editha, is it necessary to refer to your father in that way?" her mother inquired reproachfully.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, was lunching one day—it was a very hot day—when a politician paused beside his table. "Judge," said he, "I see you're drinking coffee. That's a heating drink. In this weather you want to drink iced drinks, judge—sharp iced drinks. Did you ever try gin and ginger ale?"

"No," said the judge, smiling, "but I have tried several fellows who have."

Not every maid combines the aptitude for blundering and the talent for ingenious explanation that characterize the young woman about whom the United Presbyterian tells this diverting story:

"What do you suppose has come over my husband this morning, Sophia?" exclaimed a conscientious little bride to the new servant. "He's whistling like a bird."

"I'm afraid I'm to blame, mum. I got the packages mixed this morning, and gave him birdseed instead of his regular breakfast food, mum."

President Wilson and Arthur James Balfour are said to have found a new bond of sympathy between them when Mr. Balfour visited Washington. Both are fond of detective stories as a relaxation. Balfour's tastes runs to "penny shockers." When in his leisure he is not devouring the deeds of "Old Slueth" or "Nick Carter," the English Foreign Minister turns to works of philosophy. "On the trip across, the number of 'penny shockers' was limited," said one of the party. "We had to pass them around. I was telling Mr. Balfour of one he hadn't read. 'Who wrote it?' he asked. 'I really didn't notice.' 'That's always the way,' he said, sadly. 'One never does. So ungrateful; so ungrateful!'"

Probably this joke has been pulled a million times, but we never heard it before. That's because we are so seldom around where people are talking of finance and big business affairs. Maybe the jest is a bromide of the banks and bond broking business—how are we to know. Maybe had we not been invited by a plutocrat to jump in and let him take us home, we would never have heard it.

Friend Plutt had a friend with him, and they were talking about an investment—as nearly as we could understand.

"Don't you think that stock was a good buy?" asked the one.

"Yes," sneered the other, "a good-bye to your money!"

"CAN YOU BEAT IT" FOR A PARROT STORY

As there is a well known local man who has a parrot that causes considerable amusement for his neighbors as well as being the source of a little sarcasm from some, the following story will not be amiss:

"An obedient horse and a loquacious parrot should not be left together on a dock, for an accident might happen. A driver of a transfer wagon drove down to a pier and stopped near a parrot in a cage. The driver left his horse and vehicle a few minutes, "Back," said Polly and the obedient horse backed toward the edge of the wharf. Again the bird called out, "Back," and there was a spleash and a crash as wagon and horse went into the bay. When several men succeeded in landing the horse and wagon Polly remarked, "Can you beat it?"

PATRIOTISM BEFORE PARTY

When Abraham Lincoln began his contest with the able and popular Judge Douglas, Douglas appeared to hold all the winning cards. Lincoln had nothing behind him but the firm belief that the people of the North would sink all politcal differences and unite in support of the great principle on which they were agreed. Some of Lincoln's appeals for the elimination of petty differences in order to procure unity in support of a great cause apply with peculiar aptness to the situation in Canada today. As in America of Lincoln's time, so in Canada today, a large part of the country, notwithstanding differences in domestic politics, is absolutely at one on this vital issue. In order to make that unity of opinion effective in furthering the supreme object we all have in view, it is absolutely necessary to hold in abeyance all differences as to minor matters and concentrate on the one essential object. The question that faces us is the same question that faced the Americans. Are we going to sacrifice this little issue for the great one, or are we going to sacrifice the great issue for the lesser? As there were men in Lincoln's day who, under the shadow of a great crisis, clung to the shibboleth of party issues, so we must expect to find men of that type today. We shall find them, however, as Lincoln found them, not in the rank and file of the people, but among those politicians of both parties to whom the artificial differences of party politics take rank out of all proportion to their importance. There are men who have thought so long in those artificial terme that they quite honestly fail to apprecíate realities. In the trenches party politics have dwindled to their true proportions. In the administration of war work such as the Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross, Liberal and Conservative work side by side with no thought of party politics, and if we who are agreed on the vital issue wish to see the triumph of the principle involved in that issue we must see that the same spirit pervades all sphere of action, including politics. We must get rid of the things that do not matter and concentrate our efforts on the success of the thing which really counts. The issues are too big, the result of failure too shameful, the consequences to the man at the front too serious, to allow of puttering or pettiness. We must put away all insincerity and face the immediate reality which is the urgent need of the men at the front.

S[illegible]ng Horses and Aldermen

We have never heard of The Examiner flaying a horse, but one of its favorite pastimes when it wearies of bewailing Nationalism is to endeavor to lift the cuticle collectively from the members of Council. When it brands that body with its disfavor it plays no favorites but marks all with the same tarry brush. If a measure displeasing to our contemporary is adopted by a narrow majority the minority are made to suffer with the sinners.

If our contemporay would not attempt to shirk its duties during the hot weather but would attend Council committee meetings instead of relying on hearsay reports, it would never have printed that article concerning affairs at the incinerator which appeared in its columns last night. The property committee have disposed of that very case. The dead horses taken to the incinerator are not stripped of their hides by city employes in the city's time. That work is done by an outside expert who divies with the men who dispose of the carcass. The work, especially this weather, is worth all the hide brings. If the city had to hire a man to perform that task, wages would eat up the profits. In the meantime, leather is scarce, and a horsehide put on the market occasionally adds to the visible wealth of the nation.

All rags and other refuse are burned. Nothing like an attempt at salvage is permitted, this policy being adopted in the interest of the public health. The men who work at the incinerator are performing a valuable service to the city, and as such are entitled to compensation.

EDITOR'S MAIL

FROM A SOLDIER'S WIFE

Editor Review: My husband, James Willshaw, who is in the trenches doing his bit, is in the midst of the greatest battle of the war now going on in France. As a soldier's wife I have a grievance for which I want a remedy, and would like to know to whom I shall apply. I have two small children of tender years, the elder a boy who is highly thought of by the neighbors and playmates, with the exception of only one, and that is a neighbor on Edinburgh Street, while my residence is on Union Street. Our rear premises nearly abut each other. While my boy was playing with other children in a lane between us, the neighbor, a woman, made straight for him and punished him severely without any cause, and then threw him over the fence in the presence of the other children without touching any of the others. I would not mind it so much if this was the only time, but it has been going on for a long time, and the neighbors who know the facts say it should be stopped.

I am kept in constant fear while the child is out of my sight. Surely the military authorities here must have some means of protecting soldiers' wives and their little children, while they are fighting their country's battles.

If you will kindly give this publicity I know some menas will be found for my protection.

Yours truly,
ROSE WILLSHAW.

Mrs. Willshaw need not appeal to the military authorities for protection. The case is one which falls within the jurisdiction of the police, and if she applies to Chief Thompson we have no doubt she will be accorded official consideration.—Ed. Review.

On account of the large number of autos and also of the large proportion of young and inexperienced drivers the council are alive to the need of a traffic bylaw for our village and within the next week or two auto drivers will be required to keep the straight and narrow path and after night to keep their lamps trimmed and burning, and also to observe rigidly many rules and regulations or there will be happenings at the police court.

All summer long E. Kuster labored with his tomato plants, hoping against hope that he would have enough to fill the many thousand bright new cans he had bought for marketing the crop. The advancing price of tin, however, during the past 12 months has made him a greater profit on the empty cans than he had hoped to make on them filled with fruit.

And many of them are so well finished inside that one would scarcely know that they were of sod—plastered, papered and good woodwork. He stopped at a number of these places and found that many of the people living in these sod houses have autos and are quite well to do.

USE OF FERTILIZERS TO IMPROVE CROPS

Their Correct Use Necessitates An Intelligent Understanding of Soil Needs

Fertilizers have a place in a rational system of farming; but farmers should first clearly understand what that place is, if our land is to improve rather than to deteriorate, and if financial loss, due to injudicious purchase of fertilizers, is to be avoided. We must first have sound education, the outcome of science with practice, on the principles involved in the up-keep of soil fertility, on the composition, value, care and application of farm manures, on the desirability of more live stock on our farms and the greater consumption on the farm of the land's produce; on the importance of rotations, and especially the value of clover and other legumes in the rotation for maintaining the humus and nitrogen of the soil, on the proper working of the land and the preparation of a good seed bed. When all these matters are correctly understood and practised, then, and not before, may we advocate the judicious employment of fertilizers with advantage, in general farming. Fertilizers are no panacea for the evils of poor farming—they cannot be depended on solely to give profitable yields, to leave the land richer for posterity than when first broken, or entered upon. That is what we ought to aim at, for our native fertile soils are a great and important national asset and inheritance. Our experience has shown that fertilizers cannot profitably be used as substitutes for manure, for the growing of clover, or for good soil management, but that their role is rather supplemental to all these rational means for the up-keep of soil fertility. As is well known, the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta contain the largest and most continuous areas of the richest soils. Many of these, as our analyses show, are veritable mines of plant food; for example, the alluvial prairie of the Red River valley, the uniform fertility of which it would be difficult to exaggerate. Without discussing the relative agricultural values of the arable lands of our several provinces, the indications are that fertilizers will be found more particularly helpful in the Maritime Provinces, in Quebec and in British Columbia. Experiments, in general, have gone far towards establishing that a judicious and rational use of fertilizers may be depended on to yield a profit, that the exclusive use of fertilizers will neither keep up the fertility of the soil nor yield profitable returns, and that it is on soils of medium rather than poor quality that a lucrative response from their employment is to be expected, and, lastly, that it is on the "money" crops that we shall find the application most profitable.

OLEOMARGARINE

Description of a Common Substitute for Butter

Oleomargarine is a substitute for butter, composed wholly or in part of fat, other than butter fat. In England this product is called margarine and in the United States a common name is butterine. It is also manufactured and sold in large quantities on the continent, where the Dutch are said to be most expert in producing this article of food. While the United States is manufacturing and using more and more oleomargarine every year, its manufacture in Canada is absolutely prohibited. As a result of this prohibition Canadian abattoirs are forced to export all of one of their most valuable by-products, oleo oil, this material being a very important constituent of oleomargarine. In the United States there is an internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound on oleomargarine, which has been artificially colored to resemble natural butter, while the uncolored pays a quarter cent per pound. In view of the fact that the question of food and food materials looms largely in the public mind, it is a matter of prime importance that the consumer should know something of the nature of such materials as are produced in abundance in Canada. Oleomargarine is composed of oleo oil, neutral lard, milk, and pure butter. These constituents are churned together, salted, and worked up in the same manner as natural butter. Sometimes, usually in the cheaper grades, cottonseed, peanut, and other vegetable oils are used. A good grade would consist of 35 per cent. oleo oil, 35 per cent neutral lard, and 25 to 30 per cent. butter or cream sufficient to make that much butter with a small percentage of salt moisture, etc. Oleo oil is prepared from the fat of beef cattle.

Fiji Islands

The climate of the Fiji Islands is nothing like as hot as is generally thought. The islands, about 250 in all, lie about 1,900 miles northeast of Sydney, the more important rising abruptly sometimes to a height of 4,000 feet. The climate is cool for the tropics, the highest shade temperature at Suva (1899) being 93 in March, the lowest 61 degrees, in September. The rainfall is very heavy, being 130 inches in Suva. Dark and frizzly-haired, the Fijians are Melanesians, with a Polynesian strain in the east. The chief trade is with Australia and New Zealand, and the islands are a British possession. It was said that a generation ago the Fijians were cannibals and human sacrifices formed part of many of the religious ceremonies.

Rare Postage-Stamps

The rarest English stamp curiosity is the pair of Mulready wrappers on India paper issued in 1840, which bring $400. The V.R. black English penny stamp, which was in circulation for only a short time, is a great rarity. The New Brunswick five cents stamp, with the head of O'Connell, has brought $150. The two Reunions Stamps—the fifteen and thirty cents—are valued at $500. The set of four Sandwich Islands, of 1852, is worth something like $1,500.

Canadian Pacific Firemen Testifies

"Jack" Thompson Had To Lay Off From Work About Two Days a Week.

"Tanlac is certainly a railroad man's medicine," said John Thompson of 1826 Dundas street, Toronto, a few days ago, "and since taking it I'm feeling better than I have at any time during the past twelve months."

Mr. Thompson, or "Jack" as he is familiarly known by his many friends in Toronto, has been in railroad service for years and is now firing on the Canadian Pacific. He belongs to the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers and is well known, especially among the railroad people of the city.

"I had been suffering with a number of troubles," continued Mr. Thompson, "and at the time I began taking Tanlac I was just about 'all in' and getting worse every day. I had no appetite at all and my stomach was in such a bad fix that nothing agreed with me. My food would sour soon after eating it and I would turn so sick at times I couldn't retain a thing I had eaten. I was constantly belching up sour gas and what I forced myself to eat seemed to do me little or no good. I lost over twenty pounds in weight and my clothes hung on me. Actually, my pants would almost go round my waist twice. I had a haggard, sallow complexion, and simply felt all run-down and fagged out all the time. I had a terrible pain right under my ribs on my left side which extended clean around my stomach. My kidneys were out of order and I had such an awful hurting in the small of my back at times I could hardly stand it. I kept getting worse in spite of all I could do, and all last winter and spring I lost two days work out of every week. I would come in at night so tired and worn out I would just flop down in a chair and never felt like eating a bite of supper. I was just not fit for work at all, and got so when I would come in from my runs I would have to stay in bed for two or three days. Sometimes my head ached all day, my tongue was coated and I hardly felt like getting out of bed in the mornings. I was in a serious condition and had about decided it would take an operation to get me out of my trouble.

"But I had been reading so much about Tanlac I decided first to see if it would help me, and I certainly struck it right. I have just started on my second bottle and can tell that it has done me a world of good already. My stomach trouble seems to be almost entirely gone and my appetite is fine. I can eat what I want now without suffering from gas or other signs of indigestion and my tired worn-out feelings have left me completely. The pain has disappeared from my side and back and my kidneys are in fine shape. I have no more headaches or bad taste in my mouth and I get up in the mornings feeling rested and good. I'm beginning to fill out my clothes and have improved so much that my friends are talking about how much better I look. I am certainly delighted with what Tanlac has done and is still doing for me and several of the boys I work with are now taking it on my sayso."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co.

NOVEL-READING SULTAN

Criminal Romances are His Favorite Subjects

Although the Sultan of Turkey is reputed to be the laziest potentate in Europe, he is passionately fond of reading. For weeks at a time he will shut himself up in his private suite at Yildiz Kiosk—the Turkish Buckingham Palace—surrounded with literature of all kinds, classical works, novels, magazines, and newspapers. With the exception of his personal attendants, Ministers of State, and foreign Ambassadors, no one is allowed into the imperial sanctuary during the Sultan's "fits."

But the "Sick Man of Europe" is somewhat handicapped, as his knowledge of European languages is limited. In order to overcome this difficulty he employs a translation office. Here there are a crowd of officials, who speak all the languages of Europe and the East, and for their use all the political and illustrated newspapers of importance are procured, from which extracts are made and translated for the Sultan. There are fifteen superior translators, called dragoman secretaries, in this office, and their pay is from ten to forty Turkish pounds monthly. The translations are not limited to political publications; novels and romances in all languages are also translated for the Sultan, and many thousands have found their way into the imperial library. They are written on thick white royal octavo gilt-edged paper, and are fastened together with green and red ribbons by the translators themselves.

Suspicious of Waters

One of the simplest methods of testing the purity of water is the following: Let the cold water tap run for a minute, and then draw a tumblerful. Into this put a lump of sugar, and leave the water in the kitchen, or elsewhere, taking care that the temperature is not under 60 degrees Fahr. If the water is pure it will be perfectly clear in the morning. If contaminated by any impurities it will be milky.

What Your Thumb Tells

Persons who profess to tell character by the thumb declare that a long first joint shows will-power; a long second joint, logical or reasoning power; a thick, wide thumb indicates its possessor is a person of strong individuality; and obstinacy is shown by a broad knob at the end of the thumb.

FEMININE FAKES ARE UNPOPULAR WITH MEN

Art of Making-up Does Not Appeal To or Deceive the Other Sex For Very Long

The Jester writes: I read of a story the other day of a certain actress—it's always an actress, of course—who, after being complimented on her dimples, confided to a girl friend that they had been put on for the occasion. Apart from the improbability of any girl giving away the secrets of her toilette to anyone (let alone a member of her own sex) the idea by no means appeals to me.

To please whom does the present-day craze of the young girl for "make-up" exist? Not men, surely, for I've never yet met either a lover or a husband who will admire it, let alone encourage it, for a single moment. One is left to assume, then, that it is done either to gratify her own personal vanity or because she has an erroneous idea that no one will see through it. I should prefer to believe the former, as I have too high an opinion of feminine cleverness and perspicacity to imagine that the latter can exist.

Let me impress upon you girls that nine-tenths of the men you meet loathe and detest the use of all artificial aids to beauty with the one exception of a little powder—all excessive traces of which should, of course, be removed. It is always possible, I will allow, that rosy lips (even hand-colored) may look delightful from a distance, but take it from me that it is vastly improbable that any man who has been permitted to linger on them and obtained a mouthful of cosmetique in the process, will ever want to repeat the experiment. Provided that it is skilfully done, the blush rose complexion that novelists delight in can be applied successfully with a small amount of practice, and can deceive the very elect.

But there may come a time when she who has done it gets a fainting attack—and nature is ruthless then. The eyes, too, can be artfully touched up and improved if you know how to do it, but the slightest accident, and—another illusion is dispelled.

I have argued so far merely from a man's point of view namely, his own likes and dislikes. I have neglected the chief argument against the use of artificial aids because the aforesaid argument should be sufficiently obvious. Does it need any article of mine to point out that all paints and stuffs must be injurious to the skin? Surely not!

As I said before, I loathe artificiality. Nature is good enough for me and surely should be so for you girls. And yet, despite all we men can say, fakes are growing every day. Half the girls one meets carry a beauty specialist's entire outfit in their handbags, and the first question a girl asks, if she hears anyone admiring someone else's hair is, "I wonder if it is her own?"

HOMEMADE SHAMPOO

Shampoo powders are usually very strong. You may make an excellent shampoo by melting ordinary white soap, cooling, adding a little alcohol —say half a cupful to a pint of melted soap—and beating in an egg or two. Rinse the hair first with running warm water. Apply some of your shampoo mixture, rinse again, use more soap and egg and give a final rinsing. If any white substance shows on the brush and comb, you may know that your shampoo has not been a success.

Do not use salts of tartar on dark hair. Its use will brighten light hair and make it fluffy. Where light hair is very oily lemon juice may be added to the shampoo water. The daily use of the curling iron will often cause the hair to become harsh and broken. This is caused by heat taking away the natural oil. See that the iron is only moderately hot, or abandon its use completely.

Raspberry Tarts

These are delicious. Mix one pound of self-rising flour and a pinch of salt with a quarter of a pound of butter; add a pint of milk and two beaten eggs. After mixing thoroughly roll out thin, cut in circles and line patty pans with this paste. Fill with stewed raspberries, place in a hot oven and bake for about fifteen minutes. These are to be served cold with whipped cream.

Curried Eggs

Melt one tablespoon of butter, blend in one tablespoon of flour mixed with one teaspoon of curry powder; add slowly one cup of white stock, season with half a teaspoon of onion juice and one-eighth teaspoon of salt and stir until smooth and thick. Add six hard boiled eggs cut into halves lengthwise; cook until thoroughly heated and serve on rounds of buttered toast.

Honey Mousse

Beat the yolks of four eggs and stir in gradually a cup of strained honey. Heat slowly until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and when cool, add the stiff beaten whites of four eggs, a pint of whipped cream, and pack in a freezer. Freeze without stirring until it has attained the proper consistency.

Frozen Rice

Mix a pint of whipped cream with four tablespoons of powdered sugar, into a cup of cold cooked rice, seasoned with salt. Flavor with orange extract and pack into a mould. Pack in ice and salt for four hours, turn out, and serve with fresh fruit and whipped cream.

California Dressing

Place in a bowl a small piece of ice. Over this pour a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and stir into it a tablespoon of olive oil and a teaspoon of lemon juice. Stir until quite thick, and then take out the ice. Serve with [illegible].

Raspberry Cream

Press a quart of ripe raspberries [illegible] and then stir them in [illegible] sweet cream, to [illegible] pound of sugar and [illegible] or powdered [illegible] thoroughly and serve [illegible]

FOR BEAUTIFUL EYES

Health Essential To Beauty—How to Acquire Them

Healthy eyes are the only beautiful sort. Near-sighted folks are never pretty, the strained expression makes them look over-inquisitive. People with bad eyesight cannot be beautiful, and glasses, so common an affliction, spoil many an otherwise good-looking face. Indeed, I hope we will come to a day when glasses will be discarded, when some sort of treatment will become known that will do away with these clumsy appurtenances.

Sight is caused by the converging of rays of light from the eye upon certain objects. If the eyeball is flattened—too much rubbing will do this, so will ill-health and old age—the rays do not converge or focus properly and the person cannot see correctly. Glasses, of varying thickness and curvature, change the deflection of these rays to make them focus correctly. Have you watched the part of a stick thrust under water and noticed how bent seemed the submerged part? Water, being thicker than air, makes a deflection in the rays of light that go from the eye to the stick, and gives the bent appearance.

If the eyes are overworked they must change their shape the least bit to focus properly. This strains them, often permanently. If there is the least feeling of strain it is best to stop work and close the eyes for a moment's rest, even though the task in hand seems important. If anything is wrong with the eye—a sty, opthalmia, inflammation, or if any foreign particle gets into the eye, it should not be used while the condition exists. Bind the eye with clean linen, and use the one that doesn't hurt—strain at such a time may mean glasses in the future. For inflammation or for drawing out cinders or dust, a flaxseed poultice or a fat oyster, are the best treatments known.

WIDOWERS ARE TIMID

Wives Have Taught Them To Disparage Themselves

If the husband has the misfortune of becoming a widower he shrinks from coming in contact with other women, realizing all his deficiencies, which his wife had never allowed him to lose sight of, and with the belief that he has not one redeeming grace. He feels uncomfortable in the companionship of the opposite sex. That is why few women—except widows—who set their caps for him would have the least chance of making an impression on his heart. The training of the first woman who had him in hand has rendered him timid.

Despite the loneliness of his heart and home, not one widower out of a hundred would enter the ranks of matrimony again did he not meet with the one woman who was able to topple over his firmly grounded ideas and cause him to realize that he still had attraction and still had the power to awaken affection in another heart that would accord him his full meed of appreciation and love.—Laura Jean Libbey, in Chicago Daily News.

Peach Conserve

To four pounds of ripe peaches, pared and cut into small pieces, add one grated pineapple, one grated orange, and one lemon, also grated, half a pound of blanched almonds chopped fine and half a pound of seedless raisins. The fruits are cooked without sugar till soft and pulpy, then measured, and a pound of sugar is added for every pint of pulp. Cook until thick and stir frequently to prevent burning.

Will Fruit Juices Jelly?

Some fruits are lacking in pectin, the component which is necessary to make them "jell." To test fruit-juice to see if it has the necessary pectin in it, add a small amount of a 15 per cent. solution of grain-alcohol to an equal amount of the fruit juice. If the mixture remains clear, it will not "jell," but if it becomes murky when cooled, you may be sure that it has the requisite amount of pectin in it.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES

The rickrack braid is not only made in white, but also in pink and blue. The colored braid on white can often be used with effect, especially at the present time, when a bit of color is so much in vogue.

Dresser and chiffonier scarfs of linen, with colored hems of chambray, are unusual, but attractive. The hems are sewed to the linen, then turned up on the right side, where the edge is cut in Greek key pattern, or scallops. The rough edges are turned in and the hem held in place by rickrack braid.

IF YOU MUST DIET

Dont Starve Yourself to Get Thin—List of Foods

It is not the quantity of food but the kinds of food eaten that fatten. This should be remembered when dieting to reduce [illegible] "Semi-starvation" as a means of reducing is not only weakening but positively dangerous. The following diet list for the reduction of flesh is governed by common sense.

Foods permitted are: Clams, oysters, lobsters; soups without flour or fat thickening; lean meats (ham, pork and liver excepted); fish—fresh, salt or smoked, or any kind, but cooked without fat or butter; eggs in any style; chicken, duck, turkey, game; vegetables—squash, stringbeans, carrots, tomatoes, turnips, cabbage, peas, onions, asparagus, cauliflower, celery, salads, watercress, pickles of all kinds; gluten bread; water, coffee and tea (except with meals) in any quantity. Milk very sparingly.

Foods forbidden are: All foods containing sugar, such as cakes, ice cream, preserved fruits, jellies, jams, etc.; all fatty substances, butter, cream, gravies, oils, sardines, etc.; white bread, potatoes and all starch foods, oatmeal, rice.

The foods permitted may be and should be indulged in freely. When the required weight is reached, the rigidity of the diet may be relaxed, until the increase in weight advises that strict adherence again be observed for a time. It is well, however, for those inclined to obesity to exclude potatoes and white bread, biscuits, rolls, etc., from the menu at all times.

BREAD PUDDING RECIPE

Not Cheap But Nutritious Food Has Several Uses

The best bread pudding has richness added to it in the form of milk, eggs and butter. It is not economical, but is nourishing and has a saving sound that makes the family feel thrifty and virtuous. Make it large, and it will do for a betweentime lunch as well as for a dessert at dinner. One quart milk, four eggs, three cups fine breadcrumbs, one tablespoon butter, one cup sugar, juice of one lemon. Rub the butter and sugar together, as though making cake, beat in the yolks of the eggs and reserve the whites for the top. Soak the crumbs in milk and then mix all together. Add the lemon last and bake in a buttered dish until firm in the middle. Cool a little and put on the meringue. Eat with cream while warm, not hot, or very cold.

Egg Salad

Six hard-boiled eggs, one bunch watercress, a few lettuce leaves, one cup boiled dressing. Remove the shells and separate the eggs. Line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves, wash and clean the watercress and make a bed of it on the lettuce; slice the whites of eggs very fine and place on top of watercress. Press the yolks of eggs through potato dicer, sprinkle over the top. If you do not have a potato ricer or fruit press, grate the yolks. Serve with a boiled dressing or dressing of choice.

Rice Muffins

One cup boiled rice, one cup sweet milk, two eggs, five tablespoonful of melted butter, one-half teaspoonful salt, one tablespoonful powder and one ane one-half cups flour. Mix milk and rice together. Stir in the well beaten eggs, salt, sugar and melted butter, then the flour and baking powder sifted together. Bake in moderately hot oven about 20 minutes. This recipe will make about 20 muffins, baked in ordinary size muffin rings or pans. Time in preparation, 15 minutes.

Apple-Float

Peel two tart apples. To beaten whites of 4 eggs add four tablespoons of powdered sugar and beat until thoroughly mixed. Grate the apples up fine and add to the beaten whites of eggs. In a shallow dish place a little plain cream and pour over this your first mixture. Garnish with candied pineapple or candied rose leaves.

CO-OPERATION IS BEST

Wood For Every Use, a Factor in National Greatness

The emblem of Canada is the maple leaf, and the beautiful tree on which it grows thrives wherever the land is good. There are several species and the hard or sugar maple is the most valued hardwood tree in the country. Its wood enters into furniture, flooring, shipbuilding, railway car construction, tool handles, etc. In the forest the maple rises 100 feet and more and has a diameter of from two to five feet. The Canadian oak is about the same height and is put to much the same uses. Hard birch is employed most extensively by manufacturers, especially in the making of cars, carriages and furniture. The elm furnishes strong, tough wood, and the ash tree is favored by the producers of baskets, barrel hoops, boats, oars, ball bats, and like articles. The spruce tree, which ranges from the Atlantic to the Pacific, gives a soft light wood, much used for lumber and pulp for paper-making. Other useful timber trees include the chestnut, cherry, hickory and the basswood. Indeed, the trees of the Dominion are of many varieties and in sufficient quantity to fill every need. They are a great source of national wealth.

THE WISER CHOICE.

[A weekly paper says letters of proposal should be timed to arrive in the evening, that being the sentimental time when acceptance is most likely.]

GOOD sir, your directions are all very fine,
But when I propose by the pen trick
I shall look for a temper to tolerate mine,
And mine is distinctly eccentric.
If she in the morning is likely to grouse,
If her breakfast demeanor is surly,
There would not be room for us both in the house.
I'm peevish myself when it's early.

So rather I'd have her most critical mood
Prevail at the time of my wooing.
I'd like to be sure that the girl understood
Exactly the thing she was doing.
I feel in my heart it were better for me
To double the risk of rejection
In order (if haply accepted) to be
A calm and cold blooded selection.

Let my letter arrive when the day at its start
Provokes a malevolent feeling.
Her answer may puncture a hole in my heart,
But time is an expert at healing.
And that will be better than learning too late,
At the end of the honeymoon season,
That the lady had only consented to mate
In an hour that was bad for her reason.

—Puck.

CHILDISH MODES.

How to Gown the Little Girl in the Summer Time.

Many of the style ideas for the elders fit into childish requirements very effectively, and modish materials and colorings appeal to the maker of children's clothes, although, of course, many of the loveliest stuffs are totally inappropriate for young folk.

For the very small girls white is the accepted thing, and perhaps there is no great variety or novelty within the necessarily circumscribed limitations, but as soon as the little lady graduates into colors her wardrobe begins to offer more variety, if not greater daintiness.

There are mothers who dress their daughters entirely in white even beyond the years of babyhood—white pique, white linen, white wool, white lawn, batiste and mull—and the fad is a pretty one, but impractical for any whose purse is not well filled.

Practical little dresses in serviceable pique and linen are appearing in an almost inexhaustible supply, and many of them attain a certain dressy air, the style being in their line and fineness of their details, for simplicity is the watchword here as elsewhere in the sphere of tasteful child clothing.

Many of these frocks of linen or pique are made on straight lines, having a narrow belt of the material or patent leather, fitting the figure loosely and placed at a low waist line. There are also many frocks made on the one piece Russian lines.

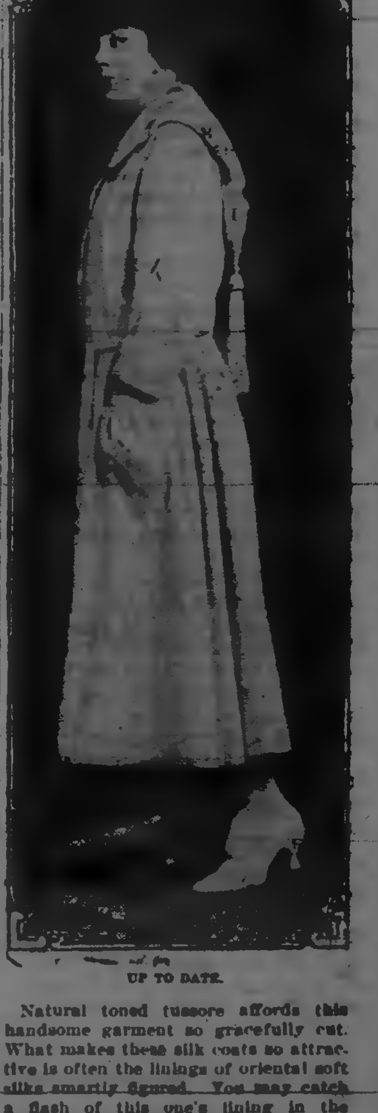
Semimilitary effects in embroidery and buttons, such as have been used for certain smart blouses designed for grownups, are introduced with excellent effect down the fronts of some little one piece frocks in white pique or heavy white linen, and pretty jumpers of linen or pique have front embroidered panels.

The Eton jacket or bolero model is always more or less a favorite idea with designers of children's garments, and this spring there are many frocks for the small girl as well as for older folks made with jaunty short bolero.

The little maid must have her barrel pockets, like everybody else. An attractive flapper coat from Lanvin is made of blue serge cloth, with over collar and revers of white faille matinee silk, stitched in rows with blue sewing silk matching the blue serge cloth. The belt buttons at either side, and below the buttons hang the huge barrel pockets, which stand well out from the coat and give a smart bulging line.

HER MOTORCOAT

Smartest Kind of an Outfit For Sport Uses.



UP TO DATE.

Natural toned tussore affords this handsome garment so gracefully cut. What makes these silk coats so attractive is often the linings of oriental soft silks smartly figured. You may catch a flash of this one's lining in the monk's hood of the long tassel.

SUMMER PESTS.

Getting Rid of Them Is One of a Housewife's Tasks.

If you suspect that bedbugs are in your bedspring first remove all the bedclothing, but do not take from the room, as that will only scatter them, and then with your favorite insecticide in an oil can with a long spout go carefully all over the spring, paying special attention to the corners. Any kind of insecticide will do provided it has a strong odor. Some prefer gasoline, for three reasons—first, it is inexpensive, so can be used lavishly; it does not soil or stain the bedclothes, carpet or furniture, and the disagreeable odor soon disappears. Do not forget, however, its extreme inflammability and never use in a room containing a light or a fire and do not even strike a match until at least thirty minutes after using. After going carefully over the spring with your can cover all over with a large sheet. Be sure the sides and ends are covered. In about ten minutes examine the sheet and you will find the bugs have left the odorous springs and are on it. Bear in mind, however, that at least half of these bugs have left a small unhatched family, and it will be necessary to repeat this process several times for at least two weeks to entirely clean them out.

MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT MOVEMENTS

(Special Correspondence.)

Millbrook, Aug 1. — Strawberries and cream sounds well, look tempting and taste delicious. This was the unanimous opinion of the large crowd attending the garden party last Friday evening at St. Enoch's Church, Garden Hill. The weather was ideal, and although the notice was short and farming operations pressing, the attendance was splendid. The programme was exceedingly good. Miss Fisher contributed organ solos most acceptably. Mr. Bickle sang and was encored, Mrs. Bickle playing his accompaniments sympathically. Rev. Mr. Cannon gave an earnest address. Dr. Lee read a selection which was interesting, and Miss E. D. Lee gave a humorous reading entitled, "A thrilling experience in the dentist's chair." The proceeds amounted to $80.00

The members of Royal Black Preceptory No. 620 will parade to the Presbyterian Church, Omemee, on Sunday, August 12th. The Rev. Sir Knight J. P. MacInnes will preach. The members of Millbrook Preceptory are cordially invited to be present.

The many friends of Miss May Earle will regret to learn that on Monday morning a ladder on which she was standing slipped and caused her to fall and put her arm out of joint. She was conveyed to Dr. Turner's Hospital where her arm was set, and it is hoped she soon will be as well as ever. She was picking cherries when the accident occurred.

In a letter from Sergt. Roy McBride he says that everything is going on well. He had recently met a number of Millbrook boys, including Charles Sanderson and Arthur Donaldson.

U. S. Eligibles Said To Be Assisted by Pro-German Doctors.

New York, August 2.—A Chicago special to The Times says: A plot of widespread dimensions whereby pro-German physicians for a consideration are willing to "dope" young men drafted when they appear for medical examination in such a manner as to cause their rejection is said to be in existence. Agents of the department of justice are now working on the case. The movement had its origin in Chicago, with branches in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other large cities. Demonstrations were given in swimming as well as at the eatables, which the charming young ladies present produced. A shower of oranges preceded the performance. Miss Leda Knox rendered a vocal selection and managed it exceptionally well.

The Indian River gardeners are more than satisfied with the result of their "more production effort." Mr. Riseborough's field of beans are looking absolutey splendid, while the Rev. Mr. Roberts' garden is no ess good.

The farmers in this neighborhood are nearly all through with their hay making. Several have started to cut their fall wheat. All the promiscuous crops are reported as bouncers.

Successful Garden Party.

The Methodist garden party, held on Wednesday evening, was a decided success. The evening was all that could be desired. The grounds presented a very gay appearance with the decoration of Chinese lanterns, flags, bunting and picturesque booths and dainty refreshments were served in the basement of the church, after which a number of races were run off by the children, much to the amusement of the adults. A splendid program was then given, the opening number being rendered by a male quartette from Lindsay. The selections by this quartette were bright and catchy and pleased the large audience. Prof. Treneer, the blind organist of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, delighted and thrilled the gathering with his excellent piano solo, and later with a vocal solo. Miss Rita Magill of Toronto sang very sweetly "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling." Mr. Allin, a member of the quartette, renderedd two splendid solos. Mr. Allin has appeared before an Omemee audience before, and his welcome is always assured. Reeve Parsons gave a patriotic solo (by special request), which was well received. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close one of the most successful garden parties ever held by the Methodist Church here. The proceeds amounted to $1.29. The proceeds amounted to $129.

INDIAN MUST PAY FINE
NO PROOF OF RED BLOOD

Judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Sutherland yesterday refusing to quash the conviction of Lyman F. Martin of Hamilton, who was fined $200 or three months for unlawfully having liquor in his possesion. Martin argued that he was an Indian and that he did not come under the Ontario Act, but was subject only to Dominion legislation. The judgment holds that his mere statement that he was an Indian is not sufficient. He should have proved it. An affidavit by way of proof was refused by the court as not being admisible at this stage.

AGREED ON MANY POINTS.

Conciliation Board Regarding Toronto Street Railway in Session.

The conciliation board appointed to consider the grievances existing between the Toronto street railway and its employes met at the city hall yesterday morning. Judge Snider, of Hamilton, presided, the men being represented by D. A. Carey and the company by Duncan McDonald of Montreal. The session was held in private, but the chairman promised that a statement regarding the proceedings would be handed out from time to time.

CALLS FOR FIREMEN.

Had Several Runs Last Night, but Damage Was Light.

The Fire Department was kept busy last evening answering fire alarms, but fortunately none of them were serious.

Shortly before 5 o'clock they were called to the hydro-electric sub-station at the foot of Simcoe street, where the burning of the fuses on a switchboard caused a flame, but little damage.

Another alarm came in from 210 Prince street, where the chimney of Mrs. Mary Kelly's house was blazing. This was put out without any damage.

in the county, but the most valuable assets were the boys rather than the farms. This latter drew from Reeve Rye the remark that that being the case North Monaghan is rich indeed.

Every item on the program was of a high order. Little Sammy Swartz gives promise of developing into an accomplished violinist, and it is hardly necessary to say that Mr. John, as a reciter, was, as usual, an artist in his line.

Chairman Harry Webber of the trustee board, thanked Capt. Burnham for his generous prizes. Reeve Rye had quoted Inspector Lees, who has often declared that these awards are a valuable incentive to hard work in the public schools in the county, and this Mr. Webber was ready to endorse heartily.

Mr. C. S. McClelland motored out to the schoolhouse with Capt. Burnham and Judge Huycke and there were besides these gentlemen a large number of visitors from the city.

MORE PAY FOR OFFICERS.

They Are Hard Hit by the Increased Cost of Living.

London, August 1.—It is understood that there is some likelihood of an increase in pay for the Canadian officers overseas. Many officers are complaining that the rise in prices is working a hardship, but state that privates, who are free of many expenses incumbent on officers, are not affected to anything like the same degree.

FALLEN ELECTRIC WIRES SHOULD BE REPORTED.

During a severe storm it often happens that electric light wires fall and cause danger to the citizens. If the trouble is reported at once to 'phone 1218 in the day time or to 263 or 1663 at night, it will be promptly attended to.

The manager of the Utilities Commission is always anxious to remedy trouble of this kind at the earliest moment, and will thank anyone for the notification.

A MATHEMATICAL TWISTER

"How much money have you got?" asked Willie, who had just added to his pocket money by selling a two-pound box of chocolates for a dollar.

"Half as much as Tom," replied Walter. "How much have you?"

"Well, I would have five times as much as I have," said Willie, "if I'd four times as much as you, supposing you had four times as much as you have."

Now, in order that there may be no mistake whatever over this little matter, let us make it clear that Tom had thrice as much as his sister would have had, had she possessed a quarter of the wealth of her cousin before her cousin spent a third of her pocket money by going halves with her best friend in buying the very box of chocolates which Willie had just sold.

How much money had Willie?

Why Willie had $1.80, of course. Figure it out yourself.

Just before being given this big prize Mr. Wrong was elected a Fellow of Oxford University and by the Fellows was made a Senior which entitles him to stay at Oxford as a tutor for seven years. Only by exceptional popularity can a student hope to attain this latter honor.

MAKING A LANGUAGE

Some Words and Phrases Change Meaning in Time—Others do Not

A long time ago when Latin was an everyday language used by plain folks as well as college students the word that meant "to go to the market" was—afford.

If a man had money he could "afford"; that is, he could go to the market place and buy fine raiment and food; if he had no money he did not go to the market; he did without things. The meaning of the word hasn't changed so very much. Only in these days folks sometimes "afford" whether they can afford it or not.

Just as dunce once meant a wise man, so it was once upon a time considered rather commendable to be silly.

But that was when the English language was just merging from its mediæval to its modern form, and in those days to be silly meant to be sweet and innocent. A gentle sheep or a sweet child was said to be silly. A certain old English author meant nothing irreverent when he described the Christchild as that "silly baby."

FOUGHT AN OCTOPUS

Diver Had Tussle While Working on New Breakwater

An exciting fight under water with an octopus was the thrilling experience of one of the divers employed by a contracting firm of Victoria, B.C., when engaged in supervising the laying of the granite blocks which form part of the substructure of the breakwater at Ogden Point. In the vicelike grip of the powerful tentacles of the octopus, the diver, handicapped to a great extent, but at the same time protected by the heavy diving suit and equipment, swayed about on the sea bed as he fought what at first appeared to be an unequal battle with the many-limbed creature of the sea. Using his knife to good advantage, the diver eventually succeeded in severing the tentacles which were tightening about his body and, giving the signal to the boat crew handling the air apparatus above, was quickly hauled in safety [illegible]

Bowser's Old Coat

And Why the Rag Man Didn't Get It.

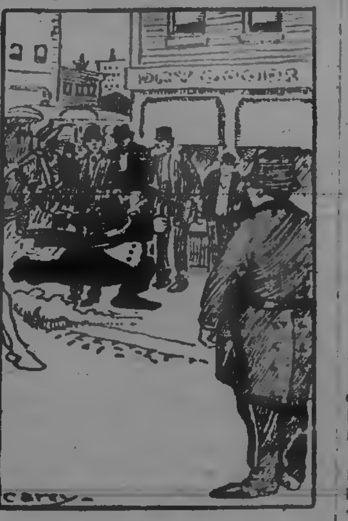
By M. QUAD

Copyright, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

References have been made in these articles to Mr. Bowser's wallet and the care he takes of it o' nights. Mr. Bowser inherited this prudence from male ancestors dating back hundreds of years. Only about one man in fifty—that is, one husband—leaves his wallet so carelessly about that it becomes a temptation to his wife.

Mr. Bowser is neither a stingy man nor a suspicious one. He is simply a prudent man. He realizes that should Mrs. Bowser have a ferocious attack of insomnia some night at midnight, while he was peacefully snoring away, she would get up and walk the floor. Her eye would catch the end of his wallet sticking out of the inside pocket of his coat, and she would naturally withdraw that wallet. She would also naturally open that wallet and count the contents. As a wife, she would feel that a third of the wealth belonged to her, and she might take a ten dollar bill and lay it aside for future use. When Mr. Bowser came to count the contents in the morning and discovered a shortage he would be perplexed as to whether he gave it to the heathen the day before or a burglar had entered the house during the night.

Mr Bowser, like other husbands, has been known to carry his prudence so far as to hide his wallet under the front steps just previous to bedtime.



HE WAS RACING AGAINST TIME

He has hidden it in the house in forty different places, and he has always heaved a great sigh of relief when he has found it safe in the morning. The other day, while hunting for an old hat in his clothes closet, he saw one of his old coats hanging on a hook. It had a tail pocket. The wallet might be placed in that pocket time after time and Mrs. Bowser would never discover it. He made a mental note of this, and that night the wallet rested in a new place.

Next morning as Mr. Bowser was yawning and stretching and preparing to arise and go down to his breakfast a dog fight took place in front of his house. He jumped out of bed and yelled to the smaller of the two dogs to go in and win. At the breakfast table he was still excited over the scrap, and when he started for his office the wallet still remained in the pocket of the old coat. He had street car tickets and did not discover the loss until he came to pay for his noonday luncheon. Then he could not pay. He had neither change nor wallet.

The waiter observed that no such game could be played on the house, and Mr. Bowser had to leave his watch as security for 30 cents. He remembered where he had left that wallet, and he started for home instanter. He did not take the trolley car. It was too slow for him. He started off on a fast walk, which gradually grew into a bobble and the bobble into a run. In the last half mile of the race he carried a red face, his eyes bulged out, and his hat was in his hand. Scores of men called to him to ask what was the matter, but he never answered nor paused for a moment. He was racing against time. At any moment Mrs. Bowser might find that wallet and extract a bill.

Mrs. Bowser got a great shock when Mr. Bowser burst into the hall and had to sit down on the lower step of the stairs and gasp for breath. While a hundred feet from his gate he had seen an old rag buyer pass out with a full sack over his shoulder. Perhaps Mrs. Bowser had been selling him his old clothes and that old coat was among the garments.

"What on earth is the matter?" she exclaimed, as she leaned against the wall for support.

"Did you—did you"—

"Did I what?"

"Did you sell that man any old clothes?"

"Why, yes. But what has that got to do with your coming home this time of day?"

"You—you sold my old clothes, did you? Woman, you have ruined me!"

And Mr. Bowser jumped up and dashed out of doors and down the steps and looked for the ragman. He was just turning a distant corner, and he was pursued. He entered a house two blocks below, and Mr. Bowser missed him. He was running about like a dog seeking a lost trail when a policeman stopped him and asked him if his house was on fire or his wife was dying. Just then the old ragman showed up a block away, and Mr. Bowser broke from the policeman's grasp and galloped away. The old man heard the clatter of his feet behind him and looked around, and then started off at his best pace. No old man can run very fast with a big sack bumping his back at every jump, and Mr. Bowser soon overhauled the fugitive and had the sack in his possession.

"What you fight me for?" was demanded of him.

"You bought some old clothes on Third place half an hour ago. I want a coat you bought."

"I no buy a coat there."

"Don't lie to me, you old villain! Where is that coat?"

And Bowser was pulling the garments out of his sack, and the old man was trying his hardest to prevent, when the policeman came up. In response to his demand, two stories were told, and as they did not agree he walked the two men to the station house. When the same two stories were told to the sergeant at the desk he replied:

"We will have the sack searched and see."

It was searched, and there was no coat in it.

"He stopped somewhere and hid it!" shouted Mr. Bowser.

"I no buy coat there. I no see wallet. I was some poor and honest man!" protested the old man.

"Is your wife at home?" asked the sergeant of Mr. Bowser.

"She is," was the reply.

"Then step to that telephone and ask her to come down here. You can wait in the back room until she arrives."

"But, man, I am Mr. Bowser!" roared the hero of the wallet and the old coat.

"That makes no difference to me. If your wife does not come down here I will have you locked up, and you might later tell your story in court. You seem to be a very bullheaded sort of man."

It took Mrs. Bowser over half an hour to dress and get down there. Mr. Bowser greeted her with almost a shout of relief, but the sergeant waved him aside with the words:

"You keep quiet, old man, while I ask your wife a few questions. Now, then, Mrs. Bowser, you sold this old man some old clothes, did you?"

"Yes, sir."

"How many garments in all?"

"Why, five or six, I guess. There were two old suits and parts of two or three more, and some of them had been lying around the house for two or three years."

"But this coat was an old brown one—a cutaway," put in Mr. Bowser.

"Didn't I tell you to keep still?" thundered the sergeant. "About sixty days behind the bars is what you seem to be aching for!"

"I didn't sell that one," said Mrs. Bowser. "I saw it hanging on the hook and thought you would need it when you were working about the house. No; I did not sell that one, and I felt in the pockets of all I did sell before I let them go. Besides this, I knew your wallet was in that coat, for I saw you hide it there last night."

"You are evidently a mean old husband," said the sergeant to Mr. Bowser. "I'll bet your wife don't get 10 cents a week for pin money. I will send an officer up with you to see if the story of the coat is true. It probably is, for I don't believe such a nice little woman would tell a lie about it."

And an officer accompanied them home and went upstairs and saw the coat with his own eyes. It was hanging there as safely as money in a savings bank. A tall pocket was investigated, and the missing wallet was brought forth and opened to the broad light of day.

"That's mine!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he reached for it.

"You are a nice old guy" said the officer as he handed the wallet over. "You not only hide your money for fear your wife may get hold of a dollar, but you go away and forget it and then create such a row that the whole county is asking who has been murdered in his bed. Say, old chap, you had better make a change or you will find yourself in a heap of trouble. Good day, Mrs. Bowser. I am sorry for you."

And when the officer had left the house Mr. and Mrs. Bowser sat down and looked at each other for a long, long time. Then Mrs. Bowser broke into a laugh and said:

"Mr. Bowser, this is the dead line. We will consult our respective lawyers and procure a divorce as soon as possible."

And something like a smile hovered around Mr. Bowser's mouth as he replied that, being it was a broken day, he would not go back to the office, but would stay home and fix the lower hinge on the front gate.

SIR WILFRID SAYS HE IS STILL LIBERAL LEADER

Veteran Declares in Parliament That He Has Not Forfeited That Position in Spite of What Party Members Say.

Ottawa, Aug. 2, — Ninety-eight degrees in the shade outside and 90 in the chambers was the temperature under which Legislators undertook business yesttrday.

It is seldom that Sir Wilfrid Laurier ever rises to a question of privilege. Yesterday in the torrid heat he did so.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "The House knows how very seldom I ever rise in this House to call attention to any reference made to myself either inside or outside this House. I crave the consent of the House, however, to rise to-day and make some reference to a report appearing in the Toronto Globe. I find in this paper a report of a speech delivered by Sir Clifford Sifton at Winnipeg. In this speech Sir Clifford declared that no fault could be found with the stand and attitude taken by Laurier since the beginning of the war until recently. His attitude taken on conscription however, had changed matters. Through the attitude then taken, Laurier had abrogated his title to leadership.

"My attitude," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "was attributed by Sir Clifford Sifton to a desire to play solidly to Quebec. Sir Clifford informed his audience that if Laurier were to win the coming election it would mean that Canada would forthwith go out of the far.

Canada as a Whole

"All I have to say," continued Sir Wilfrid, "the reference that from nothing which I have said either outside or inside this chamber at any time could Sir Clifford Sifton draw such an inference as he has drawn. At no time of my career have I ever considered legislation from the standpoint of one Province throughout all my public life. I have considered Canada as a whole and have always adhered to Liberal national principles, without regard to race or creed, but for the general good of all. My attitude today, on the first of August, is the same as it was in August, 1914, when the war commenced. I am in the war to the end, not on a basis of compulsion, but on a basis of the voluntary system."

G. N. W. LINEMEN WANT SAME AS THE OPERATORS

Further developments in the demands of the G. N. W. telegraphers for a better wage and time schedule have taken place when at a meeting held the G. N. W. linemen decided to go in with the telegraphers in their demands asking practically a twenty per cent. increase, with the same hour arrangements. Fifteen linemen were present, representing the provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

West of Port Arthur the linemen are in the Order of Railway Telegraphers, and east of Port Arthur are under the Commercial Telegraphers' Union. They will immediately appoint their own representative for the Board of Conciliation, and on Sunday another meeting will be called to look into further details.

UNION GOV'T IN DISCORD.

Bill to Restrict Franchise to Aliens To Be Introduced.

Ottawa, August 2. — A rumor that proposals for the formation of a union government may go to the wall is strengthened by the report that the bill to restrict the franchise of aliens is to be introduced in Parliament shortly, probably soon after the result of the Winnipeg Liberal convention is announced. The withholding of the franchise bill was known to be one of the terms stipulated by the Liberals for joining with Sir Robert Borden in the formation of a national government.

A very large elment on the government side of the House favor the measure, and at least one largely attended caucus has been held at which drastic regulation of the foreign vote was advocated.

The feeling is growing that the union negotiations have been drawn out too long and that now the Liberals in the West are feeling their strength, and will insist on making a fight for the balance of power in the next Parliament.

Haying in Lambton has been about completed, and is a fine crop.

PORT HOPE PRINCIPAL TO GO TO TORONTO BOARD

Mr. Robert Gillies, of Port Hope, was the one chosen of many applicants by the Toronto Board of Education to become principal's assistant to Mr. W. J. Morrison at Pape Avenue School. Mr. Gilles' salary was fixed at $1,300 to begin with. Just recently Mr. Gilles has whitten that at Port Hope his salary was $1,400 a year from the school, with additional $100 for training cadets, $50 for superintending at departmental examinations and $50 for accounting, making a total of $1,600 per annum. Since the board there had heard of his offer in Toronto thty offered a still further increase if he would stay at Port Hope.

In his letter Mr. Gilles said he felt in honor bound to accept the Toronto position now, but asks that trustees consider giving him as high an initial salary as possible. After considering the matter some time trustees deferred the request until the next meeting of the Finance Committee.

KEEP YOUR DOG TIED UP MANY OFFENDERS SEEN.

Many of the citizens are under a misapprehension that the quarantine for dogs expired on August 1st. The Peterborough dog bylaw, which requires that the household pets may be on the streets only when muzzled and under leash is still in force, and will remain so until the city fathers rescind it.

The police of Port Hope are shooting all dogs whenever they are found loose on the sereets and not muzzled as required by law. No excuse goes there.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Useful and Interesting Fish.

CRUEL AND GREEDY FEEDER.

Chases Smaller Denizens of the Ocean to Their Terror—How the Squid Sometimes Manages to Escape—Its Method of Defense.

Well, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about

THE BLUEFISH.

As you know, the bluefish lives in the ocean. There are a great many of them to be found along the Atlantic coast, where they are first seen in the spring, when the mackerel and bluefish are plentiful.

The bluefish is a greedy, cruel fellow and feeds on other fishes. He is especially fond of mackerel and weakfish, and that is why he follows them. He chases them about, and whenever he can lay his teeth on a young fish down his throat it goes.

The mackerel are very much afraid of their enemy, the bluefish, and will spring out of the water or even dash on shore to escape being caught. It doesn't do much good if the bluefish has set his heart on eating them, for he will follow right after and get them in the end, no matter how fast or how far they swim.

Though he is cruel, yet the bluefish does some good. He is fond of the young of the ugly squid and catches and eats them whenever he gets a chance. He even attacks the squid itself, and then sometimes there is a battle before the matter is settled. The small squids, of course, are the ones he chooses to kill, and as they are sometimes only a foot or two in length the fierce bluefish has no fear of them. The squid, though, is sometimes able to get away, and he manages this in a curious way. Inside his body is a black ink, and he can squirt this out into the water, making it so cloudy that other fishes near him are unable to see.

When the water gets dark the bluefish isn't able to see the squid and lets him go till he finds out what is the matter. Then the squid swims away, squirting ink behind him and not caring much if the bluefish has bitten off a leg or two, for he can grow others in their place without any trouble that is worth mentioning.

But his very greediness and cruelty at last get the bluefish into trouble. The fishermen know his tricks, and some day as the bluefish dashes along through the water he will see a squid or a curious looking fish hanging from a line. Rushing for the bait, he is firmly caught by the cruel hook, and in a few minutes the fisherman draws him into the boat. When enough bluefish have been caught the boatman makes for home, where his wife or the cook prepares the fish for the table, or he may send them to market, where they are sold.

As he is so cruel himself, no one feels very sorry for the bluefish either.

Scouts Plant Trees.

All boy scouts in Altoona, Pa., recently turned out under the direction of District Forester Walter D. Ludwig of Johnstown and planted 40,000 trees, allotted to the city by the state forestry department, on the Kittanning Point, watershed guarding Altoona's water supply.

Scouts Aid Red Cross.

The three troops of the Boy Scouts of America in Glen Ridge, N. J., have raised $450 for the Red Cross through donations and new memberships.

We Eat Too Much.

The average Canadian eats too much. It is no exaggeration to say that he eats twice the amount that is needed to nourish the body. Long life depends upon proper functioning. In order to preserve one's strength and vitality, no more food should be taken than is actually needed to maintain one's weight and strength. Scientific feeding, therefore, would require one first of all to make a test to determine the particular amount of food which most satisfactorily maintains normal weight and strength. The particular weight that one should carry can be measured to a large extent by one's vital condition. The weight at which you feel strongest and have most endurance, with a brain clear as a bell, is the weight you should try to maintain.

Edison has said that the American people are doped with food. And there is no question as to the accuracy of this statement. Horace Fletcher in his dietetic experiments in connection with the rationing of the Belgium refugees brought some revolutionary principles into the limelight. Those under the influence of this rationing improved in health to an extraordinary extent. The death-rate was reduced by about one-third.

This habit of eating beyond bodily requirements is due in large extent to our regular-meal habit. We have certain times for meals: breakfast, dinner, and supper; or, if you belong to the so-called "upper classes," breakfast, lunch, and dinner. It's about the same in either instance. Gormandizing is actually considered necessary. We become slaves to the three-meal-a-day habit.

The time to eat is when you are hungry, and at no other time.

If you are hungry at mealtimes, those are the times when you should eat. But you should eliminate forever from your mind the idea that it is necessary to sit down at the table and attempt to eat at the accustomed time whether you are hungry or not.

If we could rid this nation of the meal-time slavery, the statement is no exaggeration that the amount of food that could be saved would feed all our soldiers now engaged in this terrific war. And not only would food be saved, but the nation would be benefited both mentally and physically.

Gold in the far eastern portion of the Watersrand, Transvaal, is estimated at the worth of £450,000.

Filling In Cracks.

One of the bits of repair work that need occasionally to be done in the house is the filling up of cracks in the walls or baseboards. Cracks should always be filled promptly. Putty, plaster of paris, sawdust and glue are all good fillers for cracks of different sizes and in different places. Any of them may in time wear out and need renewal. Very thick paint is a good filler. Putty is whiting mixed with linseed oil, and if applied to unfinished wood the inner surfaces of the crack or hole should first be touched with shellac. If this is not done the oil from the putty will be absorbed and make a visible line or ring. Perhaps wax is better.

By the handy man or boy or by the woman who can use a few tools fairly well large cracks can better be filled with small wedges of wood driven in tightly. These may be so well filled and matched in color that they will not be noticed.

The Fragrant Bath.

Every one knows the comfortable feeling which results from a hot bath after a hard day's work. That feeling is enhanced when the bath is made fragrant by the addition of a muslin bag of powdered orris root, about a tablespoonful in a bag, and a dessertspoonful of tincture of benzoin, which is a balsam.

The aromatic and perfumed atmosphere that reigns in your bathroom as the result of this herb and spice mixture is delicious, soothing and mildly stimulating.

Cracker Dish.

There is a dish for crackers, cheese and jam that delightfully suggests crackers, cream cheese and strawberry jam or bar le duc jelly, either of which combinations forms a fitting finish to the light veranda luncheon.

ESCAPED FROM GERMANY.

Winnipeg Man Recently Arrived in London.

Sergt. F. G. Hammersley, whose home is in Winnipeg, is one of the trio who arrived in London from a German prison camp, from which he successfully escaped recently. He was in the hands of the Hun for two years, being one of the original prisoners taken in the second Battle of Ypres in April of 1915. Fortunately he was not wounded, but at one prison camp, aptly named Teufelsmohr, the first syllable of which [illegible], while he was sick, he was absolutely neglected. He passed through a succession of camps, and the only place where his treatment was fair was near Bremen. Probably this was due to the fact that the shipping interests of this city mean that the people there are better acquainted with the English people.

The food served to Sergt. Hammersley was always poor and insufficient, but the Canadian Red Cross parcels reached the camps and proved to be salvation for the Canadian prisoners.

As the non-commissioned officers always refused to work at drudgery to which the Germans subjected their prisoners, Sergt. Hammersley joined the passive resisters, and as a consequence was made to tramp with other men for hours daily.

On being transferred to a new camp lately started at Heralake, Sergt. Hammersley with a Lancashire corporal and a Manchester man, managed to get away, and reached the Dutch frontier after a four-days' trip, during which they had many narrow escapes from sentries and watchdogs, but once they were over the Dutch boundary they were treated most kindly and were sent to Rotterdam and thence to London.

Hammersley hints that he could say much more, but he is under restraining influences.

A Cleaner's Trick.

To clean black lace squeeze three or four times through a liquid made by dissolving a teaspoonful of spirits of wine and a teaspoonful of borax in a half teaspoonful of very soft water; then rinse in a cupful of hot water in which a black kid glove has been boiled. Pull out the edges of the lace until nearly dry and press for two days in a heavy book.

If it's your inning
And you're winning,
And all is fine—don't gloat;
Some day, Old Top,
You'll take a flop
And sing a different note.

When life is bright
And things go right,
Don't fail to look about;
Remember, pard,
Life's pretty hard
For the boys who are down and out.

It is estimated that 10 per cent of the major league players are unmarried and are likely to be drafted into the army, says a news item. Well, the other fellows won't need so much training, perhaps.

Well, what of it? If the Greeks—or was it the Romans?—had their brave ten thousand, and the British had their brave six hundred, why can't we have our own brave 10 per cent.?

The Pirate crew has taken on two new desperate characters to assist in the moody work of scuttling the other National League craft in the fight for the pennant. They are infielders, named Wolfe and Debus, and perhaps they will help to bring home the swag. Ya-ho! and a bottle o' rum!

Owen Reese, who did some star twirling for the Cedar Rapids club of the Central Association, is making good on the mound with Hughie Jennings. If our young friend Owen succeeds in escaping an attack of elephantiasis of the bean, he's likely to be heard of further along the baseball story.

Grouchy Gus Says:

"A malefactor of great wealth nowadays is a baseball star who gets soaked with a fine for sassing the umpire. (This sentence doesn't seem to run just right, but it's too hot to re-write it.)"

Despite the fact that John K. Tener has announced that he is not a candidate for re-election to the presidency of the National League, there is very little doubt of his receiving the solid vote of the clubs. His administration has met with the entire satisfaction of everyone concerned, and when his term expires in December he will receive a unanimous request to serve for another five years. The former governor of Pennsylvania has directed the affairs of the National League with great diplomacy and fairness and has had some of the most difficult problems to contend with. The war with the Federal League broke out almost immediately after he was elected in December, 1913, and peace was restored mainly because of his masterly handling of the situation. Then again his great influence helped considerably to avert the threatening trouble with the Players' fraternity. The suit for $900,000 brought by the Baltimore Federal League club was withdrawn when Tener showed his and in many other ways he has demonstrated his great ability. This, despite the fact that he has very much less authority in handling the affairs of the National League than Ban Johnson has in dealing with the American League.

Fight fans are very much interested in the outcome of the fight scheduled for Labor Day between Carl Morris, of Oklahoma and Fred Fulton, the Minnesota heavyweight. They have been signed up to box fifteen rounds to a decision at Canton, Ohio, the match having been arranged by Matt Hinkle, the well-known referee and promoter of Cleveland. Fulton is very eager for this bout, as Morris is the only heavyweight who stands in his way for a bout with Jess Willard, heavyweight champion. Morris and Fulton fought in New York several month sago when Morris won on a foul. The later says he will try to knock his opponent out in the coming match and thus spoil his chances for the match with Willard.

Pugilistic Annals.

1893—Kid McCoy defeated Dick Harris in one round at Marion, Ind.

1903—Jack Johnson and Sandy Ferguson fought six rounds, no decision, at Philadelphia.

1907—Young Britt won the decision over Bat Nelson in 20 rounds at Frisco.

1908—Stanley Ketchel knocked out Hugo Kelly in three rounds at San Fracisco.

The English Military Officer.

"In England officers scarcely know their men. Even if you do get keen on a particular squad of recruits, or a particular class of would-be bombers, you lose them so soon that your enthusiasm never ripens into anything like intimacy. But at the front," writes "A Student in Arms" in the London (Eng.) Spectator, "you have your own platoon, and week after week, month after month, you are living in the closest proximity—you see them all day, you get to know the character of each individual man and boy, and the result in nearly every case is this extraordinary affection of which I have spoken. You will find it in the most unlikely subjects. I have heard a major—a regular with, as I thought, a good deal of regimental stiffness—talk about his men in a voice almost choked with emotion. When you see what they have to put up with, and how amazingly cheery they are through it all, you feel that you can't do enough for them."

The Streets of Bagdad.

The streets of old Bagdad are noted for their narrowness, their irregularity, and their picturesqueness. The winding alleys that serve as streets are crowded with noisy, jostling people, dressed in their gayly colored Oriental garments. Even the water supply of Bagdad, which is drawn from the River Tigris, is carried through the streets and distributed from house to house on the backs of men or beasts.

The roofs of the houses are all flat, having parapets running around to protect the dwellers from the public gaze, for the people of Bagdad spend the cool hours of the day upon their roofs. During the middle of the day they stay in a sort of cellar, called a serdab, which is sunk below the level of the courtyard. These cellars are usually damp and over their half windows are arranged girdles which are kept dripping wet. The principal family rooms of a Bagdad home open directly from a covered veranda.

Glass Bricks.

The use of glass bricks for building purposes is being adopted in many European cities. As a means of admitting light to dark hallways and basements these transparent blocks have been most satisfactory, and there has been no loss in stability of construction when they have been substituted for the ordinary clay brick.

Admiral Sims of Port Hope

WHEN it was announced that the commander of the first American naval unit to take the seas against Germany had been born in Port Hope, a New York newspaper commented upon the happy augury. Canadians will take an especial interest in the fortunes of the American destroyer squadron, now co-operating with the British fleet in the North Sea, because Vice-Admiral Sims is a Canadian by birth, and first saw the light of day in the Ontario town, Port Hope. Apart altogether from auguries and sentimental interest, the fact remains that Sims is one of the best men in the American navy. He had no sooner arrived overseas than he was asked by the British authorities how soon he and his ships would be ready for business. "We can start any time," replied Sims, and thus provided a slogan for the American navy which will be treasured with Jones' immortal, "We haven't begun to fight yet," when he was asked to surrender, and Dewey's remark which ushered in the Battle of Manila Bay, "You may fire when ready, Gridley."

Though Sims, as remarked, is a Canadian by birth, there is no other man in the American navy who would be selected as better representing the traditions of that fleet. In other navies he might be not so much at home. He has been insubordinate more than once. He has had the distinction of being officially rebuked by the President of the United States. He has made reports and recommendations without regard for precedent and official routine. But he has made good. In the United States navy and elsewhere much is forgiven the man who "comes across." Literally he has come across in the present war, and when it is his good fortune to meet the German navy or any fragment of it he may be counted on to strike as hard and as audaciously as Admiral Beatty. It will not be his fault if the war ends without giving the American navy an opportunity to show that it is in the fight, hook, line, and sinker.

Until a very short time ago Sims was a mere captain. Nevertheless, at home and abroad he was better known than some of those who had higher rank. He was a familiar figure in London, Paris, and Petrograd. He was also a popular one, and when he came to a foreign port it was natural that he should be entertained at an official banquet. A few years ago on one of these occasions in London Captain Sims made the remark that if ever the existence of the British Empire was threatened the United States could be counted on to give every dollar, every drop of blood to preserve it. It was another American seaman who made the significant remark about blood being thicker than water, referring to the same contingency. However, Sims was reproved. He was not removed. Events have justified him. He is now "over there" to make good his promise.

The honor conferred upon him — and there is not a commander, an admiral, or a captain in the American navy who does not envy him the honor—astonished some of those who knew his history. It was not that he was not efficient, but that he had been too outspoken. He had not hesitated to say what he thought, and even if his communications were privileged, as when he was called as a witness before a Congressional committee, he had not sought to say the pleasing, soporific thing, the thing that his superiors would naturally approve. He spoke of the defects of the American navy. He did not say that it could "lick creation." He told the truth as he saw it. Even the wonderful improvement that was made in American naval gunnery under his direction, he did not claim credit for. He said it was due to the theories of "that wonderful man, Vice-Admiral Sir Percy Scott, of the British navy." He did not give the American eagle a half chance to crow.

When he was in China as a lieutenant he came across the British navy and studied its gunnery methods. Instead of reporting his observations to the man immediately over him, and trusting that he would in the course of time forward the criticism to the proper authorities, he wrote directly to the President of the United States. This was no way to make himself popular with his superiors; but by a chance it happened that the American President was looking for just such first-hand information, and presently Sims was recalled and given charge of the gunnery of the American navy. Later on he was entrusted with the destroyer command. He continued to speak out and criticize what he believed to be wrong, and he has continued ever since. Events have shown that Sims, as a rule, was right, that he was wedded to the navy, that he thought and said nothing that had not the welfare of the American navy as its mainspring. So he has arrived. Here's luck to Sims, of Port Hope, Ontario!

Sandstone Quarries.

Sandstone in red, brown, grey, etc., and of good quality, has been largely quarried in New Brunswick, for building purposes, and in past years found a considerable market in the New England States. Quarries are now being worked at Sackville, Renous River, and other places. Limestone exists at St. John in large quantities. In addition to the quarries that have been worked in the St. John locality a new quarry for the manufacture of hydrated lime has been opened up at Torryburn.

Animal Babies.

The little lambs grow into sheep,
The kittens grow to cats;
The mother hens once were peeps,
But rats were always rats.

Young Planters.

The two little gardeners are doubtless very much pleased with their work; also they are taking precautions that their planting shall not be in vain by building a guard and support for their shrub. It is hardly to be doubted that the plant will be carefully tended and watered until it has grown to maturity.

IN THE GARDEN.

Germany has notified Turkey and Bulgaria that she will assume all expenses incurred by these countries in the campaign of 1917-18.

British recruiting officers are counting strongly on a total of at least four thousand men from the Chicago district for service under the Union Jack.

It is understood that the United States shipping board has concluded negotiations for taking over five German ships which found refuge in Cuban waters.

NEIGHBORS MEET TO BID MR. AND MRS. FROWDE GODSPEED

Valuable Gifts and Address Attest Warmth of Friendship---Are Leaving to Make Their Home in Sidney N.S.

This morning, Mr. and Mrs. James Frowde, 409 Walton street, left on the C.P.R. train for Sidney, Nova Scotia, where they intend making their future home wtih their son. Mr. and Mrs. Frowde have resided in Peterborough for upwards of forty years, and during that time have won for themselves a host of friends who will regret their departure. Both were active members of the old Charlotte Street Methodist Church, (now Trinity Church). A number of the ladies connected with the two departments of the Church met last evening at the home of Mrs. Frowde, and presented her with the following address together with a beautiful, gold-mounted umbrella and thermos bottle.

The Presentation.

The address was read by Mrs. Morley W. Lyle, President of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Mrs. M. B. Lyle, Treasurer of the Society, made the presentation. The address reads as follows:

Dear Mrs. Frowde.—It is with sincere regret that your friends in the Trinity Church Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid learn of your departure from Peterborough.

For many years you have graced the meetings of both societies with your presence, and you have always proved to be a helpful and sympathetic member, ready with sound, wholesome advice, and also ready when practical assistance was necessary. You had a place, you had talents, and you used those talents and made good.

When your voice was lifted in prayer God's choicest benediction fell upon the hearers.

Quiet, dignified, motherly, Mrs. Frowde will be missed, and that she may not forget the Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid, we ask her to accept this umbrella and thermos bottle.

When the salt breezes of the old Atlantic fan your brow on a summer evening we hope fond memory will carry to you cheerful recollections of the less pretentious, but always beautiful river, Otonabee, in Peterborough—

"Of all the beautiful pictures
That hang on memory's wall"
Is one of dear old Peterborough,
"That seemeth best of all."

And may your prayer and ours be: "May the Lord watch between thee and me while we are absent one from the other."

(Signed) Mrs. Morley W. Lyle.

MAKE ANSWER TO ALL QUESTIONS

OR GO TO JAIL FOR CONTEMPT IS RULING OF THE COURT.

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—According to the judgment of Mr. Justice Sutherland, Chairman, Samuel M. Genest, of the Ottawa Separate School Board, together with four Christian Brothers, must answer questions asked them upon examination to determine the injunction granted by Mr. Justice Lennox restraining the board from paying unqualified teachers in the English-French schools. In default of answering they must go to jail. The situation has arisen from the action precipitated by R. Mackell and other English-speaking supporters of the Separate Schools of Ottawa who have invoked the law to compel that the schools should be conducted in conformity with regulation No. 17.

Thus far it is estimated that about $1,000,000 worth of floating lumber has passed Quebec on its way to the sea, due to floods in Beauce county.

DAMAGE DONE BY HEAVY STORM

TREES STRUCK BY LIGHTNING AND GROWING CROPS LEVELED.

The storm last night did considerable damage in different sections of the city and surrounding country.

In the city electric light and telephone wires were placed out of commision for a short time and a tree near St. Peter's Cathedral was struck by the lightning and split in two. In East City a tree in front of Mr. Hall's residence on Mark Street was blown down.

Several of the gardens suffered by the wind. Corn, tomato and potato plants were blown down over, but most of it will rise again if the wind is light.

Many fields of grain were laid over, but it is thought that the crops will not be severally damaged. The rain was welcomed in most localities and will be of great benefit to the oats and other growing crops.

FOR MOUNTAIN WEAR.

The Kind of Sweater That Gives Best Service.

A STICK OF CANDY.

This silk sweater of maroon and white stripe and natty belt is especially appropriate for the girl going on her vacation. Immense chic is added by the collar and cuffs of white angora. Slip-on sweaters are still the thing.

HERE'S A NEW FISH.

Washington Bureau Recommends the Cod's Cousin of the Lakes.

The secretary of the department of commerce announces that the bureau of fisheries has discovered another new edible fish that in the past has been unjustly neglected. It is the burbot and is being advertised by the bureau of fisheries by illustrated cards, on which is printed a picture of the fish and this legend: "The cod's cousin from the great lakes—practically no waste. Ready to cook. Recommended by the United States bureau of fisheries."

The burbot flourishes in the great lakes and is plentiful there. The fish is known in some localities as the "eel pout" and "eeling," and "ling" and "cusk." It is prepared for use by skinning instead of scaling. It has few bones, and the flesh is firm, white, flaky and of good flavor. It ships well. A bulletin for free distribution giving information regarding the fish and recipes for preparing it has been issued by the bureau.

THE PEPLUM BLOUSE.

This Natty Garment For Comfort and Work.

To those whose need or habit it is to dress quickly the peplum blouse is a boon indeed, for no intricate adjustment and fastening of shirt and blouse and belt is required. In the matter of convenience the peplum blouse is in this respect on a par with the popular middy, yet having a trigness and smartness of style about it of which the middy blouse can make no boast.

Comfort, too, and ease and grace of movement are assured in these attractive blouses, and there are many different types developed in a variety of materials to suit the many occasions upon which they may be worn.

Pleasingly mannish and businesslike in appearance is the shirt blouse with peplum extension, having the box front and shaped sleeves finished with straight cuffs, following the lines of the regulation shirt worn by men.

Masculine Comfort.

A man once said that the things he looked for in a room were a comfortable chair, a strong writing table and a good light. That does not seem much for a man to want, but how many men get it? The girls and women of the household decorate and furnish their rooms to please themselves, but it is not often that very much thought or trouble is spent on the men's rooms. One reason that they don't think more about it is that as most men have these comforts at their offices they do not bother to voice their opinion about what they might have at home.

Every one who has a boarding house is rather anxious to rent the rooms to men, as they are proverbially less trouble and easier to please than women. How much more easily the rooms might attract men if they should bear in mind the three things this man said were essential to his happiness.

Sally Lunn.

Sally Lunn can be baked either in a flat sheet or in muffin pans and is delicious in either form. To make it, sift together twice two cupfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Break two egg yolks into half a cupful of milk, mix and add to the dry ingredients. Then add half a cupful of melted butter and the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff.

To Set Color.

To set color in calico or any cotton fabric use one teaspoonful of sugar of lead (poison) to a pail of water. Let the articles soak in this fifteen minutes, then wash.

Wounded Soldiers Saved From Wreck

Halifax, Aug. 2.—All except the crew have been removed from the vessel which stranded yesterday at the harbor mouth with 546 wounded soldiers aboard. It is hoped, however, a renewed attempt will prove successful.

HUN LEADERS IN WAR COUNCIL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Aug. 2.—Emperor William has called a war council of the high military and naval leaders in Germany to meet at Brussels today. Field Marshall Von Hindenburg, chief of the Imperial general staff, General Von Ludendorff, Quartermaster General, the German Crown Prince, Crown Prince Rupprecht, Grand Duke Albrecht, and Vice-Admiral Edward Von Capelle, minister of the Imperial navy, and others will be present.

BRIEF SESSION OF LABOR MEN

INTENSE HEAT CUT SHORT MEETING OF TRADES COUNCIL.

In the absence of President Hartley and Vice-President Bolwell, Mr. T. J. Stenton, of the I.A.T.S.E. and M.P.O., occupied the chair at the regular meeting of the Trades Council last night. Owing to the intense heat the session was brief.

One delegate objected to the appointment of an American, T. McCue, as assistant Food Controller and another questioned the wisdom of saddling his $25,000 salary upon the people to aid in obtaining one of the necessaries of life. Another delegtae held that an American could give the Canadians more effective aid than one of their own countrymen would be able to render.

When the heated season is over it is proposed to establish a central library and to begin an educational campaign for the study of important public questions.

MIDDLE SCHOOL EXAMS

The results of the Middle School examination for entrance into the Normal Schools at Peterboro are given below. The certificates of the successful candidates and the statements of marks of those who failed will be mailed to the principals or inspectors in the course of a few days.

Successful candidates who desire to attend the coming session of the normal schools are notified that their applications for admission must be made to the Deputy Minister of Education not later than Monday, August 20th. They are advised to make early application. If applicants will state clearly in their applications when and where they passed the normal entrance examinations, they need not delay such applications on account of not having received their certificates.

Miss Campbell coud not fail to be gratified by the number present, and the attention paid to her lecture, and also by the programme given by the members, of amusing readings, recitations, and patriotic songs. An evening meeting open to all was also held and was well attended. The Institute has carried on its work well and we may say that the success is due to the capable and energetic women who have acted as officers and to the members in general who do their very best to help in the work.

In conclusion it may be mentioned that the Institute has lately donated ten dollars to Red Cross work for the soldiers.

MR. ROWELL FOR CONSCRIPTION

Hugh Guthrie, Liberal M.P. Says Sir Robert Borden is the Only Man for Premier.

The Peterborough people who registered as delegates in the Win-the-War Convention in Toronto yesterday were: Thos. Walker, Mayor Duffus, Mrs. A. W. Turner, F. H. Dobbin, A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. Gardiner, J. C. Read, Mrs. Thos. Cruickshank, Dr. F. T. McNulty, F. D. Kerr.

"There should be only one party in Canada—a party determined to win the war and to mobilize the full strength of the country, in men, in money and in resources." — Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario.

"We have staked our future on the issue of this war, and we have to put all our organized and disciplined energy in to guarantee our own future." — Mr. N. W. Rowell, Leader of Ontario Opposition.

"The people of this country should concentrate all their efforts for the next twelve or twenty-four months on the war, to the exclusion of everything else." — Mr. Hugh Guthrie, M.P. (Liberal).

Only One Party

Toronto, Aug. 3.—With Liberals and Conservatives speaking from the same platform for the same principles and two thousand returned soldiers cheering every reference to conscription and making no concealment of their opinions of those people who oppose a more vigorous participation in this war, last night's meeting of the Win-the-War Convention at the Arena was of a unique nature. It left no doubt as to the opinion of the members of this new body on the great problem of reinforcing the men at the front, and it left even less doubt as to the aim of the organization which is to install at Otawa a national Government made up of pro-conscription representatives of both political parties or or any party that has victory over Germany as its purpose. Quebec, as was to be expected, did not escape last night's meeting unscathed. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was treated despite the moderate and in every way considerate attack upon him made by his former adherent, Hugh Guthrie, M P., to scathing denunciations from the audience, more especially the returned men. Mr. Guthrie was interrupted on numerous occasions. The first instance was when he asserted that Laurier is as sincere as the Government leader. Cries of "No!" greeted this assertion. "I know him better than you know him," replied Mr. Guthrie to the war veterans. This leading Liberal also expressed the belief that Sir Robert Borden ought to lead any Union Government that might be formed, as he had carried the war task up to now.

Sir William Hearst when he demanded the enforcement of conscription without fear, favor or affection was vigorously applauded. Mr. Rowell's statement that he would put patriotism before party was also enthusiastically received.

The Soldiers Speak.

A feature of the meeting was the presence of several returned soldiers and mn who gave their opinions on the present issue. They did not mince words, and their comrades were unstinted in their applause. Lieut.-Col. E. B. Hardy declared that we have so little of the actual horror of war with us that we are apt to forget that Canada has pledged her honor and her help in this struggle. This ignorance must be enlightened, he said. Men are needed and needed quickly, or Canada's glorious corps will be but a memory. Compulsion is as necessary for Canada as for any of the belligerents. "Let our politicians put aside all side issues and give us men," he concluded.

Lieut. H. E. Machell presented the view of the returned man upon conscription. The returned men will not desert their comrades in France, he said, "I want to issue a solemn warning to the politicians and the people of Canada that there is a limit to human endurance and patience, and all I can say is, 'God help Canada if the returned men are forced too far."

Pte. James J. Shanahan also made an appeal for conscription.

John M. Godfrey presided at last night's session. Others on the platform were Hon. W. D. McPherson, Maor Canon Dixon, Aemilius Jarvis and Ald. MacGregor.

Sir William Hearst Speaks

Sir William Hearst was given a great ovation when he arose to speak on "The Present Crisis." He spoke of the German peril that the Dominion faces, saying: "Germany triumphant in Europe, her most coveted possession would be Canada. Under modern conditions distance itself does not mean security. Ror a year huge German submarines have been crossing the Atlantic. Who can say if the war continues for another year or so but that enemy Zeppelins and aircraft may not be flying over Canada as they are over England today. Canada's defence in on the western front.

Maintenance of the Army

"To my mind the question whether we did right or wrong in the position we took at the outbreak of the war has little bearing on the case. The fact is that at the call over 300,000 of the best and bravest of the land have gone overseas. These men went forth with our solemn promise, a promise backed and endorsed without reserve by both the great political parties in this country, that Canada was in the fight to the last man and to the last dollar. Are we going to desert our gallant men at the front that for well nigh three years have been fighting to protect us, and allow their ranks to be decimated and destroyed? The only choice left to us now is the choice between the fulfilment of our solemn obligation to our men at the front and desertion; between courage, determination, and action, no matter what sacrifice or suffering that course may involve, and everlasting dishonor and disgrace. If I know the sentiment of the people of this province, and I think I have some idea of it, it is

THE PLATFORM.

The Win-the-War Convention resumed its session at 10 o'clock this morning. In the notices of motion then handed in were resolutions, which will come before the Resolutions Committee today. In brief they are as follows:—

That the soldiers who have been at the front for three years be given three months' leave of absence in Canada;

That six business men and representatives of farmers and labor be included in the Government;

That a union, or win-the-war Government be formed, and that by-elections be held to fill Parliamentary vacancies, with the extension of the life of Parliament;

That the Government prohibit the sale or manufacture of alcoholic liquors in Canada until six months after the close of the war, and that its resumption be a matter for the people by vote to decide upon later;

That the convention take the popular name of "United Canadians";

That a War Council be formed of prominent citizens;

That no German, Austrian or Turk in the Dominion who had not been resident for 25 years, or has fought or sent his son to fight for the allies be allowed to vote;

That soldiers get two votes at any election to come;

That there be imposed a land tax of 1 per cent., to be devoted to the war purposes; and

That, as the cost of living had gone up so largely, both soldiers' pay and the Patriotic Fund allowances be increased.

EASIER NOW TO REVERT IN RANK

OFFICERS WHO DO SO WILL NOT FORFEIT PENSION RATING.

Easier Now

It is announced from Ottawa that any Canadian officer who reverts in rank in order to get into active service will not forfeit his separation allowance or his pension rating.

No More High Officers.

It is believed that under the new recruiting scheme all the infantry recruited will come under the control and command of one base depot, which will have full charge, and will, in fact, look after recruiting of the men. The practice of obtaining men by the medium of the various militia regiments will be stopped, an infantry soldier will simply be an infantry soldier, belonging to no distinctive unit, and will be under the command of the officers and staff of an infantry depot. Practically the only officers in this new arrangement, outside of the staff, will be subalterns, and they will accompany drafts of men overseas from time to time. As officers go overseas their places will be taken by officers now awaiting an appointment, or by officers who rise from the ranks. In this way it is thought that gradually all the excess officers in Canada will be absorbed.

Seventy-one Conservatives in Ottawa signed and presented a testimonial congratulating Hon. Robert Rogers on his exoneration by the McLeod-Tellier Commission of the charges made against him by Mr. Justice Galt.

A Pressing Need to be Met

One feature of the filling up of the city is that many of the families of men on service find that rents are rising beyond their means and that there is a very noticeable scarcity of houses. No less than five women appealed to the Patriotic Fund office for help in this matter.

Now is the time, when moving can be done with least inconvenience, to have this want attended to. The appeal cannot be suffered to pass unnoticed. It will not do to be indifferent. These people must be housed before the fall weather sets in.

So will those who have houses of moderate rentals to offer, or who can spare part of house, phone or in any other way advise the Patriotic Fund office? It will be a share of public service so to do. To any who will place houses at disposal, the committee will, in cases, guarantee the rent so long as the head of the house is on active service. For a roof must be over the heads of the family.

Kindly make your offers. Five cases are waiting now.

YACHT OWNERS GIVEN WARNING TO GET LIGHTS

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS HALL PAYS VISIT TO BOATMEN.

Collectors of Customs Robt. Hall and Chief Clerk Wm. Laing paid a visit to the street railway wharf last evening and after looking over the fleet of motor boats was surprised at the number that failed to live up to the regulations regarding the carrying of lights.

The owners were all warned to at once comply with the regulations and not run their boats before they had secured the proper lights. Prosecution will follow the offenders against this government regulation, and the yachts tied up pending the pleasure of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The regulation as it applies to yachts under 26 feet in length are:

First.—That they shall carry a white light aft to show all around the horizon

Second.—They shall carry a combined lantern at the fore part of the vessel lower than the white light aft, showing green to the starboard and red to the port, and so fixed that the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on their respective sides.

Every motor boat or yacht shall be provided with a whistle or other sound-producing apparatus capable of producing a blast of two seconds or more in duration.

Cut this regulation out if it applies to your yacht.

ITALIAN AIRPLANES BOMBARD NAVAL BASE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Aug. 3.—A large squadron of Italian Airplanes bombarded the arsenal and military works of Pola, the chief naval station of Austria on the Adriatic.

PROOF OF GERMANY'S GUILT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, August 3. — knowledge has reached officials here, and is made public today for the first time, that Germany had possession of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia fourteen hours before it was delivered in Belgrade. Germany has maintained publicly on all occasions that she had no foreknowledge of the ultimatum, but it is now known that Foreign Secretary Zimmerman has made the above admission, and this admission fits in very closely with recent statements that the German and Austrian leaders held a council of war at Potsdam July 5th, at which it was practically decided to plunge Europe into a conflict.

NO CANADIANS ENGAGED IN BIG BATTLE IN FLANDERS

CONSCRIPTION IS NOW BEFORE UPPER HOUSE

Five Senators Speak Against It and Five in Favor of the Measure.

AMENDMENT IS DOOMED.

The Bill Will Probably Be Carried by a Majority of Five Votes.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—The Conservative Acadian senators from New Brunswick are standing loyally by the government and in favor of conscription, as F. J. Robidoux, the Acadian member of the commons, did. Senator Poirier on Wednesday announced that he would support compulsory service, and Senator Bourque, the recently appointed New Brunswick Acadian, and Senator Girroir, another Acadian, also spoke vigorously in favor of the military service bill. Earlier in the day a report was circulated that Senator Bourque would oppose the bill, but this proved to be a canard. The Acadians have responded splendidly to the call to arms and have enlisted most satisfactorily. Conscription therefore appeals to them with force.

Expect Small Majority.

There were ten speakers in the senate, five against the bill and five in favor of it. Only three of the Quebec Conservatives have gone over to the opposition on this issue, Senators Landry, Montplaisir and Beaubien, and as no Liberals are expected to vote against the Bostock amendment, the government will be able to defeat it with a small majority. The party majority is eight, but with three defections it is reduced to two. However, three of the Liberal senators are on the sick list, and may not be able to be here for the division, so that if all the other senators are in their places the Bostock amendment will be defeated by five votes. The division may not take place until late tonight or on Saturday.

Senator L'Esperance, another French-Canadian Conservative, came out in favor of conscription and it was significant that the Labor senatorial representative, Senator G. D. Robertson of Welland, vigorously supported conscription.

Senator McLennan also supported the bill, and the opponents today were Senators Power, Legris, Tessier, Lavergne and Choquette.

SIX MEN SUFFER IN EXPLOSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Hamilton, Aug. 3.—Shortly before two o'clock this afternoon a bad explosion occurred at the East End plant of the etSel Company of Canada. The police were told several men had been killed or injured and despatched all available ambulances and patrols to the scene.

Robert Hobson president of the company, speaking from his home, said the report he received was that five or six men had been badly hurt but no one killed. An ammonia tank set in a car of scrap iron had exploded. Earlier reports of the explosion at the plant as to the number of casualties were exaggerated. Six men are badly hurt, one probably fatally. All were foreigners. Several others were slightly injured.

LABOR FOR THE BILL.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—Senator Robertson, representative of organized labor in the Senate, in his speech before that body urged the adoption of the Military Service Bill and its immediate enforcement. The American unions, he said, had declared in favor of the selective draft system.

British and French Troops Cooperating, But Former Outnumber Others Six to One---Ground Lost to Germans Has Been Retaken---German Guns Are Less Active.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

British Front, Aug. 3. — An artillery duel of considerable intensity continued last night along the battle front in Flanders, but generally speaking the German guns were less active this morning and situation was unchanged. At daybreak the Germans concentrated a heavy gun fire on the newly acquired British positions in the area south of Ypres and they have been actively shelling these defences since that time.

During the night the enemy launched a counter attack on a small part of front held by the Australian and New Zealand troops in the Hollebeke La Basseeville line but were forced to retire by British artillery which poured a deadly fire into the German ranks.

No Canadians Engaged.

"In this week's battle the British co-operated with the French. There were about six times as many British troops as French soldiers. Of the British four-fifth were purely English and one-fifth Australians and New Zealanders, Welsh and Scotch. No Irish or Canadian troops participated."

Lost Ground Regained.

London, August 3.—British troops according to the official statement issued today by the British War Department, already have regained part of the ground lost when the Germans penetrated the British front line trenches on Infantry Hill to east of Monchy Le Preux last night.

In a State of Siege.

A state of siege has been declared in whole Greek department of Attica, including Athens and Pireaus, according to a despatch from Athens to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Rumors of Separate Peace.

Camille Huysmans, the Belgian secretary of the International Socialist Conference, in an interview today with correspondent of a Dutch newspaper, the Handelsblade, declared that Russia and Austria Hungary were on the verge of coming to an understanding, according to a despatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph.

How French Are Faring.

Paris, Aug. 3.—Bad weather persists along the entire front in Belgium. East and south of Cerny, after a bombardment of extreme violence, German forces delivered on a front of about fifteen hundred yards violent attacks but they all were repulsed by our fire. In the course of the fighting we inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Artillery fighting on both banks of the River Meuse, in the Verdun sector, was particularly spirited in region of Avocourt Wood and Hill 304.

RUSSIANS STILL RETREATING ON EASTERN FRONT

Town in Bukowina Evacuated After Encounter With Austro-Germans.

FOE CAPTURE CAPITAL

Something Like Discipline Restored and Change of Leaders Popular.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Aug. 3—Russian forces in south-eastern Galicia, says an official announcement, after a battle with the Austro-Germans, retired across the river Zebrock at its confluence with the river Dniester.

Still Falling Back

The War Office announced that Kimpolung in Southern Bukowina has been evacuated by the Russians, who are now engaged with the Austro-German forces on the Bystritza. Between the Dniester and Pruth the Russian retirement is continuing.

Something Like Discipline

That some degree of order and discipline is being restored in the armies of the south-western front, as indicated by recent official commun-

Terrific Battle Now in Progress May End Nightmare of War.

GREATEST EFFORT YET.

For the First Time Maximum Force of the Allies Is Used Against Foe.

Paris, Aug. 3.—On the result of this new battle, destined to pierce the German line from the North Sea to the banks of the Scarpe, depends in all probability the libreation of French and Belgian Flanders. Only now the writer in Gaulois is allowed thus to express the hope all France has placed in the northern offensive, whereof news reached Paris this first of August, on which three years ago the announcement of mobilization set forth beyond the shadow of doubt the war's inevitability. It is, indeed, the culminating effort of the allies that coincides with that poignant anniversary. America—a young giant in the fullness of strength unimpaired—may be preparing for two or three more years of war, but

A PLEDGE FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

The executive committee of the Women's Auxiliary to the Organization of Resources Committee, of which Mrs. W. R. Morris is a member, after consultation with the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Dominion Food Controller, is authorized to state that the Food Controller has adopted the idea of a pledge to be taken in a house-to-house canvas from each individual housewife to do her best to prevent food waste and to encourage thrift and economy in the home. Where pledges are given, the Food Controller will provide a card to be placed in windows, showing that the house is pledged to save food for the Canadian soldiers and our Allies.

The executive of the auxiliary has also been assured by the Institutes Branch of the Department of Agriculture that they will send a demonstrator in canning to any centre upon application.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH. FRIDAY, AUG. 3, 1917.

GREATER NEED TODAY.

BUT, IF SO FAR as the battle front is concerned, there is any difference between the position of last year and that of this year, it is that the position of Canada's troops on the battle front today is vastly more precarious this year than it was last year. This being the fact on the battle front, I am bound to say to my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that I personally have not the necessary acrobatic qualities to take a position diametrically opposed to that which I took last year. — Dr. Michael Clark (Liberal) in speech in Parliament.

"LOYAL CITIZEN'S" PROTEST.

"LOYAL CITIZEN" has a letter in another column in which he protests against he calling of a "win-the-war" convention in Toronto, on the ground that such a gathering is a covert attempt to wreck the Conservative party, of which "Loyal Citizen" is a devoted member. We cannot help thinking that his fears are unwarranted. The Conservative party is in no danger from such a source. Safe as it is on its record since the war broke out, any such propaganda as that sent out by the convention now in session in Toronto cannot fail to work to the advantage of the organization, for the safety of which our correspondent is, to his own credit, so zealous. Preaching such a doctrine as winning the war regardless of every other consideration will tend to emphasize the differences between the two factions into which the country is now divided.

Chairman Godfrey in his opening address to the delegates yesterday, proposed a policy of general destruction. He would obliterate both of the old parties. Even if the people did accept his advice and go the limit with regard to his suggestion, any organization that would arise from the ruins would simply be one in which the principles of "Loyal Citizen's" party would be perpetuated. A policy of "win the war" has no terrors for the party whose aim has been represented in that slogan ever since the necessity for such a battle-cry arose. The very fact that Sir William Hearst consented to address the Toronto convention should convince the skeptical that there is no ulterior motives inspiring the majority of the delegates, whatever the few may have hidden up their sleeves.

There are loyal Canadians, as well as good Conservatives and Liberals, at that convention, although no one need wonder if the faith of the latter in their own leader has been sadly shaken.

Let "Loyal Citizen" and all others who are inclined to suspect an Ethiopian concealed somewhere in the back benches of the convention in Toronto, consider the situation for a moment. In the next election, conscription is to be the issue. The war can be won by no other means. If the election is fought along the old lines, and the Liberal party should, with the increased support it would be sure to receive in Quebec, was returned to power, what would be the result? The Quebec members would be in the majority. They would control the new government. There would be no conscription, and, as Sir Clifford Sifton has warned the people, Canada's part in the war would at once cease. All the conscription Liberals in Ontario or any of the other provinces would be powerless against the faction still faithful to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The situation is as plain as daylight, and the danger can be discerned from any distance. It is to avoid such a situation and to escape the danger that is the aim of the delegates to the Win-the-War Convention. There may be a Judas, or two at he feast, but we are convinced that the patriots are in the majority.

QUEBEC IS solidly arrayed against the rest of the Dominion, and it is only as a matter of self protection that the proposition is made for a combination of forces to offset the opposition from that province.

GETTING CLOSE TO NATURE.

ONE EFFECT of the recent hot spell was to drive humanity closer to Nature. This was illustrated by the hardy and independent individual who ventured on the public streets without coat or collar and with his shirt relieved of its usual responsibilities at the neck. It required moral courage to face the public in such negligee attire, but the number who are equal to the innovation increases with the passing years.

Why should a man mortify his flesh and render his existence a burden by wearing during the hot weather garments designed as barricades against the cold? Why, for example, should a minister be compelled, by popular demand on behalf of fashion, to appear in his pulpit encased in attire which is little less uncomfortable in torrid weather than the hair shirt adopted by the penitential monk?

Paragraphers continue to make merry jest at the expense of women's attire. In taste as well as in comfort, the object of the jokers' wit has everything on that of the male portion of creation. No style of headgear ever adopted by womanhood has as little to commend it from any standpoint as some of the hats and other articles designed for masculine wear and paraded by their owners without a blush or a thought of apology to outraged good taste. Women's skirts may be a trifle short, but at least they clear the streets and do not act as sweepers, as they did some years ago. Mere man in muddy weather finds it necessary to take a reef or two in his trousers in order to preserve them from contamination.

The world moves slowly. For four thousand years man never dreamed of any other method of getting into his shirt except by drawing it over his head. Another way has been discovered, and to that extent at least he has been emancipated. Every year something is designed for his hot weather comfort and is being graduály adopted. The day is coming when the minister will appear in his pulpit in a Palm Beach suit, just as so many of his hearers are beginning to wear in their pews. Life has so many natural afflictions of its own, that there should be no connivance at the tailor's attempt to add to them with his sartorial barbarities.

Man imagines that he has reached the pinnacle of perfection in his manner of dressing to keep out the cold. But has he? Here, again, had he not better take a leaf from woman's book? He has come to believe that he cannot face a zero atmosphere without a heavy cap on his head and a coat collar pulled up over his ears. Women may go to the other extreme, but three men sicken and die of pneumonia for every woman so taken down, and men, too, get bald, and wonder why that is so peculiarly a masculine affliction.

TAKING OVER THE C. N. R.

AFTER ALL it is a matter of Hobson's choice with the Government, this matter of taking over the C. N. R. It was either that or letting the enterprise go by the boards. It may be a step in the right direction, that of public ownership of all utilities, but the present time is hardly propitious for such drastic business changes. However, the Government has no other alternative. The mortgagor who has advanced money on a house to the limit or in excess of its actual value may prefer a return of his cash to taking over the property, but the latter is the only course left him if the former is not forthcoming.

But how is the Canadian Northern Railway to be made to pay under its new management, if under the old it was impossible to save it from bankruptcy? The company had the Dominion Government behind it from the start. When money was needed for construction of main line or for branches, a draft was made on the public treasury. Over five hundred million dollars have been sunk in the work. If the men who have been in charge of it could not make the investment a financial success, what chance has the Government to accomplish that feat?

The promoters of the road are, it seems, to be retained in the State's service. They have been acting in that capacity, practically, ever since the first sod was turned, and still they failed from a business standpoint. There is really no change in conditions. The company had the Government and will have it behind them yet under the new order.

If the road is bankrupt, the men who have been interested in its promotion have at least escaped the same fate. After all, the construction of the C. N. R. was no remarkable achievement. Any man with unlimited state aid at his back could accomplish as much, just as any man can rear a white elephant provided a generous public come across with the original purchase price and the subsequent cost of maintenance.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE REPORTER A WAR FACTOR

Frank Crane has the following open letter, addressed to President Wilson in the Chicago News:

My Dear Mr. Wilson: Somebody's on the way to making a very serious mistake in this war, and I want to call your attention to it.

The mistake is in not finding a place for the newspaper reporter.

We not only have to go to France to fight, but we've got to keep up a public sentiment over here that shall furnish the moral steam for this enterprise.

And the real sentiment maker is the newspaper reporter.

You've got to have sentiment if you want to win this war, and out of it.

You cannot win in the dark.

Tell the people the truth.

Don't make the mistake England made at first. Lord Northcliffe says: "I trust that the United States will not make the censorship blunder England made and which is just becoming an evil of the past. England was kept in the dark for nearly three years. The people were blinded by the fatuous optimism of soldiers and politicians, who, while efficient in peace, were incompetent in war. The people were not permitted to know the truth, and when the truth finally emerged out of costly blunders and sacrifices they were loath to accept it. I hope that America may permit her newspaper and magazine writers to be absolutely frank about what is going on. It is as important for the nation to know the worst as it is for the nation to know the best. For one thing, it is a great stimulus for the men fighting in the field to know that they are being written about at home and that the country they are fighting for knows precisely what they are doing.

Give the newspaper reporter a chance, Mr. President, and he will do as much as any gunman or epauletted officer toward winning the war. For he's the man to stir up the people, make your liberty loans easy and stimulate your Red Cross subscriptions.

And, by the way, who was it made that rule that nobody is to be mentioned in the war news except Generals Pershing and Sibert?

Of all fool regulations, that takes the Prussian iron cross.

Pershing and Sibert are all right. But we're interested in our boy, Billy O'Toole, of West Madison street. What is he doing? And Sam Bowles of Oak Park, and Dave Watson, that used to run our hat store on Main street? Tell us what these fellows are up to.

Why is it that the daily experiences, the larks and labors of the laddies cannot be known?

There's that story of the Texan who carried the first American flag in the war up Vimy Ridge; was that true? If so, that's the kind of tale to win recruits.

Give us intimate, live pictures of what the boys are doing. There is no need of giving such information as would aid the enemy.

And there's such a thing of being so afraid of aiding our enemies that we do not aid our friends.

Put the soft pedal on the censor.

It's a Prussian job anyhow.

This is a people's war.

And we need to know what is going on.

And remember, too, that it's the official with the solid ivory top that fears publicity most.

WHAT TO WRITE ABSENT WIVES

"If I was of a literary turn of mind," remarked Culberson. "I'd sit under a willow tree somewhere and write a book that the world is desperately in need of, and at the same time make enough money in the job to put myself in the burdened-with-wealth class."

"What kind of volume do you think the world is pining for?" asked the girl at the adding machine. "Haven't we got the grandest set of six best sellers to draw upon?"

"I'm through with 'em all," replied Culberson. "The book I'd write would treat of the practical. I'm thinking of a work that would be purchased by every blooming husband in the world whose wife is always on vacation and called 'What to Write to Absent Wives.' What a man can write about to his wife is the most perplexing problem he faces. It is a problem seldom perfectly solved."

"How odd! Why don't you write the same kind of letter you did before you married her?"

"Can't be done, Miss O'Gillicuddy," explained Culberson. "I thought it could until I took pen in hand and tried. Before a man marries he doesn't care how foolish his fiancee thinks he is. In fact, he and she put a premium on that sort of thing. But after the wedding chimes have been forgotten a man wants his wife to believe him a monument of sense.

"A man of 44 summers can't bring himself to sit down and begin his epistle like this, for instance: 'Dear Snookums, how desperately lonely I have been since you left yesterday afternoon. Loveykins, you must come back at once or I shall be found dead of despondency. Oh, my Cutey, why did I let you go? Flowerlet, before the moon sets I fear I shall jump off the sun porch and end it all.'

"Why, that's a classic!" exclaimed the girl at the adding machine. "The wife who would get a letter with those sentiments would feel so happy, she'd be likely to go out on the lawn and run around a tree for sheer joy."

"That's not classic—it's imbecile. My letter, I believe, would be more like the following:

"'Dear Maud: I am feeling fine. How are you? The cat is sick. Some one stole the ice box off the back porch. Storm came in windows and soaked everything. Stood on sideboard to drive nail—sideboard tipped over. Can cut glass be glued? Forgot water in bath-tub. People downstairs threaten to start suit. Three gentlemen visiting on business left lighted cigar stubs on dining room table. Goldfish disappeared out of bowl—can't account for it. Silver all gone. If you didn't take it with you I fear burglars have been here and gone. Inclosed find check for next two weeks. With love, ——.'"

"Oh, aren't you terrible!" sighed the girl at the adding machine. "You'd never send a letter like that before you were married."

"What wonderful reasoning power some women have!" said Culberson, biting at his cigar.

THE SONG OF THE SOCKS.

With fingers skilful and swift,
Eyes full of Love's own light,
The women are knitting in every town,
Knitting far into the night.

Knit-knit-knit,
One foot the cradle rocks,
Eyes may be heavy and fingers stiff,
Daddy must have his socks.

Knit-knit-knit,
The maiden sits alone;
Her thoughts afar in the fields of France,
But of moments she wastes not one,
As she bends o'er her tender task,
She weaves in one golden hair;
It may be a charm for her soldier-lad,
When her Love-Gift he shall wear.

Knit-knit-knit,
Her brother's a boy in blue
What British sailors have always done,
She knows that he will do.
So, in dark midnight hours,
She knits while others sleep;
And his comrades and he, on the wild North Sea,
Our shores in safety keep,

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Blessed are they who know enough to let well enough alone.

No man who has never been tempted is sure of his honesty.

Some people can best make their presence felt by their absence.

Bad luck causes a man to take a mental inventory of his friends.

It's foolish to worry about the things you can help or the things you can't.

Alas for those heads that feel light only when the owner has a heavy load on.

The truth that occupies a nutshell finds some minds too narow to give it room.

Conceit is not a virtue, yet every man should have a little of it in his makeup.

If Noah had let the building of the ark to a government contractor the flood would have been postponed indefinitely.

STAND BY THE GUNS.

Editor Review: Why should the loyal and true Conservative, member of the party, which has done its best for the prosecution of the war, and is alone of all parties in Canada who have stood firm in that direction, be thrown to the dogs, to please some people who are justly dissatisfied with their own party and are trying to drag, for political purposes, the Conservative party down to their own level? Alleged Conservatives who go to Toronto to throw down Borden and the Conservative party and to set up a policy of win-the-war which has been the Conservative policy from the beginning and will be to the end, are in fact, deserters from their own party. They are doing a great injury to the cause and their conduct will be very properly quoted by the people of Quebec as justifying their opposition to Borden.

In order to appreciate what the government under the leadership of Sir Robert Borden has done, we need only go to the United States, which came to Canada for instructions in raising men, money and munitions for the war in preference to going elsewhere. The American States know how to appreciate our Government's efforts.

Those of our own people who get rattled and throw down their former friends may yet blush with shame. Had the Liberal party been so assiduous in their assistance in the conduct of the war as they have been in their criticism and opposition, Canada would not now be in the moment of her peril politically torn assunder.

In addition to fighting the Huns Sir Robert Borden has had to fight the Liberal party, which has unexpectedly found help in a quarter least to be looked for.

"How are artichokes to be canned?" was a question on this page last week. The Penetanguishene Herald answers: We know no way to preserve them except in a soda and vinegar brine. They are fine done this way and will keep indefinitely." That, however, sounds more like pickling than canning. Another authority writes: "Why do you want to can them, you chump? In proper cellarage they will keep as long and as well as potatoes." Will they keep longer than kidney beans? Yet Beans are canned by the ton.

The agent-general of Alberta, John Reid, has issued ballot papers for voting on soldier candidates for the Legislature to some 350 units of the Canadian and Imperial forces in France, and the officers commanding the units will act as deputy returning officers.

A long official report from Rear-Admiral Albert Gleaves describing the incidents involving encounters of American troopships and their convoying war vessels with German U-boats in June fails to bear out the account of those incidents contained in an official statement furnished to the United States press.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of August 3, 1900:

The train hands held responsible by the coroner's jury for the wreck on the Midland railway were held for trial at Belleville.

Col. (now General) Sam Hughes had a letter in The Review describing his military exploits in the South African war.

The late Hon. J. R. Stratton had a long interview in The Review (republished from The Globe), giving an account of his trip to the Pacific Coast.

FRANCE'S FATE

stormswept Europe knows better. By many signs she is warned that the end of the long nightmare is at hand. For the first time the allied offensive has been launched with full force under a leader of sufficient calibre to push through the plans to an end, irrespective of difficulties or criticism. In Petain France has found her Grant. Every writer on the war has remarked the closeness of the parallel with the Civil War. If Verdun was Gettysburg, Flanders will be the Wilderness. For some weeks it has been known that the offensive of April would have been a success — that is, would have broken the German front—had the attack been pressed home. This time there will be no hesitation such as saved the Germans then. In the meantime, the news of the initial victory is received with calm by the people of Paris. They expected it, but they know that it is only the beginning of a long and desperate struggle, even while confident it is also the beginning of the end. For France has rallied en masse to the resolution with which America took up arms, that this is a war of liberty, not a war of conquest. Once the German army is beaten and German militarism forced to relinquish its hold on the German nation, there will be few in France to demand war to the knife or other goal than the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine. As Ribot declared yesterday in the Chamber, Franco expressly repudiates aims at conquest. "In the name of France, I have rejected the policy of annexations by force. If the German people would realize that we desire only peace founded on the rights of nations, then the conclusion of that peace would be greatly facilitated."

In default of all other methods of bringing home the said realization to the German people the allies will hammer it into their heads if necessary. That is the ultimate objective of the allied offensive in Flanders.

REPARTEE

An umpire said to a pitcher named Ben
Who'd only just joined the big show;
"You'd better go back to the bushes again
Till the time you learn how to throw."

When into the dugout this pitcher would hike
And there join the rest of the push,
He'd yell: "Can't you yet tell a ball from a strike?
Oh, it's you that belongs to the Bush!"

And as long as we are in the circus, don't let's forget to look at Ferdinand Schupp, the Sure-Shot Dick of the Diamond. His Marvelous Mastery on the Mound and Superlative Sensational Sagacity in Sending the Sphere have placed him on the Pinnacle of Pitcherdom.

A financial headache of no mean proportions is just now troubling President Weeghmann of the Cubs. It has been brought to his mind most forcibly that owning a major league ball team a not all beer and skittles. In fact, it has cost him about half a million dollars to find out this trifling truth.

On the other hand there is that well known and justly celebrated financial operator, Mr. Comisky, who is making almost as much money as the man who has the peanuts and popcorn privileges in the grand stand. His White Sox are earning big dividends for him, and he has taken in enough of the long green to pay him back for his outlay when he invested in Eddie Collins, Joe Jackson and other scintillating stars.

Grouchy Gus says: "The mutuel machines have been cut off in the heyday of their youth. As a system for the painless extraction of the horse-bugs' little savings, the machine had the old bookie on the block beat to death."

Some day some Goethe of the diamond is going to immortalize himself by writing an epic entitled "The Sorrows of Byron"—(no, not the the poet, gentle reader, but the National League Umpire, who is having his troubles, take it from me). A feud seems to have broken out in the east between Lord Bill Byron and a number of players. The first blood was shed when McGraw, manager of the Giants, exchanged same passes with the Czar of the Diamond. Since then everybody who feels like it has been picking on him and if it were not for the fact that he is a mighty game man he would have thrown up the sponge long ago. The fans, incidentally, are getting pretty tired of the display of bum sportsmanship—and heaven knows they have no love for an umpire! Some of the hardest work President Tener of the National League has done in the past few weeks is slapping the fines on players who have indulged in umpire-baiting.

Bendigo's Last Fight

Bold Bendigo, the great English champion of the ring, fought his last fight when he was forty years old, his opponent being Tom Paddock of Redditch, a man of twenty-seven. The fight was staged at Mildenhall, and was carried on with extraordinary ferocity. The men became so enraged during the bout that there was great difficulty experienced in keeping them to the rules. "Foul!" was being called during every round. In the forty-ninth round, when the fight had lasted over an hour Paddock rushed Bendigo and forced him to the ropes. Benigo fell to the ground in a sitting posture, and Paddock struck him two deliberate blows on the head while in that attitude. The foul was so palpable that the referee awarded the decision to Bendigo without hesitation. Then Paddock, mad with rage and quite losing his head with passion, did a most unheard of thing. When Bendigo arose and stood with his hands beside him, thinking the fight was all over, Paddock rushed at him and struck him two fearful blows in the face, knocking him down at the referee's feet. Then one of the most disgraceful scenes ever witnessed in a prize ring took place. Paddock's friends, among whom were some of the toughest characters from Birmingham, swarmed into the ring, and one of them bludgeoned the referee. The fight broke up in a riot. When it was over Bendigo went back to Nottingham, his home town, this being his last appearance in the ring. He remained a conscicuous character in Nottingham for many years, living until August 1830, when he fell down stairs in his own house, and fractured his ribs, a splinter penetrating his lungs. He died died shortly after at the age of 70.

BACONLESS DAYS WEEKLY.

Added to the Beefless Proposals of the Food Controller.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—It is rumored that the Food Controller, Hon. Mr. Hanna, proposes to have in public eating places not only two beefless days, but two baconless days as well, and that he has asked the Minister of Justice to take the legal steps necessary.

The recommendation is accompanied by others requiring all caterers serving more than 25 meals per day to supply other bread than wheat bread for their patrons at every meal.

Ernest Johnson, a young Englishman employed at the Canadian Explosives plant at Parry Sound, was drowned in Richmond Lake.

SMALL ARMY IS NEEDED TO HARVEST ONTARIO'S CROP

At Least Ten Thousand Men Could be Employed When the Rush Starts in the Country---What Government is Doing.

Toronto, Aug. 3.—"Ten thousand men are needed to harvest the crop in Ontario," was the statement made by Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid to the employers of labor, who had been called together from all parts of the Province and addressed by Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Dominion Food Controller, at the Board of Trade, Thursday. "The harvest of Ontario must be got off without going to waste, and that means that it must be got off in time," declared Mr. Hanna in the course of an address in which he urged the employers to release their men for farm labor.

The meeting was called by the Organization of Resources Committee of the Province, and represented every class of labor. Even police chiefs were invited, and Staff-Inspector Archibald was on hand to represent the Toronto force.

Largest Crop Yet.

"It would appear that one of the biggest harvests that this Province has ever seen is now on the ground," said Mr. Hanna. "This crop will either be harvested in order or go to waste in part, according as the action is taken or help given. The question of harvesting came up in the spring, and the Resources Committee gave the farmers the assurance that this would be taken care of. But many of the men who, in April, promised to go on the farm, backed down in July, when the time came for them to fulfill their promises.

"More than 100,000 men from the Province of Ontario are at the front, and the proposition is a serious one. It would be a crime if the crop were permitted to go to waste as it is absolutely necessary, if our present situation at the front is to be maintained.

"Many of the employes of labor have recognized that they can spare some of their men. The Ford Motor Company agreed to close down for eight weeks if they, in any way, could help us out. (Applause.) But they claimed, and we agreed with them, that persons engaged in similar work should do likewise, and that the Government should prohibit the importation of automobiles while the Ford people are closed down. I took the matter up with the Prime Minister, and the Minister of Customs, and they said they were willing to meet any proposition of that kind, if it assisted in lifting the harvest."

Make Up Difference.

Mr. Hanna pointed out that the question of wages presented a serious problem. Whether the manufacturers should help make up some of the difference in wages might be left to a committee to be appointed by the employers. He maintained that every small town had men serving behind counters in the stores who would be better employed on the farms.

"The boys from our High Schools have done splendid work," he declared. Mr. Hanna intimated that the Department of Education might see its way clear to allow the boys to stay on the farms three weeks longer, as the season was three weeks late. He suggsted that the Ontario Government might see its way clear to pay the return fare of the men to the farms instead of paying the one way as heretofore.

Government to Pay Fares.

Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid said the transportation companies had agreed to give a half fare rate to those working on the farms, and in view of this fact the Government was willing to pay transportation both ways.

The meeting was then thrown open for general discussion. Mr. Hodson of the Hamilton steel works, said that about 85 per cent. of the common labor was foreign and the farmers objected to the foreigners coming into their houses. He suggested that the Government should assist in the erection of special buildings on the farms to house the foreigners.

Compel Men to Go on Farms.

"It is all very well to talk about manufacturers releasing men, but not more than 10 per cent. of our men are English-speaking," declared E. G. Henderson, of Windsor. He was in favor of a law being passed making it compulsory for men to serve on the farms.

G. C. Martin, president of Hamilton, objected strenuously to the idea of compulsion. He thought the men could be gotten voluntarily.

ONLY ONE PARTY

that whatever others may do, the war must be pressed by every means within our power, until victory, final and complete is secured."

Speaking of the necessity of compulsory service, Sir William said: "While I believe that conscription is the only way, I do not shut my eyes to the fact that difficulties will be encountered in the enforcement of the Act. I believe and hope that those difficulties have been magnified, but, nevertheless, they are serious enough. How, then, are we going to ensure its success? Is it by those of us who believe in conscription rushing at each other's throats and fighting over non-essential political disputes? Everyone present tonight believes that the one essential thing, not only for the liberty of the world, but for the existence of Canada, is to win the war."

ST. JAMES' LADIES AID.

Geneva Carried Excursion Party To Gore's Landing Yesterday.

The St. James' Ladies Aid Society excursion down the river yesterday afternoon was one of the most enjoyable outings that has been held this season. The cool breezes that were in evidence all day was a wonderful stimulant to the tired and weary who had sweltered in the city during the very hot days preceeded the outing.

The steamer "Geneva" that carried the excursionists landed them at Gore's Landing where luncheon was partaken of. The cool air and breeze from Rice Lake cleared the air and the farthest shore of the lake could be seen with the naked eye.

The steamer arrived home at nine o'clock after a delightful sail up the river by moonlight.

'THE FIDDLERS" A LIBEL ON CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Premier Borden Submits to Parliament a Statement by General Potter Regarding the Suppression of Pamphlet.

Ottawa, Aug. 3. — Sir Robert Borden, in the House of Commons submited a statement from General Potter regarding the suppresion of "The Fiddler," which he read. The pamphlet, said General Potter, affected Canada only insofar as the Canadian troops were held up as horrible examples of the neglect and carelessness in regard to liquor restrictions and venereal trouble. The book reflected very strongly on the Canadian troops. Harm had already been done through similar irresponsible and exaggerated statements and publications, alarm and anxiety were created in Canada because of them. The representations made in the book both as to alcoholism and veneralism were grossly exaggerated. The picture drawn was entirely contrary to the facts. After two years direct contact with the Canadian troops both in England and in France, General Potter could say that it was a gross libel on the men.

"It is a gross libel on the men," said General Potter, "and a great unkindness to those relatives at home to set forth isolated examples without stating percentages and numbers of troops involved." General Potter then quoted positive evidence to the contrary from reports made by Major-General John Hughes, Major-General S. B. Steele, and Col. C. A. Smart, all of these reports showed a remarkably small percentage of cases of drunkenness or venereal diseases.

Rum Ration Necessary

Reference was made in the book to the rum ration. "It is true," said General Potter, "that with the best control unfortunate incidents will occasionally occur due to pilfering from the battalion issues of rum before it reaches the men in the trenches. This, from my experience, is a very rare occurrence. It is my conviction that during the six months of bad weather at least it is necessary for the efficiency of the men that rum be available for issue on occasions considered by the commanding officer to justify it."

CAN CHECK PRICES.

Food Controller Hanna Will Not Hesitate to Act.

"The primary duty of a Food Controller in Canada and the United States," said Hon. W. J. Hanna in a recent interview, "is to see that the men at the front do not suffer from want of food; and that our mother country and our European Allies should not suffer from want of food."

"Have you power to check prices?" Hon. W. J. Hanna was asked.

"Certainly."

"Are you going to exercise it?"

"In the cases where we have the necessary data we will not hesitate to check prices," declared Mr. Hanna.

PARCELS TO BE SENT OFFICERS

ONLY THROUGH RED CROSS AS IN THE CASE OF PRIVATES.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 3.—Sir Edward Kemp's statement that officers and privates who are prisoners, are now on the same footing with regard to receiving parcels from friends, has been misinterpreted to mean that privates can be sent parcels. On the contrary, neither they nor officers can now be supplied privately. The text of Sir Edward's announcement follows:

An important change will shortly come into effect regarding parcels for officer prisoners. Sir George Perley, on July 11, cabled that the Imperial Government had decided to make new regulations which will come into force on the 1st of August, to provide that parcels for officer prisoners shall come under the same rules of parcels for prisoners of other ranks. These new regulations have been approved by the Canadian Government. The weight and number of parcels of foodstuffs to be sent fortnightly will hereafter be the same for officers as for other ranks, and will be similarly forwarded by the Canadian Red Cross Society, but the contents of officers' parcels will be selected with special regard for their requirements. In addition, officers may be sent not more than two extra parcels of foodstuffs per month up to a total gross weight of 22 pounds, if their friends so desire, and provide the necessary funds to the Canadian Red Cross Society. These new regulations will not extend to officers interned in neutral countries regarding whom the regulations are unchanged.

HAD TWO APPENDICES.

Interesting Case to Be Decided in Court at Owen Sound.

"A farmer of Kincardine township was carved for appendicitis, and took a little ornament home in a bottle. A little while after another doctor pruned him and is said to have handed him another appendix. Now, the case has gone to court as to who is to get the money for the operation. It may be, though, that in these days of increased production, the appendix crop has caught the spirit of the times." Is it not possible that in appendices there may be occasional cases of twins?

RUSSIRNS STILL RETREATING ON

cations, which show that resistance is being made along the Zbrocz River south of Huslatyn, is borne out by telegrams from army officers to the war department, and by newspaper despatches. Civilian Commissioner Gobecha, one of the several sent some time ago by the government to visit the various armies and endeavor to restore order, has sent the following mesage from the south-western front:

"I am happy to report that the army of General Korniloff, namely, the eleventh, which recently ran away, is now brilliantly repulsing the enemy in desperate fighting near Huslatyn. The seventh has also made heroic counter-attacks. There is a marked change in the spirit of the troops which gives rise to the hope that they will fulfil their duty towrd the revolution."

It is also reported that certain units of the fifth army, which refused to obey commands to advance quickly, have have been surrounded and disarmed by loyal troops.

Change Popular

The appointment of General Korniloff as commander-in-chief because of his recognized courage and ability is welcomed in military circles. Gen. Brusiloff, who has become extremely pessimistic toward the military situation, was nevertheless urged by Premier Kerensky to withdraw his resignation at least until improvement had been achieved, but without avail. Gen. Korniloff's appointment was then approved by the premier. Gen. Korniloff has recommended Gen. Tohkeremisouf, the hero of Halics, to succeed as commander of the south-west front.

AUTOIST FINED FOR SPEEDING

L. P. GOYETTE MADE RACE TRACK OF CHARLOTTE STREET.

The dangerous habit that many auto owners indulge in will be stopped, if the police of the city can do it. There have been all kinds of complaints received lately, and just as many times a warning has been issued, but no attention is paid to the police.

This morning L. P. Goyette of the Munitions and Metal Products Co., entered a plea of "Guilty" to speeding on Charlootte street, when he was served with a summons to appear in court.

Acting Magistrate Rush imposed a fine of $5 and $2.60 costs.

River St. Clair is reported about three feet above the normal level; it was from eighteen inches to two feet above normal all spring.

SERGEANT KIDD TAKES A BATH

BOAT MYSTERIOUSLY UPSET WHILE HE WAS ON FISHING TRIP.

Pigeon Creek holds a mystery and it will never tell, and the chances are that our friend Sergt. Kidd will be just as glad that it is not a graphaphone and does not reproduce. There is a tale to withhold and no one can or will repeat it properly.

As far as can be ascertained the following are the facts: Yesterday afternoon a party composed of Messrs. C. Lech, A. Belleghem, A. Routley, J. Holmes and Sergt. Kidd motored to Pigeon Creek to fish, and they picked a good afternoon for the fish were biting fine, and the party made a splendid catch. Their well-filled baskets bear this out. But to get down to the story. The party were all engaged in attending to their lines, when all of a sudden their attention was called to the boat in which Sergt. Kidd and Mr. Holmes were. It was upset, and the former occupants were wallowing in the water. Whether a fish too large got hold of the line, or whether "Sandy" got excited, or whether it was something else, but, at any rate, the boat was upset, and, after considerable trouble, the boat was taken to the shore, and the two men were none the worse for the dip.

It is said that it was not a fish that caused the upset, and that the occupants of the boat are both wondering.

SEARCH IS MADE FOR REV. MR. ANDREWS, CURATE, OF TORONTO.

Rev. Mr. Andrews, curate of the Church of the Messiah, Toronto, who has been visiting Mrs. Selwyn at Dr. Ardagh's cottage on Brewery Bay, near Orillia, has been missing since 10:30 Wednesday morning, and it is feared he may have been drowned. Mr. Andrews went out in a boat for a swim. He was in his bathing suit. That was the last that was seen of him. Dr. Leacock and a number of others searched the lake in motor-boats Wednesday night, but without finding any trace of Mr. Andrews or of the boat.

Mr. Andrews has only recently graduated from Wycliffe College and is assistant to the Rev. Mr. Selwyn, who is in New York.

CARUSO HOBBIES

Spent a Fortune on the Collections of Various Kinds.

A volume could easily be written about Caruso's hobbies. His caricatures appeared in the Italian daily paper some time ago, and are now published in book form. His inevitable sense of humor keeps him always in good spirits. His fellow singers and all those associated with him bear witness to this. He is a composer, too, but speaks of this activity with the greatest modesty.

Caruso has spent a fortune on collections of various kinds. He has a collection of dolls garbed in the authenic folk-costumes of the different Italian regions. His collection of snuff-boxes, watches, precious coins and glassware would do justice to any museum. And his books! The bibliophile would enjoy his first editions and rare volumes!

These sidelights of Caruso as the singer, the composer, the art connoisseur, the caricaturist, the philanthropist, serve to give a clear idea of the versatility of this great artist.

Genial, generous, a good fellow and a great artist, a real man as well as a celebrated singer, Caruso is a personality in the world of art today. At the age of forty-four he has reached the summit of his career, which is by no means nearing its end. This season at the Metropolitan has been one of the tenor's greatest and holds forth promise of equally great seasons to follow.

It is little wonder, then that these three concert appearances of Caruso have attracted such interest. Known through his gramophone records and heralded by the press, Caruso has achieved greater popularity than any singer in opera today or in times gone by. From a poor choir boy at twenty-five cents a week to a celebrated tenor at approximately twenty-five hundred dollars a performance is the record achieved by one of the most remarkable personalities in operatic history—Enrico Caruso.

George Innes, aged 8, was found drowned in the river at Brantford.

Brig.-Gen. G. S. Maunsell is general staff officer at Barriefield Camp.

INCREASE OF MUSICAL INTEREST IN HOLLAND

Musical Refugees of Belligerent Countries Welcomed by Dutch.

No country has so greatly maintained a basis of strict neutrality as Holland. Its press is neutral, its people are neutral, and the general atmosphere throughout the country is one of neutrality. As a result of this, this little country has become the Mecca of many things, both good and otherwise. Among the former one may count the influx of music. Never before has there been such a demand for, and such a response to, music of any sort. The Dutch people have taken to that form of entertainment as a means of forgetting the horrors of the war raging so closely about them. They are trying to drown out the roar of the cannon by the blast of the trumpet and, in a measure, they are succeeding.

Orchestras and Soloists Called Upon to Perform.

The orchestras and soloists called upon to perform are recruited from every nation. Holland abounds with refugees from all the powers at war. Among the musicians, it is however, the Germans who are most called upon to perform. The Concertgebow Orchestra, considered one of the three finest in existence, under the leadership of Conductor Mengelburg is perhaps the greatest in demand. He has arranged a series of concerts of unusually beauty and power which are given throughout the larger cities and towns of Hlland. The Queen Mother of Holland is one of the many persons of note who have been attracted to this music.

German and French Operas Given.

Besides the orchestral work there have been many performances of the better known operas. Here again the German music has been in the lead although the French follows as a close second. It is remarkable to note with what ease the artists of the different countries enter and leave Holland. Max Reinhard, of Berlin, transplanted his entire company of actors scenery and other theatrical equipment with as little trouble as one would expect to encounter in normal times.

Among the French musicians it is the Residentie Orchestra under the well-known conductor and composer Rhene-Baton which is the most popular. M. Rhene-Baton gives his symphony orchestra recitals at Scheveningen a seaside resort near the Hague. Previous to war times it was the Berlin Philharmonic who would encamp there for the season. That is, however, but a minor change. The point is that Holland has awakened to the great need for musical expression.

Dutch Audience Not Demonstrative.

As an audience the Dutch are not as enthusiastic as either the French or the German. True to the popular conception of their stolidity and quiet strength, they sit throughout a performance with keen inward appreciation, but with small outward demonstration. They have a high standard of value and are highly critical of the quality of the music given them. Aroused to a great pitch by a truly fine performance, they respond, however, with a heartiness and show of true appreciation that is all the more gratifying for its infrequency. Like all people with a great ideal they are not aroused until some true semblance of the ideal is reached. At that point, however, they give the full measure of their carefully treasured richness.

The New Edison Phonograph gives you the latest vocal, instrumental and dance numbers as you like them—the exact reproductions of the originals. This instrument gets and gives all there is, and one considerably enhances the pleasure of camp or summer cottage life. The J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte Street, invites your inspection.

PATRIOTIC SONGS

Many Written But Very Few Have Persisted

Shortly after the war broke out the presses of all the music engraving plants in Canada were running at top speed. So many people had written patriotic songs words and music and were so insistent that they should see the light that press feeders were a sorely overworked crew. Not many of these songs have persisted. Even the best of them is not often heard nowadays. Perhaps we have begun to realise that trivial songs are merely stupid in presence of this appalling event. Perhaps also the men capable of writing something great and permanent are like many other creative artists dulled by the terror of the times.

Our experience of two years ago is the experience of the United States to-day. All the inhabitants of "Tin-Pan Alley" in New York City are ragging the war and cabaret singers are in a sort of syncopated fit. The periodicals dealing with the graver side of music are full of advertisements calling attention to this or that anthem of freedom to this or that special hymn for patriotic occasions. All over the vast extent of the Republic amateurs touched with the fire of patriotism and not necessary by the flame of inspiration are committing their mort or less fervent aspirations and imaginings to paper, and the presses run far into the night. What will be the result. Perhaps one or two great songs will arise. In all probability they will be written by some one as obscure as de Roget who in a sudden blase of inspired passion produced La Marseillaise.

Lift, a New York publication, has offered a large prize to the person who writes a song best expressing the spirit of the United States. Other publications have conducted similar contests. It is highly improbable that in the army of mediocrity engaged in such compositions, a captain of patriotic music or verse will be discovtred. Great poems and great music are not generally to order. One cannot buy such things as one buys linoleum or soap.

The Cost of Living.

Despite the British Isles' war-time food shortage, the London housewife can make "four and tuppence" (4s 2d) English equivalent of a dollar, go practically as far as her Canadian sister, where no appreciable food shortage exists. With the London prices in his possession, a Toronto man recently enquired prices at several stores in his city, and comparisons show that one might buy in London a unit sample of each of the dozen foodstuffs quoted for $5.80, while in Toronto the total cost would be $5.77. In noting the comparison it should be remembered that the English "quarter" loaf of bread weighs four pounds and the Canadian is three pounds.

The comparative table is as follows:

	London.	Toronto.
Bread, loaf..	$0.25	$0.22
Milk, quart	.12	.12
Butter, dairy, lb....	.58	.45
do creamery, lb..	..	.48
Bacon, gammons, lb.	.37	.36
do streaky, lb...	.50	.45
Mutton, whole, frozen, lb...	.40	.30
Mutton, best loin, fresh, lb...	.54	.38
Beef, rump steak, lb.	.58	not sold
do round, lb.....	.48	.30
Rice, Rangoon, lb...	.08	.06
do Caroline, lb...	.15	.12½
Oatmeal, lb...	.12	.07
Sugar, lb...	.12	.09
Tea, minimum, lb...	.58	.45
do average, lb...	.66	.60
Eggs, dozen	.58	.48

It is not without interest to note that bacon packed, in many cases in Toronto, is but from one cent to five cents dearer in London after freight charges have been paid on it almost a third the way round the world. Rump steak is left out of the comparison as British beef is cut and sold differently from the Canadian fashion.

Canadian Drives Tank.

Walter E. Wheeler, formerly of the Beavers and Y. M. C. A. hockey and lacrosse teams of Brantford was the first Canadian to run a tank, according to word received by his friends. He received his apprentice training in the Waterous Engine Works plant, hence his selection. He writes home that the work in the tanks is very bumpy, and in case of trouble of a serious kind they have instructions to blow up the machine with themselves, if necessary, to prevent the secrets being discovered by the Germans.

HIS REVENGE

A young composer
Found in the glooms of Poverty, a song
For pasionate strings,
Raging against stupidity and wrong
Which rot the Heart of Things.

Scorn for the times
Breathed in the sombre, yet alluring strain.
There was a sneer
In the swift modulation, at the pain
Of one poor sordid year.

When he was dead
From dusty manuscript they played the song
This dark and bitter joke
Before a clamant and and unruly throng
Of sentimental folk.

These with closed eyes
Heard in the strain a sound of dancing feet
In fairy dells,
Spied the young bobolink upon the wheat
Before the Angelus bells.

Little they knew,
But all the understanding viols laughed
At the grim melody
Which cried at surly avarice and craft,
Cowards, and treachery.

—J. E. Middleton.

HONOR FEARLESS EDITOR.

John R. Rathom, of Providence Journal, Exposed German Plots.

John R. Rathom, edtior and publisher of the now celebrated Providence Journal, has been entertained as the honored guest of the City of Toronto, where Canadians showered honors on this friend of the Allies and his charming wife. Mr. Rathom has, through the agency of his paper, done more than any one man to defeat the plots of the German conspirators and spies in the United States. Possessed of an organization, the secret of which has never been told, be was enabled to keep in close touch with the German Embassy and Consulates. He knew almost everything as soon as planned, and published the details in full before the plots materialized in many cases. In some cases he was able to warn the Government in time to defeat the purpose of the German spies. In others be was able to publish information following fires and explosions, which led to the arrest of those directly responsible. It is estimated that the revelations of The Providence Journal were the basis for about three-quarters of the proceedings of the United States Government against the plotters.

Some of the sensational revelations in the long series since the war began includes the following:

Exposure of the Sayville wireless station, resulting in its seizure by the Government.

Exposure of the German Embassy's guilty knowledge in the Lusitania's fate.

Exposure of the attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the Labor leader, to influence the laboring element of the United States against the Allies, and hinder munition making.

Exposure of Boy-Ed and von Papen, the German agents attached to the German Embassy, leading to their removal from the United States.

Publication of the conversations between Ambassador Dumba and ex-Secretary Bryan.

Exposure of the plotting of von Igel, Dernberg, and von der Goltz, who were sent out of the country.

The plot to blow up the Welland Canal.

The German activities against the United States in Mexico.

Exposure of Zimmerman's plot to embroil Mexico and Japan with the United States.

Exposure of the plan to destroy the German ships interned in New York harbor.

The prophecy of the destruction of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa by fire.

Exposure of the manner in which Ontario nickel found its way to Germany from the United States.

One of the big results of the enterprise and courage of the Providence Journal, which has rendered it famous throughout the world, was the entry of the United States into the war with a whole heart, and the consequent departure of the archplotter, Count Johann von Bernsdorf, former German Ambassador at Washington.

Food of the Caribou.

The chief food of the caribou of Alaska is reindeer moss, of a greenish-white color, which is scattered over the hills and mountains. Their favorite feeding-grounds are on the treeless and semi-treeless parts of the territory, including the tundras along the coast of the Arctic Ocean and down to the Pacific side of the Alaska peninsula. They scatter widely in summer and collect in herds in the fall. Each herd has its leader, and it is said that if the leader is killed the rest of the herd become panic-stricken and stampede back and forth until another animal takes the lead.

Bettina's Salads.

Lovely girl is my Bettina,
Most exemplary her habits,
Save that I can never wean her
From concocting tough Welsh rabbits;
Also fudge she's always cooking—
Such things leave me weak and pallid—
And forever she is looking
For somewhat to make a salad.

Salads are her ruling passion.
She will make them at all hours.
She adopts each salad fashion,
Makes 'em out of fruit or flowers.
Once when we had friends to dinner—
Nothing else then had my lady—
She with dressing made a winner
Out of just my old straw cady!

In the year we've been housekeeping
Naught but foolish food I've eaten.
And for solids I am weeping,
Though the salads can't be beaten!
Life seems vapid, silly, petty,
And I told her so, doggone it!
What do you suppose said Betty?
"Put some salad dressing on it!"

Indian Legends.

Many are the tribes of Red Men who have occupied British America, from Labrador and the frozen sea to the Pacific. And many were the myths and legends by which they sought to answer the immemorial longings of the finite for the infinite. Through them all, one finds the same questionings, however different the expressions. And as it seemed impossible to the Red Man that the "Someone" who sent the grateful summre and the dreaded winter could be the same power, there soon developed the belief that the world was governed by two forces—the beneficent and the cruel; that "universal belief in both good and evil" which underlies the mythologies of all the races of the earth. Their myths and legends are the Red Man's answer to the questionings, old as is human life. And as the braves listened to the recital of these stories "of the days of the grandfathers in the beginning of the newness of things," sitting around their tepee fires through the long winter evenings, nothing in them was beyond credence to their untutored minds; "nothing was too large or too small to come within the bounds of their beliefs or within the play of their fancy."

The "creation" myths of the various tribes; the origin of light and of fire; the destruction of the world by fire; why the sun is bright and the moon pale; the origin of the stars; why lightning so often strikes trees; the origin of animals and of birds; how death came into the world, are among the subjects of these quaint tales. And beside their primitive charm, they disclose many curious analogies with the myths of ancient Greece; added proofs of the theory of the common origin of all. Perhaps the Cree legend of the origin of race illustrates as well as any the laconic directness of the stories. "When Great One made mankind he first made an earth oven. Then he modelled a man of clay and put him in to bake. He was not baked enough and came out white. Great One tried again, but this time he baked the man too long. He came out black. The third time Great One baked the man just the correct time and he came out red. That is why different races have different colors."

EARNING POWER

How to Increase Your Husband's Income at Home.

EIGHT WAYS WOMEN TRIED.

What Actual Women Have Achieved by Using Their Knowledge of How to Do Some One Thing Better Than Anybody Else.

Until the high cost of living problem is solved one must keep on living! Even by most clever planning a family of four cannot be supported adequately on $702 a year. Thousands of wives are glorifying their "standing" instead of hurting it by helping their husbands increase their incomes. Below are eight actually tried and successful plans.

A California woman sent cards stating she would make buttonholes at 2 cents each. Hurried and affluent mothers responded at once. Her work was neat. She made two average buttonholes in ten minutes—24 cents an hour, $1.20 a day for the five hours a day she could spare.

An Illinois wife had a large back yard. She specialized in cucumbers. She, with her two little boys, kept the vines in fine condition. Summer cucumbers for salad, smaller fall ones for pickles, were her stock. What she did not sell she put up in glass jars attractively. These sold readily for 30 cents per quart. She netted an average of $25 per month.

A California wife made round, heart shaped and animal spiced and sugar cookies, tied neatly in wax paper, a dozen to package, 15 cents a dozen. She began with a small oven on her gas stove and in two years needed and bought a "baker size" range. She does all her work of mornings and clears $40 to $60 per mouth.

Why not rabbit raising? An Iowa wife in a small town found this fine pay. Feed only alfalfa dry and rolled barley. With several bucks and 150 does $75 to $100 per month has been cleared by her. Small capital needed, as a very few will soon "start business" on a paying basis.

A Connecticut wife advertised herself as a skilled fruit canner. Her pay was 40 cents an hour or one-fourth of fruit canned. The share plan gave her enough fruit for her family of five, and often she had "extras" to sell for special occasions. Result, plenty of good fruit free and $15 to $25 per month cash.

A little wife in New Jersey "adores" dainty laundry work. She makes a specialty of laundering beautiful underwear, babies' and children's dresses, chiffon and crepe de chine waists. Her "standing" is of the best. Her winter work averaged $15 to $30. In summer she makes as high as $65.

The husband of a California woman made her a fine loom. She devoted her spare time to learning how to weave and how to create special designs. Now, after two years, she turns off skilled work and clears $100 or more a month. Her husband's salary is $75.

Doll dressing, bean bags made in cute animal shapes, baby rompers and creepers and gingham and hand embroidered sunbonnets for infants fill in the spare moments of a clever New York woman most delightfully. Trade among a few intimate friends at first, but so well done as to be quickly advertised. Income per month always $30 to $40. Christmas season brought $50 a month for mother, a bonus of $25 to fourteen-year-old daughter assistant.

In every woman lies the desire to do some one thing. If we stick to it patiently through the first slow moments we will find the results astonishing for effort expended and ourselves much happier, because we are lifting our husbands' burdens and giving something to life out of our real best selves.—Pictorial Review.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

CONNECT BY RAIL EUROPE AND INDIES

Only 550-Mile Gap Remains to be Bridged for All-Rail Connection

When a gap of only 550 miles is closed, Europe and India will be linked by rail. Already the bridging of 150 miles of that gap is under way, so that it will soon be cut down to a mere 400 miles. When peace once more comes to the world and that 400 miles is finally bridged, you may go from the Hook of Holland to Delhi without once boarding a vessel. The mail line between London and Delhi will be shortened from seventeen to six days, the former being the time now required to make the journey via the Suez Canal. The cost of a passenger's trip to India will probably be cut in half. The 400-mile gap is in the Hindu Kush mountains, between Russian Turkestan and India. With the closing of the gap the distance by rail from the Hook of Holland, the terminus of fast steamships from England, to Delhi would be 5,695 miles. The total distance could be further shortened to about 4,918 miles in the event of the construction of a railway now projected, to run into Russian Turkestan and reach the slopes of the Hindu Kush by way of the famous cities of Khiva and Bokhara. But as the now existing gap will probably be closed before the Khiva-Bokhara route can be built, the first all-rail travelers from Europe to India will probably have to traverse the full 5,695 miles, leaving it to those who follow them in after years to enjoy the shorter route.

Baked Brown Bread

One cup molasses, 3 cups buttermilk or sour milk; 2 eggs, 1 3-4 teaspoons soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups flour, 5 cups graham flour. Mix in the order given, dissolving the soda in a tablespoon of hot water. Put in baking tins, filling two-thirds full and baking about an hour.

Novel Marmalade

Take a pint of currants to one pineapple and a pound of sugar to a pound of the mixed fruit. Cook the currants and press through a coarse sieve to remove the seeds. Add chopped pineapple and sugar. Cook slowly until a rich conserve is formed.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salol Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

TO MAKE COLORS FAST

To preserve the colors of ginghams, printed lawns, &c., and before washing almost any colored fabrics it is recommended to soak them for some time in water to every gallon of which is added a spoonful of ox gall. A strong, clear tea of common hay will preserve the color of French linens. Vinegar in the rinsing water for pink and green fabrics will brighten these colors, and soda answers the same purpose for both purple and blue. The colors of the above fabrics may be preserved by using a strong, milk warm lather of white soap, putting the dress into it instead of rubbing it on the material and stirring into a fast and second tub of rinsing water a large tablespoonful of ox gall. To prepare ox gall for washing colored articles, empty it into a bottle, put in it a handful of salt, and keep it closely corked. A teacupful to five gallons of the rinsing water will suffice.

Satin and Tulle

Flounce upon flounce of soft tulle falling over a dainty flesh-colored satin lining goes far to make this dance gown a charming affair. Elaborate pearl bead festoons and embroidery afford rich trimming. The bodice is extremely simple, the only relief from the folds of tulle being the wide band of pearl embroidery.

TOOTHBRUSH FOR BABY

Decay of Milk Teeth Should Be Delayed Always

Mothers often feel that the first teeth are of small consequence, because they are not permanent. They do not appreciate the fact that poor teeth make for poor health, they detract from the child's appearance and do much to injure the permanent teeth. The washing of the mouth should be continued until the first teeth are cut; then a small toothbrush with soft bristles should be applied to the gums. If any stains appear on the teeth they should be removed at once with a little carbonate of lime in powdered form or powdered pumice stone. Should it be allowed to remain it will result in the decay of the teeth and help in the making of receding gums. As soon as any decay appears in a child's tooth it should be taken to a dentist, before it works havoc with the other teeth.

Dried Beef Dainties

Sliced smoked beef may be used in an almost infinite variety of ways. As a breakfast or luncheon dish, especially in hot weather, it will prove gratifying. It may take the place of toast in serving scrambled or poached eggs. It may be sauted or broiled. It may be served whole, or chopped and made into timbales with cheese, or heated in different sauces. In many dishes it will take the place of ham very happily. The house mother who lays in a supply of sliced dried beef will be surprised at the number of new dishes she will be able to serve with this simple ingredient as the foundation of each.

Veal Salad

Put one pound of cooked veal through a food chopper with two stalks of celery, then add one-fourth pound of chopped walnut meats. Season with salt and pepper and pour over tablespoonsful of butter, stir in one tablespoonful of flour, add one-half cupful of milk and let come to a boil. Beat three eggs with one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half cupful of wine vinegar and salt and pepper to taste. Stir all together. Let come to the boiling point and set away to cool.

TWO WAYS TO ACQUIRE AN ESTATE

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family, and yourself maybe, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

TWO WAYS TO BEQUEATH AN ESTATE

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape at court. Requires court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator—you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of court proceedings—no expense of court costs. HOSPITALS FOR BOOTS DO GREAT BUSINESS

Millions of Discarded Footwear Saved from the Wreckage of War

Few people, said an Army Service captain, have any idea of the amazing work of salving the wreckage of battle that is going on behind our lines in France—work that is saving the country millions of pounds a year; and yet there are few things in the conduct of the war more wonderful. Only a few days ago I visited a French town some distance behind our front, one of several towns in which this work is proceeding day and night, silently and almost unnoticed by the world. Thousands of French women and girls, whose menfolk are fighting or have fallen, are employed on it; and I confess I was simply staggered at what I saw.

"Healing" Tattered Tunics

To this hive of industry and "healing" is brought all the jetsam of battle, from a broken rifle or bicycle to tattered tunics and derelict boots—all to be renovated and made serviceable again in ways that seem almost like magic. In one place I saw shed after shed piled to the roof with discarded boots, most of them in such a deplorable condition that it seemed nothing short of a miracle could restore them. In former years they would all have been consigned to the rubbish-heap as utterly worthless. Not so now. Stage after stage I saw these boots, "broken in the war," converted again into splendid boots, soft and strong. I watched these clever and industrious Frenchwomen soak them in some mixture, and pass them from hand to hand until the leather became as pliable as ever it was. They were then rubbed and rubbed and patched, and soles or heels were put on where required. They were next immersed in a bath of boiling oil, straightened and shaped; and when the last process was finished, I assure you, you could scarcely have distinguished them from boots newly bought. This repairing shop turns out 2,000 pairs every day; and I was told the output will soon be 5,000 pairs.

A Wonderful Process

In other enormous workshops I saw khaki uniforms, tattered, mud-soiled, and some of them blood-stained, similarly made "as good as new." After passing them through a bath of hot water, the rags (for they are mostly nothing else) are handed to the women, who cut off the sound portions with sharp knives. These fragments are then washed in a disinfecting fluid, and when dry they are taken in hand by a small army of tailors, who, with wonderful cleverness and ingenuity, remake them; and they are returned to the Army ready for service again. A few minutes' walk distant is the hospital for wounded cannon, machine-guns, and rifles, where furnaces blaze night and day, and the Vulcans work amid a thunderous crash and roar. Here are mountains of broken rifles, to which a new lease of life is to be given. The butts and wooden parts are repaired or renewed; the damaged metal parts are replaced by new ones, rusty barrels are freshened up, and so on; and in a day or two these heaps of old iron are so many brand-new rifles for all practical purposes, doing deadly execution in the trenches. Close by you will see thousands of broken bicycles—so much scrap-iron to look at, beyond all hope of repair. Here again the [illegible] is at work; with amazing skill and rapidity the damage is repaired, broken parts are replaced, and the machines, restored to usefulness again, returned to their units.

Cantaloupe Frappe

Select two large, ripe canteloupes, cut in halves and remove the pulp, and press through a sieve. Add one cup of powdered sugar and half a cup of orange juice. Soak a tablespoon of gelatine in a quarter of a cup of water, set over boiling water, and stir until dissolved. Then stir into this the canteloupe mixture, and when cold turn into a freezer and freeze slowly. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Raspberry Ice

Put two quarts raspberries through a colander and then squeeze through a cheesecloth bag. Boil 1 3-4 cups sugar and a quart water for 20 minutes; add the berry juice and 2 tablespoonsful of lemon juice. Freeze in three parts ice to one part salt. Either black or red berries may be used for wine-colored or rose-colored ice.

To Clean Silver Lace

Silver lace may be cleaned by putting it into a linen bag and boiling it in soap water. Rinse in clear cold water. Apply warm alcohol to tarnished places. Remember to be careful with alcohol, for it takes fire readily. Set in dish of boiling water to warm it.

To Rid a Room of Flies

Put a few pieces of charcoal on a shovel and light it; let it burn till red, then pour over it a few drops of carbolic acid. Wave this around the room a few times and see the flies disappear instantly.

Mock Dutch Birds

Cut a thin slice of veal cutlet in oblongs. On each piece put a small strip of salt pork, grated onion, and chopped parsley. Add pepper. Roll each piece up and tie with a string. Roast in a slow oven.

Potato Souffle

Boil and mash white potatoes to make two cups. Add a well-beaten egg, three tablespoons of milk, a piece of butter and pepper and salt. Turn into a baking dish and bake brown.

Baked Bread and Cheese

Place in a baking dish slices of bread, then a layer of cheese, season, and repeat until the dish is full. Pour in enough milk to moisten the bread and nearly cover all. Cover and bake [illegible]. Uncover and brown.

[illegible] Cucumbers

[illegible] cucumbers, [illegible] with boiling [illegible] tender, and [illegible] toasted

GETTING COMPLEXIONS AT THE DRUG STORE

Woman Can Make Her Own Pink Cheeks By Means of Exercise—When She is Thirty-five

Considering the immense amount of money spent by women every year for rouge and other cosmetics designed to supply artificially the fresh complexion which nature no longer provides it is plain that nature's favors in that direction are worth fighting for—especially as fighting along commonsense lines will win the battle.

It is a painful fact that the tendency of advancing age is to rob the face of its fresh, natural color. There are exceptions, but the rule is to grow whiter, or, alas! yellower and more faded. When the color persists in moderation it is a great beauty; but even then nature is often very unkind, for if there be color there is too much color, and the face usually becomes a hard brick-red, with often red and angry veins. Very few of us, however, with advancing years need fear too much color, for there is always a remedy. It is the daily increasing pallor or even discoloration of the skin we must fight against.

Complexion Really Counts

Too many sick beds are an object lesson to us, or, if we need a more vivid picture, watch the daintiest and most beautiful lady with approaching mal-de-mer on board ship. Take away the pink flush, the red lip, the bright eye, and no classic feature consoles you for their loss. That is why nine men out of every ten admire freshness and healthiness.

The thing to do is to ward off the encroaching pallor by natural means. Watch for it. It begins, independently of actual ill-health, anywhere between thirty and fifty. Thirty-five is a trying time for a woman who values her looks, for nature has begun to lay hands on the beauty of youth. Disguise it how we will to our friends, let us to ourselves be honest and realize we can no longer lay claim to the freshness and charm of youth.

Keep Blood Pure

Now, complexion is entirely a question of circulation and surface treatment. "Keep the blood pure," is a platitude. No woman in her senses, at any time of her life, fails to recognize that indigestion and its kindred troubles must mar the most perfect beauty.

Keep yourself in a habit of daily exercise and health. Run, trot in one place, jump lightly in one place, do the simplest physical exercise, rub furniture, make beds, romp with your children, play games and keep your blood, if not in a boil, at least circulating briskly.

MILK AND WALKING

A Man Gives Own Advice on Beauty-Making

"I know a good beauty recipe," said a man the other day.

"Yes?" I inquired, wondering just what masculine theory was about to be expounded.

"Tell the women to buy a box of rouge, and a good rabbit's foot brush to apply it, and—" he paused, watching my surprised expression, then continued, "tell them to take both two miles out in the country and bury them, and then tell them to walk out every day to see that they are still there."

"Meaning that a four-mile tramp every day is all that's needed for true beauty?"

"Meaning just about that," he answered. "When I met my wife she was thin and pale, with sunken cheeks and dull eyes and she was [illegible]. Awfully pretty in [illegible] though. I stopped around at [illegible] every day on my way home from the office, used to get off at four then, and took her for a walk. We tramped short distances at first, but [illegible] a solid two and a half [illegible] her dinner time. Did her heaps of good—look at her!"

I followed his glance to the pink-cheeked, pretty woman across the room. His wife was surely healthy looking, just adorably pink and white and wholesome.

"I used to make her wear low-heeled tramping shoes and short, wide skirts," went on this beauty director, "and buy light weight, warm coats and adopt soft tam o' shanters, so as to be comfortable as well as pretty. I tell you if every woman walked a lot each day and drank plenty of milk, there'd be fewer invalids and more pretty women around," concluded my masculine oracle.

Potato and Apple Salad

Take six peeled, tart apples to four cold, boiled, medium-sized potatoes. The apples may be peeled and diced, uncooked, or parboiled without sugar, cut across, then cut into thin slices and, in either case, marinated for an hour in lemon juice. Cut up the potatoes (sliced or diced to correspond with the apples), and lightly mix with the apples. Serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Aching Feet

Should the feet ache or burn, use cooling lotions such as alum and water in which to bathe them. Or, if there are any cracked surfaces between the toes or under the feet powder them with fuller's earth or heal them with zinc ointment.

IF YOU ARE NOT PRETTY

Of course you are, though. Every young girl is pretty because youth itself is charm, and every good-natured woman is pretty because a kindly nature is but the mannerism of a sweet soul, and sweetness is beauty. You may not have a pretty neck, or rounded arms, or well-formed shoulders, though quite up to beauty standards otherwise. Well, where Nature fails, Fashion usually comes to the rescue.

If your arms are long and thin and the elbows sharp and red looking, always wear long sleeves. Of course you will be trying arm exercises to overcome the thinness, and you will swim, if you can, to make them firm, and you will massage with olive oil to make the skin creamery and to add flesh. But meantime, you will wear long-sleeved blouses with your suits, long chiffon sleeves on your silk dresses, long straight chiffon, lace, or double net sleeves with your evening gowns—sleeves full at the end, so they fall back along the arm with every movement, never quite revealing its thinness, but giving a sleeveless effect.

You will find deep narrow V neck's splendid, as they give a decollete effect to a dressy gown, and as they do not show the prominent clavicle bones—collar bones. If your hands are large and homely, wear long sleeves, with ruffles reaching down over the hands; or gowns with the full straight sleeves that fall wide and soft about the wrist, making the hand seem small by contrast.

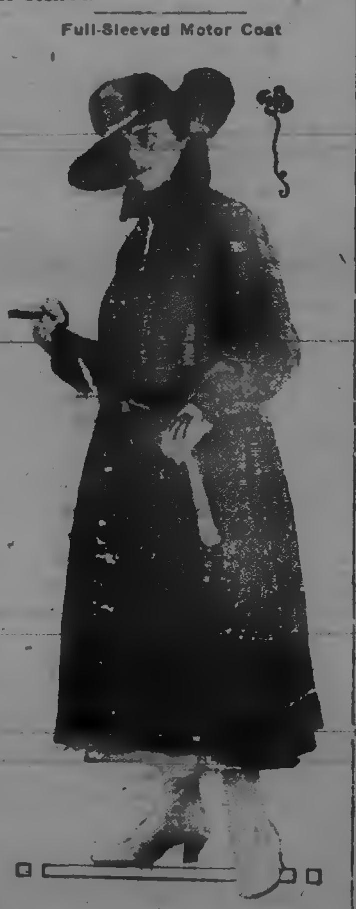
Macaroni and Dried Beef

Cook one and a half cups of broken macaroni in boiling salted water until tender; drain, rinse in cold water and drain again. Tear half a pound of dried beef into shreds, cover with boiling water, heat to the boiling point, then drain. Cook one-quarter cup of flour in one-quarter cup of butter, add two cups of milk, stir until thickened and smooth, season with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper, add the macaroni and dried beef, mix thoroughly, turn into a buttered dish, cover with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

Country Cake

Work one cupful of butter until creamy and add two cupsful brown sugar gradually, while beating constantly; then add two eggs, well beaten, two cupsful of bread sponge, two teaspoonsful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of clove and two teaspoonsful of soda, mixed and sifted, and two cupsful of raisins seeded, cut in quarters and mixed with one cupful of flour. Turn into two buttered and floured oblong pans, cover and let rise three hours. Bake in a moderate oven one hour. Remove from pan and spread with uncooked frosting or not, as desired.

Full-Sleeved Motor Coat



The top or motor coat that is fashionable and practical also, can be had in some of the most attractive shades. The fabric may be any of the novelty velours, mohair, or gaberdine. Here is a coat shown in dark brown velours, the notable feature of which, is the belted waistline and full raglan sleeves. The collar is reversible.

Unkneaded Graham Bread

Make a batter of ½ compressed yeast cake dissolved in a quarter of a cupful of warm water, three cupfuls graham flour, one teaspoonful salt. Cover and leave over night. In the morning add one cupful sugar and enough graham flour to make a batter so stiff it can be lifted with the hand. Butter pound-size coffee-cans thoroughly and fill half full; let rise till about three-quarters full, and then make an hour and a quarter in a slow oven. This makes three good loaves.

War Affects Sunsets.

Observations made at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory on Mt. Wilson in California during the past few years have shown that our sun, like many of the other stars, is a variable. In other words, the amount of heat and light it sends out sometimes varies by as much as ten per cent. in the course of a few days. To study this variation, its causes and its possible connection with climatic changes on the earth, a branch station of the Astrophysical Observatory is soon to be established in South America.

Since the planets shine by reflected sunlight, it would seem as if changes in the sun's radiation should produce changes in the brightness of the planets. Attempts to measure such changes in the case of Uranus have led to the discovery that this planet varies periodically in brightness. Moreover, the period is 10 hours 50 minutes, agreeing with the time of rotation as determined by an entirely different method. Thus the variation in light is probably due to the difference in reflecting power of different portions of the planet's surface and we have a new method for determining the rotation period.

Canada has sent reports to the Smithsonian Observatory of brilliant sunsets with beautiful after-sunset glows. A similar series was observed in 1883 and was attributed at that time to the volcanic eruption of Krakaoa, in the East Indies. As a result of this explosion particles of volcanic dust were hurled to tremendous heights and carried by the air currents to great distances. These particles illuminated by the setting sun produced some very beautiful effects. The present display is attributed to the war, which with its terrific bombardments is producing more smoke and dust than any volcanic eruption. The prevailing currents of the upper air in northern latitudes being from east to west, much of this dust is carried over Canada.

The First Confederation Day.

Early in the month of June, 1867, writes Sandham, in his "Montreal Past and Present," the attendance of the citizens was called to a public meeting, to be held for the purpose of considering the most appropriate manner in which to celebrate the inauguration of the New Dominion. As usual, committees were appointed, money subscribed, and on Monday, July 1st, the new National holiday was celebrated for the first time, with all the aid which novelty and the finest of weather could give it. The city wore quite a festive aspect, the public buildings and principal streets being finely decorated with flags. The ships in the harbor, including H.M.S. Wolverine, which arrived in May, displayed a large amount of bunting. The sunrise of the day was heralded by the noise of cannon and the morning was occupied with a grand review on Logan's Farm, in which the whole garrison, regulars, and volunteers, took part. In the afternoon a lacrosse match was played on the cricket ground. In the evening there was a display of fireworks on the side of the mountain for which the Corporation had voted $1,000. There was a large influx of visitors from the country, and the celebration was pronounced to have been, on the whole, satisfactory.

Cobourg Harbor.

In an official report to the United States Department of Commerce, Consul Chester W. Martin, stationed at Toronto, mentions Rochester and Cobourg, Ontario, as the only open winter ports on Lake Ontario, and says that Cobourg has the only fresh water all-the-year-open harbor in all Canada. Reference is made especially to the running of two car ferries between Cobourg and Rochester, each of which carries thirty loaded coal cars and 1,000 passengers conveniently, if necessary. He declares that while the distance from Cobourg to a point two miles up the Genesee River is fifty-seven miles, the run from dock to dock is made in four hours.

STOUT STYLES.

What Some Women Look Best In Just Now.

The outlook is not nearly so dark for the stout woman as it used to be. A great many kind souls in the world of manufacturers, tailors and designers seem to have taken pity on her, with the result that there are almost as many attractive styles for her now as there are for her slimmer sisters. At the summer fashion promenade in a prominent shop there were two models exploiting styles for stout women, and no thin woman viewing the fashion show dared to smile at the large ladies promenading up and down among the lissome and wand like creatures on whom Paris clothes were so truly Parisian, for very compassion of the appalled faces above comfortable double chins, the faces of women who perhaps for the first time saw themselves as others see them. No stout woman dreams how she actually looks, and it is rather an unpleasant shock to find how very stout some other woman appears in the gown she has her eye on. Stout women look over the fashion magazines and imagine themselves in a fancied costume, and they never imagine themselves quite as stout as their dressmakers know they are. Perhaps they are happier, not knowing—at any rate one feels sure that after seeing the gown of their dreams on another figure of equal or superior avoirdupois they will pass up the model in favor of something else to which their fancy may still cling with dreams.

There are several things, however, that the stout woman has learned—not to select models of stiff, glistening fabric, not to choose overtrimmed bodice or skirts with ruffles. Draperies are the things for the stout figure, soft draperies that fall in long lines. Chiffon is an ideal fabric and crepe de chine with its clinging texture and richness without the luster of satin. Soutache braiding makes an admirable trimming when applied in long lines and panels; buttons also—when they are not too glittering. The stout woman has often a very pretty foot and ankle and should make the most of dainty footwear, for there are all the smart and attractive styles in buttoned boots and slippers, and in this field of raiment may she glean to heart's content.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Spendit, the well-known society leader, has applied for a divorce on the grounds of her husband's cruelty to her in telling her her waist is too small and the next day telling her, her waste is too large.

Mr. Spendit's defence is that his wife's waist is so small that she had not enough breath to push through the crowd to get one of the preserving pans which Paskin's Grocery is selling this week at such marvellously low prices.

Mr. Delaware, the famous potato grower, paid a visit to town this week for the purpose of obtaining a further supply of Paris Green at A. W. Paskin's store, as he says it is the best to be got and only costs 70c a lb.

Mrs. Goodun is giving a garden party on Monday at her cottage on the little lake, and has laid in an extra supply of the dainty marshmallow and Jam-Jam Cakes, which were so appreciated last time. All her friends were astonished when she told she only paid 20c a lb. for them at Paskin's, on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer. She hopes the girls won't make themselves ill by eating too many, and recommends the young men to bring a can of Health Salts which can be obtained at the same store for 12c.

Mrs. Justspliced says she is going to have some of Paskin's Cooked Meat for dinner on Sunday as that gives her more time to sit on Algy's knee.

Fruit Gems

Take one and a half cups flour, sifted with one and a half tablespoons of baking powder and pinch of salt. Rub in one tablespoon butter and one of lard, add cold water and roll out as one would for pies. Cut in rounds the size of a muffin tin (big enough to line the sides). Then take half an apple (peeled and cored) for each gem, cut up fine and put in the tin lined with paste, then put 7 or 8 raisins, two tablespoons sugar, and a little cinnamon sprinkled on top. Then add two tablespoons of cold water to each gem. Bake until brown. When done make a syrup of brown sugar and water, and pour over gems. This recipe makes 12 gems.

Nice Pot Roast

Lay a round of beef in a deep pot, add a cup of boiling water and 2 slices of onion. Cover closely, and for every pound of meat cook ten minutes, then transfer to a dripping pan, rub with butter, dredge with flour and brown in a hot oven. Strain and cool the gravy left in the pot and after removing the fat put in a saucepan, seasoned with salt, pepper and a little kitchen bouquet. Thicken with browned flour and butter, boil up once and serve poured around the meat.

Two eggs beaten very light, one cup sugar, one tablespoon melted butter, half cup milk, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon cream of tartar, half teaspoon soda level. Sift flour, soda, cream of tartar together; add last. Bake in two tins. Fillings: One cup of sugar mixed with two tablespoons of flour, grated rind and juice of one lemon, one egg beaten light, one cup of hot water. Cook until thick. When cold spread between two cakes.

CAN YOUR HENS FOR WINTER USE

"Canned chicken" may be made at home in your own kitchen out of the old hens that ought to be killed anyway.

The method of operation for what is known as "Straight Pack" by the trade, is very simple and is given in detail as follows by Dr. Robert Barnes, chief of the meat and canned foods division, Health of Animals Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Clean and cut up the chicken.

Sort out the fleshy portions, such as the legs, thighs and breast.

Break off the protruding portions of the bones in each piece.

Pack these fleshy portions in a gem jar or other container as closely as possible.

Add salt and pepper(about a teaspoonful of salt and ⅛ teaspoonful of pepper).

Fill to within three-quarters of an inch of overflowing with the liquid that comes from the balance of the chicken, process for preparing which is given below.

Place in boiler or other vessel containing warm water and gradually bring to a boil.

For pint jars boil 2¼ hours.

For quart jars boil 3½ hours.

For the balance of the chicken, place in kettle and boil till the meat will strip free from the bones.

Strip off all meat and pack in jar.

Pour thereon the balance of the liquid in the kettle that has not been used in the first jar. If there is not enough liquid to fill the second jar, add water. Place in boiler as above, and boil as follows:

For pint jars, 1¾ hours.

For quarts, 2¼ hours.

If desired, the whole of the chicken may be prepared the same as the last part.

In all cases take care not to expose the gem jars to a sudden change of temperature.

Also, after the jars have cooled off examine the tops to see that the covers are airtight.

During the cooking of the product place the glass tops on the sealers but do not fasten them. Any steam or gas which may be generated will escape. As soon, however, as the process is finished, fasten the tops securely.

While describing the method of canning, something should be said about the poultry to be canned.

What is preferred are good plump fowls, with a fair proportion of chickens, the bones of the latter giving a firmer jelly and lessening the danger of a soupy or slushy product. As a precaution against this condition, where the pack is straight fowl, gelatine may be, and often is, used.

So much has been said and written about the proper methods of starving, bleeding and plucking poultry for market, that it is useless to go over them again. One can only emphasize the necessity of exactness in carrying out the accepted principles in connection with these points, which are just as applicable to poultry to be canned as they are to those intended for the market.

There is another point which is important, although possibly its carrying out may detract from the appearance and affect he sale to an inexperienced buyer, namely, that all poultry intended for food, canned or otherwise, after being properly starved, bled and plucked, should be left undrawn and kept in a suitable temperature for a day or two in order that the chemical changes which follow the killing of the bird may have an opportunity to take place.

English Rissoles

Chop cold meat, beef or whatever you have, fine. Mix it with stock made by dissolving one-half teaspoon of beef extract in one-half cup of hot water, season and add diced carrots or a few peas. Add one-half cup of fine, dried bread crumbs to a cupful of meat. Add a raw egg, mix well, form into rolls. Dip in flour, place in a wire basket and fry in deep, pure leaf lard. To serve, place on platter around a mound of French fried potatoes and garnish with cress.

Caramel Filling

Two cups of brown sugar, one-half cup of cream or rich milk, two teaspoonsful butter, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Boil ingredients together, stirring constantly until the mass forms a soft ball in cold water. Take from stove and beat until thick enough to spread. Add flavoring just before spreading on the cake.

Endive and Escarole

Endive is a good food. When well blanched it is most agreeable. Blanching removes the bitter dandelion flavor. There are self blanching kinds that head like cabbages. The broad leaved kinds are those which are called escarole.

Bean Soup

Mash a cup of cooked beans, add a teaspoon of chopped onion, half a teaspoon of celery salt and three cups of water. Let come to a hard boil and, just before serving add a teaspoon of lemon juice.

All household pans should be kept on shelves made of strips of wood, so that plenty of air can get to them. This keeps them sweet and fresh for use.

Don't slam the oven door after cakes have once started to rise. A rush of cool air will cause them to sink and make the mixture heavy.

Caramel Rice Pudding

Two egg yolks, 2 cupfuls cooked rice, salt, 1 cupful dark brown sugar, 1 1-3 cupsful milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat the egg yolks, add salt, milk, rice, brown sugar and vanilla. Mix well, turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve cold with whipped cream or fruit sauce.

Flemish Liver

Cut the liver in pieces about two inches square, cover with boiling water and let stand ten minutes. Drain, add one tablespoon of butter, three tablespoons of boiling water, a teaspoon of chili sauce, a pinch of mustard, and cover. Boil half an hour and pour over pieces of toast cut with a large biscuit cutter.

The Cook Book

Cover the cook book with white table oilcloth, sewing it in place. It can be washed clean as often as it becomes smudgy from handling with sticky fingers. The oilcloth also makes an excellent covering for school books.

Lemons Keep in Water

Lemons may be kept a long time without becoming dry if put into a jar of water with a lid. Change the water once a week if the lemons are to be kept long. When used they will be found quite as firm and juicy as when fresh.

Chicken a la King

This is a tempting dish and comes to your table from the famous Waldorf Astoria hotel. Take the breast of a boiled chicken and cut it into small pieces. Place it in a saucepan together with green peppers, cut into dice, which have been cooked in butter. To this add double cream, salt and pepper to taste, and chopped truffle. Cook for five minutes. Then add the yolks of two eggs, a little butter and a little finely chopped tarragon.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Icing for Chocolate Cake.

One quarter cake unsweetened sugar, one half cupful sweet milk, chocolate, grated; one cupful brown Cook till thick.

Rhubarb Pickle.

One quart rhubarb, one quart chopped onions; one quart vinegar one and-a-half pounds brown sugar, one small teaspoon salt, one teaspoon each of ginger, allspice, cinnamon and cloves, and a pinch of red pepper. Mix and boil slowly for three or four hours.

Rhubarb Catsup.

Four pounds rhubarb, two pounds brown sugar, one and-a-quarter cups vinegar, one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves, one teaspoon each of salt and pepper. A little onion improves the flavor. Stew in the usual way, and bottle when thick.

Rice Delight.

Boil rice as usual for plain boiled rice and shake dry. For the amount obtained by cooking one and a half cups of washed rice, allow one can of tomato soup (the tomato puree is best) and one cup of grated cheese. Cook in a double boiler until the puree is hot, or pour into a buttered baking dish and cover the top with cracker crumbs; dot over with small pieces of butter and bake until the crust is well browned and the juice is bubbing.

Without Sugar.

It may be objected that fruit preserved in plain water will need sugar when it is used some months hence. This is a fact, but there is a possibility that sugar may be less expensive then. Also, the large quantities necessary for preserving, are not needed at one time, and this makes less drain on the housekeeper's purse.

Meatless Days.

Don't cook your vegetables in water, steam them. This will prevent the waste of thrown away "vegetable soup" which occurs when the water in which vegetables have been cooked is emptied.

Don't throw away bread. Make something out of the stale bread Know what you want when you go to the butcher shop. Also, learn the different cuts of meat, their food and money values. Don't leave the trimmings (fat and bones) at market, for they are usable in soups.

Have one meatless day a weak and conserve on meat generally. Meat stews with vegetables, meat pies meat with rice and macaroni are ways of using meat left over to the best advantage. Don't cook with the gas higher than necessary.

Drink milk; it is cheaper than it seems. It forms a meal in itself.

VARIOUS SALADS

Dishes which Are Pleasing to the Appetite

Artichoke Salad

Peel and boil the artichokes in cold water with a tablespoon of vinegar. When cold cut in strips and pour over a French dressing.

Tomato and Egg

Dip two or three tomatoes into boiling water. Peel and slice them, and lay them in the salad bowl; cover with the crisp leaves of a young round lettuce. Sprinkle with finely-chopped spring onions and small radishes. Beat the yolk of an egg, adding two tablespoonsful of salad oil drop by drop, beating all the time. When all the oil is used up and the mixture thick and creamy add half a saltspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, and two teaspoonsful of vinegar. Pour over the salad, mix well, and serve at once.

Beetroot and Bean

For a delicious salad, peel some cooked beetroots and cut them up into round slices. Sprinkle these with olive oil, a little vinegar, a little salt and white pepper. Place them on the dish on which they are to be served, cover with hard-boiled eggs, which are sliced and seasoned in the same way as the beetroot; lay on this some long trips of cooked string beans; seasoned with a little olive oil; place round the base of the dish alternate slices of beetroot and hard-boiled eggs, seasoned with a little olive oil and tarragon vinegar, and serve.

Egg

Cut hard boiled eggs in quarters and serve on crisp lettuce with a boiled dressing. For the dressing make a mixture of the following in order: Tablespoon of sugar, same of salad oil, teaspoon of dry mustard and the same of cornstarch. Add salt and pepper and stir until smooth. Add three fourths of a cup of salad oil, one-third of a cup of tarragon vinegar and the beaten yolks of three eggs. Boil until thick, stirring all the time.

Lima Bean

Chill two cups of cooked beans, add a tablespoon of prepared horseradish and the seasoning. Serve on lettuce with a French dressing.

SAVING MONEY ON FATS FOR KITCHEN

Vegetable Fats Often Cheaper Than Animal Fats—How to Lessen the Butter Bill

The fats we most commonly use are either vegetable or animal in origin. In the vegetable fats we have olive oil, cottonseed oil, the oils from various nuts like the peanut and several commercial preparations like lard in appearance, but which are directly vegetable in origin. Of the animal fats, butter comes first, then lard, "drippings," and the much discussed product, oleomargarine. In no one place in the kitchen is there such a chance to economize as in careful handling of this and frying materials.

"Render" the Left-overs

The housewife who attempts to use all print butter in the cooking will run up a big bill and will not always give her family healthful foods. Many modern housekeepers seem too lazy to "render" various small quantities of fat and a shameful waste goes on of beef suet, pork trimmings thrown into the garbage. A better way to render small quantities of fat than the usual frying pan method is to put the kettle in a slow oven, which will render it just as perfectly without as much odor or unpleasantness. A good plan is to have four or five separate small cups to jars for each kind of fat to save and add to them whatever meat fats are left over.

Use Cottonseed Oil

Few housewives seem to like frying in a liquid fat like olive or cottonseed oil. But a good cottonseed oil or peanut oil makes the best of frying materials, and one generally far less expensive than lard or butter. Indeed, the dislike for a high grade of cottonseed oil must be overcome. It is not olive oil, but it is in itself a good oil and one which can find many uses in the kitchen.

Similarly many of the commercial vegetable products are more wholesome than lard and sell also at a lower price. It is only necessary for the housewife to look around a bit and find several good vegetable and animal oils and fats, which she generally overlooks. Because the ody demands more fat in winter does not mean the exclusive use of butter. It means saving fatty portions of meat, preserving themby useful rendering, and a wider use of many of the lesser known vegetable and nut oils.

DO YOU KNOW THIS?

A few drops of ammonia in a cup of warm water, applied carefully, will remove spots from paintings and chromos.

To remove fruit stains from the hands wash in clear water, dry slightly and then hold them over a lighted match.

After having the hands in soapsuds wash them in vinegar to make them soft and white and prevent their chapping.

To keep nickel and silver ornaments bright rub them with a woollen cloth saturated with spirits of ammonia.

If the color has been taken out of silk by fruit stains, a little ammonia will usually restore it.

KEEPING WELL GROOMED

Carelessness Spoils All Chances of Being Beautiful

Grooming, they say, counts for more than beauty to-day. Which is only partially true. Many a homely woman has saved her reputation for looks by appearing only when perfectly dressed—her hair beautifully coiffed, each strand just as it should be, her hat at the latest angle, her suit without a wrinkle, her gloves and boots perfect—and she has passed for a pretty woman. Beauty in out-of-date or soiled clothes has less chance than plainness well furnished.

There are few hopelessly plain women. Most are bad looking only because they're careless. It is within every woman's power to possess a good complexion, to arrange her hair to make it look thick, even if it isn't, to stand well, sit gracefully, walk easily. Don't "fall into your clothes." It's worth an extra five minutes to be sure you have fixed your blouse and fastened your skirt so they meet snugly and neatly, so your tie is well arranged and your hair done nicely.

A cheval glass is invaluable, it will show you where your dress does not hang right, will give you an impartial look at yourself from top to toe. And you should not be content with even a front view; you should take your hand mirror and revolve before the glass, studying yourself from all sides. And when you are sure you are as prettily dressed as possible, you are ready to meet your fellow-citizens and to be sure of praise instead of criticism.

To Improve Your Health

Take an early morning walk and breathe deeply. Deep breathing is naturally an accompaniment to walking. So if you walk well you will also breathe well. In walking hold the chest high and head erect, not tipped back or inclined forward. Take a firm light stride. The body should be balanced on the hips without swaying. Keep the mouth closed and breathe through the nose.

Red Apple Salad

Make apple cups of bright red apples containing a little lemon juice until time to fill them. Mix some of the apple pulp with celery, grapefruit carpels and mayonnaise dressing, and fill the apples. Garnish with Maraschino cherries that have been drained and stuffed with blanched hazelnuts. Serve on lettuce leaves with cream cheese mixed with tomato ketchup.

THIS WAR TO END WAR FOREVER

ENTENTE TROOPS MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS ON BELGIAN FRONT

All Positions in France Lost to Germans in Battle Thursday Have Been Recaptured by British--St. Julien and Six Thousand Prisoners Taken.

Paris, July 4. — All positions east of Monchy Les Preux, on the Arras battle front in France, which were captured by the Germans on Thursday night, have been retaken by the British, according to an official statement issued today by the war office. On the Belgian front, where the French and British launched their offensive on Tuesday morning, the Entente Allied troops made further progress east of Kortekeer Caboret.

ST. JULIEN AGAIN TAKEN.

London, August 4.—The British troops under Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, have re-established themselves in the town of St. Julien, the place in which the Canadians "saved the situation" in the second battle of Ypres in April, 1915. Announcement to this effect was made in the British official statement. The British forces had captured St. Julien, together with nine other villages, on Tuesday, but were forced to retire on Wednesday. Last night's report from British headquarters in France says "Haig's men have again established themselves in St. Julien."

The report is in the following terms:

"South of Hollebeke, between Ypres and Warneton, the British made some progress.

"East of Monchy Les Preux the Germans have been driven from nearly all the ground they captured Thursday night.

"On Tuesday, the statement says, the Anglo-French troops captured 6,122 prisoners." The statement reads:

"In the course of the day our troops again established themselves in St. Julien. North of the Ypres-Roulers railway bodies of German infantry massing for a further counter-attack were broken up by the fire of our artillery and the enemy was unable to develop his attack. We gained ground during the night to the south of Hollebeke.

"East of Monchy Les Preux the enemy has been driven from nearly the whole of the ground gained by him in last night's attack. Hostile raiding parties were repulsed during the night northeast of Gouzeaucourt and southwest of Fontaine les Croisilles. Parties of our troops successfully raided the enemy's trenches south of Lombaertzyde.

"The number of German troops captured by the Allies in the operations on Tuesday was 6,122, including 132 officers."

PUPIL AT ROCKCROFT SCHOOL WINS THE BURNHAM WATCH

Miss Veona Pluard Took Highest Stand of Any Candidate From Harvey Who Wrote at Entrance Examination — Prize Was Presented Last Night.

Rockcroft, nine miles north of Buckhorn, consists of a school and farm house. The neighbors and pupils attending the school have anywhere from one to five miles to walk to reach it. This part of Harvey recently came out of the wilderness, and the settler's log cabin in the clearing is not yet a thing of the past.

When Mr. Burnham, Judge Huycke, G. A. Gillespie and ex-Mayor Buller pulled up at the school house they were very gratified to find a rapidly gathering crowd of parents, children and neighbors to lend congratulations. The hall was packed, and many stood outside, and the mosquitos were represented in large numbers.

The winner of the watch was Miss Veona Pluard, a very beautiful girl, who looks to be older than she is, and Inspector Broderick says she is remarkably clever and showed great proficiency. For this school to beat all the schools in the more settled parts of Harvey is quite an achievement in itself, and a large deputation from Peterboro impressed upon the audience this fact, and that it was only too pleased to come to do honor where it was so well earned.

Mr. Burnham departed from his usual course, and after presenting the watch amid tremendous applause he took a half hour to discourse on the war at the front as he had seen it.

Judge Huycke delivered a long and most admirable address on the present tendency of the people to disregard the ordinary comfort and duties of home life in favor of artificial means of entertainment. It is for this reason that the best informed most frequently come from the most remote districts.

Mr. Gillespie was exceedingly happy in his remarks and poked fun at the previous speakers. He opened the bidding at $5.00 on the Red Cross Quilt Quilt which is to be auctioned at Buckhorn next week.

Ex-Mayor Buller entertained the audience with reminiscences of his early visits to Harvey in search of wood, cattle and horses, and he closed by giving some advice to the pupils.

The night being moonlight and cool and the school built on the edge of great forests, lakes and streams, the scene was such as to recall some of the writings of the poets and novelists.

This is the last of the rural presentations, Mr. Burnham being unable to go to Furnace Falls owing to having to go to Ottawa. He has sent Miss Switzers watch to the officials and it will be presented at the first opportunity.

This school is small and the teacher feels proud of having beat out the larger ones in Galway, and in this way is not outside the Harvey conditions. The competition this year was keener and more eager than ever. The results have been better, and the spirit shown by all all the competitors, both successful and unsuccessful has won admiration. Congratulations and not envy have been the order of the day.

THREE YEARS OF WAR.

The third anniversary of the declaration of war will be observed in Peterborough tomorrow evening by a monster gathering of the citizens in Victoria Park.

Addresses will be delivered by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Judge Huycke, J. H. Burnham, M.P., and G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A.

Resolutions in accord with the proclamation of the Governor-General and the Lieutenant-Governor will be passed.

The Temple Band will be in attendance and will head the parade of the veterans from the Barrie Building to the park.

CURATE'S BODY FOUND IN LAKE BY HIS FRIENDS

HAD BEEN MISSING TWO DAYS FROM SUMMER HOME.

Orillia, Aug. 4.—The body of Rev. Mr. Andrews, who has been missing since Wednesday morning, was found in the Lake yesterday. Deceased was a recent graduate of Wycliffe College, and curate of Church of the Messiah, Toronto. He came to Orillia Tuesday afternoon and was stopping with Mrs. (Rev.) S. A. S. Selwyn, of Toronto, who is occupying a cottage on the lake shore, near Heward's Point. Mr. Andrews left the cottage about ten o'clock Wednesday morning, in his bathing suit, and went out on the lake in a boat. It is presumed that he jumped into the lake from the boat, and that the boat drifted away from him and in endeavoring to reach it he was drowned. The boat was found yesterday. Messrs. C. H. McAlary and Herb Smith, who have been searching the lake for two days found the body at 3 o'clock Friday. Deceased was twenty-eight years of age. So far as known he had no relatives in Canada; his mother lives in England.
